somewhat both in vigor and volume; yet, with a fair balance found in receipts so adjusted as to prevent an annoying accumulation, receivers managed to secure the fair steadiness to which allusion has just been made. In fact, taken altogether, there appears to have prevailed a happily conservative spirit, which, if a little disappointing to the extremists on both sides, has proven successful in keeping the market in healthy condition and worked another week's supply into the channels of consumption. We notice continued differences of opinion regarding the probabilities of demand during balance of the season where operators are willing to express themselves at all, but the majority rather incline to a sort of non-committal view for the present, as though they had not as yet reached any fixed conclusion. Of course, a great many brick will be wanted, but whether it is to be a full, free call upon which the selling side can command an advantage is evidently not as yet satisfactorily demonstrated. From all accounts, however, it would appear that manufacturers have little if any fear regarding the future and are keeping the production pushed to its utmost capacity with every reason to believe that if the weather holds there will be an output sufficient to neutralize the midsummer loss. Pales are holding their own very well in the general run of trade and keeping a steady line of value throughout.

LATH.—It has been a quiet week. There were some fresh arrivals, but not many of them, yet as the demand proved small and somewhat indifferent the market got along very well with the stock available, and buyers found no necessity for increasing their bids. About $2.00 or possibly $2.05 has obtained, the goods changing hands, and on that basis the market looks steady at the present writing. There seems to be some reason, too, in the suggestion that the natural inclination of value would now be rather upish. If accounts at hand do not misrepresent matters, the quantity afloat and loading is very small, and it is a fair conclusion that at ruling price manufacturers will refuse further shipments except in odd quantities, and the calculation of receivers is that by the time dealers want more stock there will be only a moderate amount available.

LIME.—Merely for the sake of keeping up the weekly record, the market may be noted as retaining the old uniform features. The demand has probably been a trifle slower because many dealers are fairly well stocked, but the offering has also fallen away from coastwise arrivals, and the market balanced itself nicely all around.

LUMBER.—Much the former hue of report may be heard regarding the general distributive trade. Some of the lower and central city yards are without more than an average run of business, but, up town, in the annex, and the surrounding suburbs, dealers find an increasing tendency, with the demand of a sufficiently varied character to require a proportion of all staple qualities. Toward bulk lots the inquiry turns fairly also, and while the retention of a cautious and withal somewhat independent spirit makes buyers at times a little difficult to manage, there is here and there evidence that they commence to appreciate the season as creeping along toward a close, and that it is probably just as well to make preliminary moves at least, looking to an accumulation against winter wants. Over most leading woods steady rates are maintained.

Eastern Spruce is reported upon in a somewhat irregular manner at times, and now and then the statement of operators seem to be a little conflicting; yet, investigation generally shows that few actual changes are taking place on the general market. The size of the cargo sometimes makes quite a fractional difference in cost, as the few dealers, who are able to tackle the big loads, know their advantage, and very naturally make it useful when they can. Then, of course, there is the chances of undesirable schedules on random offerings and now and then a want of that is shown by hasty salesmen that leads to irregularity. Taken all in all, however, the position is a fair one, and considering the quantity of stuff that may be considered as of a competitive nature now going into consumption, Spruce holds its place in the ranks in excellent form. At the close the latest advices from Eastward are strong. At some ports comparatively low transportation rates fail to get cargoes because there is no lumber ready to ship, while at points where there is a little stock offering vessels are scarce and freights tend upward with $3.00 asked at Bangor. The usual fall drought story has also been introduced, and while available logs are plenty enough the mills commence to feel the want of water as a motive power.

Piling remains on a pretty good balance, and would probably weaken a little on an effort to quicken business, and at once stiffen in tone in response to any natural increase of demand. Supplies here are pretty well in hand and the principal receivers say they expect nothing to come forward that will cause them any trouble.

Hemlock is generally quoted "at about former figures," which means probably $50@75c. difference in views over what appears to be just the same kind of stock. The high-priced operators will not positively assert that they have a vastly superior article, but do claim that customers after shopping around come back to them and pay their figures, while on the other hand the opinion is expressed, that former extreme payments are unnecessary unless the buyer obtains favors that do not appear upon the surface. Quotations are nominally as last given.

White Pine is reported upon in either a deprecating or cheerful tone according to stock sellers are trying to place, and in that respect shows about former general features. Uppers in fact meet with pretty much the same indifferent attention they have all the season, while for the balance of stock there is some demand with of late an increasing tendency on anything especially desirable in the way of box or shippers. The offering from well-known agents as a rule gets the most favor as dealers prefer giving their orders to those whose experience has taught them that delivery exactly according to agreement will be required, and this makes matters a little disagreeable at times to salesmen undergoing their novitiate. Values as a rule remain quite steady.

Yellow Pine when offered by those who are considered outsiders sometimes shows a little irregularity, but the combinations of manufacturers and local operators continue to work in harmony and preserve a uniform market. There is no great necessity for drumming trade as that keeps up naturally to good proportions, but the effect of the co-operation among sellers is to prevent any undue slaughter on prices and preserve a living profit. Many of the mills contributive to this market are said to have a good line of orders on their books.

Carolina Pine retains the favor necessary to admit of placing most of the production, and that, of course, is a healthy condition over which sellers feel very much pleased. The outlet, however, is not widening to any extent at the moment, and some consumers are known to be sticking to it on the score of cost alone, which, as a rule, is its principal basis of popularity.

Hardwoods move along in about the former channel and not much can be drawn out in the way of news from those operators whose statements can be accepted as reliable. Probably the actual consumption at the moment is rather fuller, especially for house trim, but that has about all been discounted and does not reflect itself to any extent upon crude material. Offerings have been a trifle annoying at times, especially in the way of consignments, yet there was rarely a serious over-supply, and on attractive stock at least prices rule steady.

Shingles are generally so situated as to be fairly controlled, and owners, in consequence, abstain from any open demonstration of anxiety to push their goods. Export orders continue to afford some assistance in keeping up the run of business, and in a spasmodic sort of way buyers on home account hand in some fair orders.

The exports of lumber, exclusive of hardwoods, from the port of New York during the month of August were as follows:

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Timberman reviews the Chicago wholesale market as follow:

There was a slight change in the aspect of affairs on the cargo market this week, as contrasted with that of the previous week. The receipts were larger and buyers seemed larger hearted, although no one exhibited real symptoms of enlargement of the heart; but the buying was quicker, sales were easier effected, and the docks were cleared to the satisfaction of the commission men.

The arrivals did not vary as to quality so much as they did in quantity, compared with the previous week, although there was some good inch lumber on the market and a number of sales were effected at prices ranging from $14 to $16 a thousand, which was a very encouraging feature of the transactions.

Some good thick selects were in fair request, and were not allowed to hang around the cargo dock very long.

Fine stuff prices did not get very far away from the bottom figure of the summer—$9—although the more desirable lots were sold at $9.35. The operators take this as an indication that very few sales will be made on a basis of $9 during the coming month, and that values will shortly increase.

Taken all in all the market is in a notably better condition than a week ago, the bottom has been reached on everything, and the indications now are that with a quicker movement at the yards and the tendency to enhance values there, that the manufacturer may be able to have a more satisfactory business during the remaining months of the fall season.

It is always the case with our markets here that when the dealers have purchased the bulk of their season's supply they are ready to join hands with the original holders in the effort to stiffen up the market.

And also says that the tendency of the hardwood trade is still toward a better and more prosperous business this fall, and in some localities quite a decided picking up is reported, as to the volume of business done. Prices are held down to close margins, and this is likely to be the case for some time to come. Competition is as brisk in this branch of the lumber trade as in any other, and one might almost say that sellers are as numerous as buyers.

No one is looking after any big bills, but the small orders count up very well, and we doubt not that the business this year will compare favorably with that of last.

The Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

While there has been a notable increase of demand recently, it has not progressed far enough to strengthen prices. Dealers say that there is so much lumber in sight at the mill, and in the yards that there is little show for a stiffening of prices. Nearly all the yards lack room to receive. In the first flush of the fall trade dealers will be more anxious to get rid of lumber than to realize firm prices. It is hence likely that weakness will prevail for several weeks.

Men who make frequent visits to mill points around the lakes speak of the large amounts of unsold lumber that they find at nearly all of them. The market has been dull throughout the summer, and the result has been accumulations at the mills. Some dealers are inclined to stock up lightly this fall. They say that with such a surplus of white pine in sight, and a constantly increasing competition of yellow pine, they see no speculation in carrying big stocks over the winter. They argue that the manufacturer is the man to carry lumber and pay interest on its value this year. In fact it is beginning to dawn on the minds of dealers that the policy of carrying such heavy stocks as heretofore may as well be abandoned. They hold that there is plenty of lumber on all hands, and will be for years, and there can be little speculation in massing it for the process of drying. The lumber can be seasoned at the mill as well as in the yard, and handled quickly, much of it without piling, on a small margin for profit. While this sort of business may not yield the occasional large returns that were once realized, it will insure the dealer against serious loss. His business will be safe, if not largely profitable. Yet heavy concerns, that must bore with a big auger or not make holes at all, will continue to mass stocks. With them such a course is necessary, for constantly heavy shipments cannot be made without ample supplies. But the question arises, is there any longer a profitable place for the larger class of wholesale yards?

CANADA.

A number of leading lumber concerns, at Ottawa, it is said, are sending men into the woods with a view to pushing forward work earlier than last year. An increase in the rate of wages is anticipated, and men are not finding any difficulty in securing engagements for the winter's work.

In Quebec, according to the Chronicle, the timber market seems very quiet, and it is difficult to procure the prices of some pine rafts now being delivered on contracts previously made. Two rafts have changed hands lately—Square, about 49 feet, with some waney, 19-inch, at 35c.; red pine at 22c. One raft of small, white pine at 23c. and red at 17c. Choice Michigan waney, 19 to 20-inch, has been placed at 45c.

ENGLAND.

The Timber Trades Journal as follows:

LONDON.

American Black Walnut.—Logs of large sizes and prime quality are being inquired for, and will realize high prices, but there does not seem to be much about answering to this description. Of late a large proportion of the arrivals has been of extremely poor character, very many small logs being so rough, wild-grown, and sappy, that it is hard to say for what purpose they can be used, and should shippers continue to send forward such rubbish, we quite expect that as stocks accumulate it will soon become altogether unsalable. Lumber of good quality is moving off pretty freely, but poor stuff is dull of sale. Of this latter description there is a considerable amount of stock here.

American Whitewood.—A fair amount of business is being done in this, but the better class stuff is that which attracts most attention, and is relatively stronger in price. Logs are not often inquired for.

American Oak.—Stocks are now within more moderate compass. Prices continue firm, and we think generally the market has a more cheerful tone.

American Satin Walnut.—Lately there have been several fresh arrivals of well-squared, attractive looking logs, for which, we understand, there have already been numerous inquiries. We believe we are right in stating that some business by private contract has been done during the week. Except for better class stuff, we do not hear that there is much inquiry.

NAILS.—From all regular outlets comes a good steady demand, and while it is accompanied by a cautious and somewhat independent spirit, buyers are submissive to former rates without a contest. Offerings are kept in hand, and now and then manufacturers talk about a possible scarcity. We quote at $1.85@1.90 per keg for car lots, and $1.95@2.00 per keg for parcels from store.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Business seems to be gradually increasing, and reports in most cases are cheerful over the situation for all the leading staple descriptions of stock. Local consumption is commencing to be felt, and the evidences of pretty full country wants multiply. Prices have undergone no quotable change, but in some instances thought to be hardening in response to the improved business. Linseed Oil sells fairly and rules steady at 57@58c. for Western and 60@61c. for City. Spirits Turpentine remains at last quoted rates and steady, but the general movement of stock is of very limited proportions. We quote at 44@44½c. per gallon, according to quantity, delivery, etc.

PLASTER PARIS.—The following dispatch received from Washington will interest some of our readers: "The Treasury Department has ruled that mouldings made of plaster of paris to which is added a small quantity of flax as a strengthening element, are liable to duty at 55 per cent ad valorem under the provision for earthen, stone and crockery ware, white, glazed, or edged, composed of earthy or mineral substances. The importers, Messrs. W. W. Thomas & Co., of New York, claimed that the mouldings were not ware in any sense of that term, and that they were properly dutiable at 20 per cent as unenumerated manufactured articles. The Department, however, maintains that the goods are substantially of the same character as the plaster of paris images, moulds, etc., which are held to be dutiable at 55 per cent, and that the classification made by the Collector of New York was the correct one."

TAR AND PITCH.—Beyond some fluctuation of a minor character cost has remained about as before. Demand a trifle fuller, but met without difficulty apparently from the available supplies. We quote Pitch at $1.40@1.50 per bbl.; Tar at $2.40@2.60, according to quantity, quality and delivery.

*Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

DEAR SIR:—The lien filed on my premises on the north side of 98th street, 175 feet east of 3d avenue, by William Ritterbush for $800, on September 4, 1889, is an unjust claim. Mr Ritterbush contracted to do the painting work in my four houses for $1,200, but failed entirely to do the work or to employ sufficient labor, and the work is not yet completed—one house only being partly done and the other three houses not even commenced—and yet Mr Ritterbush claims the full amount of his contract. I will give him a full opportunity to prove his claim before the Court at a very early date. W. J. GESSNER, Builder.

SEPTEMBER 14, 1889.

No. 1,122

The general situation of business throughout the country has changed but slightly during the past week. Practically a very large corn crop is assured, although several States which had a yield above the average last season show a falling off this year. Our wheat crop is also large, but this is offset to a certain degree by the better prospects abroad of an increased yield. France, for instance, will have a crop exceeding that of last year by at least 20 per cent. Even this, however, will bring her total yield to but 50 per cent. of her full crop. The average yield since 1885 has been about 300,000,000 bushels, while this year it will be rather more. England, also, has an abundant yield, and lately has had fine weather for harvest operations. The coming Australian crop bids fair to be a good one, while the estimate of the Russian supply has increased 10 per cent., and it looks all around as though the good foreign market which the speculators promise us for our surplus wheat is not likely to crystallize. Certainly, if Europe buys it this year it will not be at high prices, and it is unlikely that England will be in the market of the world for more than 140 to 150 million of bushels. Continued ease in money is not entirely assured, and there is no doubt but that the Bank of England is using extraordinary means not only to keep its present stock of the precious metals, but to increase it as much as possible. France will not part with any gold except under stress, as she has acquired it recently at no little sacrifice. French investors have sold in this market within the last few months New York Central stock, which has stood since 1880 in the name of one banking house which largely represents French interests. While the stock market is sure to show much higher prices between this and next spring, it seems unlikely to have any immediate large advance, as good crop prospects have been largely discounted, and the fears of disturbance of money rates are not entirely unwarranted.

Chauncey M. Depew returned this week from Europe, and the first thing he talked to us about (of course, after stating, as he always does on such occasions, that his railroad has nothing to learn from the rest of the world), was what we shall have to do to beat the Frenchman's Exposition. He is afflicted, too, with the P. T. Barnum, "biggest-show-on-earth" idea of a World's Fair, and there is no disguising the fact that this idea is the dominant one in the minds of all but a very few. The public want a big show; a wilderness of huge buildings filled with a chaotic display of merchandise—soda-water fountains, sauces, bottles of beer, patent medicines, inks, advertising signs and stuff of that kind—of no interest to anyone, and serving merely to weary the visitor and distract his attention, by confusing it, from inventions, machinery, processes and products worth inspecting carefully.

It does not seem that the public will be contented with an Exposition that is not in length and breadth and height bigger than the Frenchman's. Under these circumstances the Committee on Sites is wasting its time in considering Cedar Park, Washington Heights, or indeed any other sites but Van Courtlandt Park, Pelham Bay Park, and perhaps Inwood and Morningside and Riverside Parks. In these alone can the necessary area be obtained. It is to be hoped, however, that before the final arrangements are made for the Fair public opinion will change and demand that the Exposition be excellent rather than big. It is simply absurd for us to expect to rival the French Exposition in size as well as in quality. We have not the field to draw on that the managers of the Fair in the Champ de Mars had. Every country in Europe sent its finest products to Paris, and even American States, such as Bolivar and Mexico, spent something like a million dollars in constructing their own buildings on the grounds. European manufacturers will contribute in no such way to our Exposition. The distance alone is an obstacle; then their interests here are comparatively slight. The policy of the country is hostile to them in the extreme, and it would be simply money thrown away for manufacturers in scores of industries to send exhibits to this country where the tariff prevents them selling a single dollar's worth of goods. At the best our Exposition will be a continental affair in which other nations will figure in a small way. A few visitors may come to us from abroad, but the number will not be large. People who have intended visiting the country, or those who have interests here, may be induced by the Exposition to make the trip for the sake of seeing us in holiday time, but we shall have no such crowds of foreigners as flock to Paris and make the city for a time, like the Exposition, truly international. To attempt, under these circumstances, to "beat the Frenchman" on his own ground is folly. Let us try something else that will be better if possible—that will be so excellent, so productive of good that it will be the first of a series of Exhibitions of a new character, and not the last or one of the last of an old kind. Let us invent and not copy. Let us make our own model and not go to Paris for it. Mr. Depew might have told the public this to advantage.

It is plain that if New York is to have the World's Fair she will not obtain it by merely letting it be known that, like Barkis, she "is willin'." Chicago means to have the Exposition if push, enterprise, brag, and an energetic public-spiritedness, of which we seem to have little, can get it. A stout contest between the two cities is inevitable, and it is not improbable that while the rival dogs are fighting over the bone, Washington, like the raven in the story, will fly away with the prize. The fact is, Washington's chances of being the site of the World's Fair have not yet received the consideration they deserve. It is always wise to consider contingencies, and prepare for them. It is on the cards that we may not have the World's Fair; and if this should be the case, what are we going to do? If this city is not the site of the Exposition, it is very certain that the National capital will be. The opposition of Chicago, the wishes of a part of our people by no means inconsiderable, any mistakes we should make, political exigencies, etc., will all inure to the benefit of Washington. We can view this with a certain amount of satisfaction, for a great number of the visitors to the capital are sure to be visitors to this city also. While giving our full support to the national undertaking, we could have an Exposition of our own, which would amuse the tens of thousands who would under any circumstances visit this city, and attract thousands of others who did not intend to visit us. Instead of having a large Fair composed mainly of exhibits sent by manufacturers for the sake of the advertisement obtained, we might have something smaller and better. We might have an Exhibition of quality instead of one of quantity, and instead of grouping all the exhibits into one vast building we might have several in different parts of the city. The money collected might be spent in the erection of permanent structures. We might have a Naval Exhibition at the Battery, a Fishery Exhibition in Pelham Bay Park, an Industrial Exhibition in Central Park, and a Building and Sanitary Exhibition on the west side. These would be so many permanent attractions for the city, and would be much more pleasant to visit than one large building or a group of buildings in one spot.

So long as we tolerate the spoils system with its party service qualification for office we shall have to tolerate, at any rate for a season, men like Corporal Tanner. There are in the Federal service to-day thousands of officials in no wise more competent to fill the position they hold than the re-rating Corporal-at-Alms. It was his misfortune to be placed too near to the Treasury. The abuse which the newspapers have heaped on the man is unjust. He was put into the position he occupied, too notoriously for himself, as a reward for "services performed," and as an appointment d'estime to the soldier vote. The policy he carried out from the beginning was strictly the policy outlined—in political terms of course—in the Republican platform, and generally understood by a large number of interested voters as it was intended they should understand it. The Corporal has been forced to resign, not because he has done what was unexpected, but because the public has. Since his appointment Tanner has been the most active member of the Republican government in carrying out the Republican policy. For the rest we are very much where Mr. Cleveland left us. Nothing has been done about the tariff, the silver question, the internal revenue, the rehabilitation of our merchant navy, or the deposits of government money in national banks. Tanner alone set to work and reversed the Democratic policy as to pensions, and incidentally did something to decrease the surplus. Many will regret that he could not "hold the fort" longer, but party justice demands that "something equally good" should be given to him.

There are some figures given by Prof. Adams in his report that have attracted considerable attention. On the 136,883 miles of road for which he has returns, there were outstanding, June 30, 1888, $3,864,468,055 of stock, and $3,816,379,040 of bonds. Analysis shows that $2,374,200,906 of the stock—that is, 61.44 per cent. of the whole amount—received no return whatever, while there were also $827,554,319 of bonds (21.69 per cent.) on which nothing was paid. "In other words," says the Financial Chronicle, "out of an aggregate of 7,680 millions of stock and bonds, 3,201 millions had to go without any income at all. Yet some of our Western friends think that the railroad industry is thriving at the expense of other industries." Other financial papers take up the same line of comment, assuming that the above figures show that in spite of the opposition railroad companies have created, and the enormous profits their owners and projectors are said to have made in reality, they pay about as poorly as any industry in the country, and are very much abused by press, public and politicians. We would not dissent for a moment from the view that the railroads have much cause for complaint in the treatment they have received from the public, but that Prof. Adams' figures can be used to prove their innocence of the charges brought against them is not a view that will stand criticism.

The most obvious reflection suggested by the figures is this: "Why is it, if such a poor return is made from investments in American railway securities, that such large amounts of capital have been sunk in them. There is not, indeed, anything so very much out of the way in the proportion of bonded indebtedness which yields no income. The railroad industry differs from other industries in this, viz.: that if it fails to pay any return, even to those who have the first claim upon it, its property cannot be sold for other purposes, and its affairs closed up. Once a railroad always a railroad. Unwise or unfortunate ventures will be made in every business; but in other industries they are not made for all time. In manufacturing, for instance, if in reckoning the capital and the return thereon there should be included an estimate of all the concerns that had failed and gone out of business we very much doubt if the statistician would find that more than 80 per cent. had been able to pay the principal and interest of their debts. When, however, we come to the statement that more than 60 per cent. of the capital stock of railroad companies bear no return, the first impression is one of surprise that so much money was so badly invested. Indeed, it can be said confidently that if these figures represent truly the proportion of actually invested capital which bears no return to the sum total of actually invested capital in the industry, it would have been impossible in the past to raise the money to build our railroad system. As a matter of fact, we all know that a large proportion of these securities represented no investment at all, beyond, perhaps, the printing bills necessitated by their creation. Our railroads have a bonded indebtedness of about $28,000 per mile; and it is safe to say that in the majority of cases this covered the cost of construction, terminal facilities and rolling stock. The stock issues were marketed; but very little of the proceeds ever saw its way into the corporation's coffers. Professor Adams' figures betray only too clearly the enormous waste involved in the construction of our railway system.

The fire on the White Star liner Britannic again draws public attention on both sides of the Atlantic to the peril to which passengers are exposed by steamers carrying cotton as freight. The cases of fires that have occurred in positions where failure to extinguish them would in all probability have resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives could be enumerated, it might be said, by the dozen. Not long ago, it will be remembered, an Inman steamer was totally destroyed in mid-ocean by a fire which commenced in the cotton carried as freight, and it was only by extraordinary good fortune that the passengers were picked up by passing steamers after several days' hardship in the life-boats. The tide of travel across the Atlantic is increasing rapidly. Larger steamers than ever have been built recently, and a passenger list of 1,000 persons and more is now not uncommon. Legislative steps should be taken to prohibit the carrying of cotton as freight on passenger steamers, and our government should endeavor to obtain the co-operation of Great Britain for this reform. At any rate, it is quite within our power to protect passengers from this danger.

The Secretary of the Treasury has finally selected the Bowling Green site, which THE RECORD AND GUIDE has advocated from the first, as a site for the location for a new Custom House and an Appraiser's Warehouse under the Act of Congress which appropriated $2,000,000 for the purchase of land and $650,000 in addition for the erection of an Appraiser's Warehouse, but making no present provision for the erection of a Custom House building. The amount of money appropriated for the purchase or acquirement of land is not sufficient to obtain the entire three blocks known as the Bowling Green property, between Bowling Green, Whitehall and State streets, but is quite sufficient for so much of the land as is required for a site for the two buildings named. Congress will be duly asked to grant another appropriation of a million of dollars or so to take in the balance of the property, and thus provide a site for a new Sub-Treasury building and an Assay building, and thus group together all the Federal buildings in the city except the Post-office.

It is said that steps will be at once taken to try to purchase the desired portions at private sale; this failing, as it probably will, then condemnation proceedings will be entered upon. It is not as yet known what portions of the property will be taken first; but it is believed that the plotting of the ground for the buildings as arranged by Superintendent Fryer will be carried out in its entirety—that is, for the Appraiser's Warehouse to occupy the southerly portion, the Custom House to occupy the middle portion, and leaving the upper portion to be acquired in the future for occupancy by the Assay and Sub-Treasury buildings, the latter to face up Broadway. It is believed by those who have the matter in hand that two millions of dollars will acquire more than two-thirds of the entire property, as the northerly portion of the upper block, the frontage on the Bowling Green Park, is proportionately more valuable than any other. It may, however, be decided to take the extreme upper portion and the extreme lower portions first, leaving the middle portion to be acquired after an additional appropriation is made by Congress of a sufficient sum to purchase the whole. In the next Congress a bill will be introduced, not only for this purpose of obtaining government ownership of the entire three blocks, but also to authorize the erection of buildings whose total cost shall not exceed the estimated value of the Custom House, the Sub-Treasury and the Assay Office properties, now owned by the government, on Wall street, which properties shall be sold at public auction when the new buildings are ready for occupancy; thus, in effect only, asking the Treasury to bank awhile, as it is expected that the exceedingly valuable Wall street properties will sell for a sum equal to the cost of all the new buildings proposed to be erected on the Bowling Green site, but not including, however, the cost of the site itself.

It is with sincere regret that most New Yorkers will learn of the practical destruction of Coney Island as a watering place. This event it is true is not unexpected. It has been apparent for some years past that the time would soon come when the remains of the once magnificent beach would be washed away, and the sites of hotels and restaurants, where so much relief has been found from the extremes of New York climate, would either be washed by the sea or would degenerate into sandy wastes, safe to be ventured upon only at low tides. The advantage of Coney Island has been its accessibility and its variety of entertainment. Within three-quarters of an hour from many different points in the city it combined the noisy cheapness of Coney Island proper, where all sorts and conditions of men and things congregated to the exclusiveness of the upper part of Manhattan Beach. Poor and rich alike found accommodation. Corporations and fakirs will alike suffer losses. No other spot in the vicinity can quite fill its place.

This obituary notice may to some people seem premature. The island has been undoubtedly severely damaged, but are we not going too far in thus asserting that the damage is irremediable? Perhaps so, for the time being. It is possible that the island may see another season or two. It is estimated that the facilities for entertainment down there represent an investment of some $20,000,000, and the profits on the investment must in good seasons be so very large that strenuous efforts will be made to rehabilitate, if not the beach and bathing houses, at all events the fireworks, merry-go-rounds, restaurants and hotels. Yet it is very questionable whether money so expended would not be money lost. Every year makes it more certain that Coney Island must go. The destruction, it is true, of the beach does not mean its death as a watering place, but much of its charm as such will be destroyed. We fear that Coney Island has seen its best days, and consequently the funeral bells may be tolled, even though the funeral has not yet taken place.

There is food for reflection in the following quotation from the Engineering and Mining Journal:

In our World's Fair of 1892, which will almost certainly be held on some portion of Manhattan Island, if the high-tower scheme is to be one of the attractive features, it may be well to put in a word in season. The question of profit will depend principally on whether the popularity of ascents on high artificial structures lasts. But, furthermore, we believe that passengers will be quite as willing to pay the same toll for a trip to a height of, say, 50 or 100 feet greater than that of the Eiffel tower, as it will be quite as satisfactory to be able to say that they have mounted to the top of the highest building in the world, as to take the trouble of going a few hundred or a thousand or so feet higher. The effect would be just as striking to the patrons, while the original cost to the projectors would be less, and consequently the profit would be far greater. If the English do build to 2,000 feet or more, then it would be necessary for us to go a few feet higher. If they give up their project, then a far lower structure would suffice. In this connection it will be remembered that the Washington monument was designed to surpass in altitude the great Pyramid by only 5 feet. All depends, in brief, upon that capricious and fleeting element, popularity. The novelty of the thing is already gone.

This paragraph shows by implication what an utter absence of justification there would be for any imitation of the Eiffel tower—assuming, of course, that the object of the Exposition is the exhibition of the progress of the last four hundred years in the arts of peace, and not the gratification of so laudable an ambition as that of ascending higher than anybody else has ever done in an elevator. The essential condition is that the tower should be highest, no matter whether that means 1,005 feet or 2,005 feet. The engineering principles are the same; it is simply a matter of getting ahead of everybody else. Our Exhibition will then have the same distinction as Bunnell's museum of old used to have in possessing Chang, the Chinese giant—the tallest man on earth.

Tangled Charities.

We commented recently on the arrangements, acquiesced in rather than adopted by this State, for the care of the insane. By this systemless system we get non-curative treatment at a high price; thus contriving to be doubly wasteful, first through not curing the curable, and second by paying for custodial care at too high a rate. Some of the Western States, notably Wisconsin, have developed excellent plans for the county care of certain classes of the chronic insane under State supervision. That is a very different thing from passing a general act prescribing State care and then allowing all sorts of irrational exceptions.

From the general American neglect of correct administrative principles our public charities have suffered more than some other departments that attract more public notice. In this city the Department of Public Charities and Correction, composed of three members, has charge of eighteen different institutions besides its work in the care of the out-door poor. An obvious and cheap reform would be to make three departments, each with a single responsible head accountable to the Mayor for all his acts. The proper lines of such a division have been suggested by the State Charities Aid Association as follows: First, a commissioner for the sick and infirm, controlling the hospitals and almshouses, containing now about 3,200 persons; second, a commissioner for corrections, controlling the city prisons, the penitentiary and the workhouse, containing about 4,600 persons; third, a commissioner for dependent children, controlling the children's and infants' hospitals and the idiot asylum, containing about 800 persons. To this last department also should be given the supervision of the children boarded by the city in private institutions, numbering upwards of 15,000.

This pitiful but portentous army of dependent children is an example of what miserable results may come from an excellent law administered in our slipshod American way. By the so-called "Children's Law" of 1875 it was forbidden to send able-bodied, intelligent children, between the ages of three and sixteen, to a poorhouse. Various magistrates, superintendents, or overseers of the poor, or other authorities were empowered to provide for such children in families, orphan asylums or other appropriate institutions, and the boards of supervisors were required to take such action as was necessary to carry out the law. There can be no surer way of rearing tramps and loafers at State expense than by keeping dependent children in almshouses. The purpose of the law was most commendable. But the result in this city has been that, while there are many officials whose privilege it is to commit children to the private institutions, there are none who feel it their duty to discharge them. The city pays two dollars per week for the board of each child. As this rate yields a profit to the institutions their managers have no incentive to secure their discharge, and the result is that these poor little animals are driven into the halls and dormitories of the great denominational institutions and herded there at the expense of the city. Matters were taking much the same course in Brooklyn, but efficient remedies were used, and as a result Brooklyn is supporting only about 1,200 children, while New York supports nearly 15,000.

While this is bad for the city it is worse for the children. The best institution is a poor place for teaching industry, and push, and self-reliance, and so of eradicating the pauper taint. "Child storage here" is the sign that a prominent New York charity worker suggests as proper for many of the nurseries, and asylums and homes in our city. Children that have been "stored" for any length of time too often, at maturity, find a congenial haven in the jail or almshouse.

If we turn from public to private charities the tangle is yet worse. A large number of independent and often competitive organizations are working faithfully and with immense self-sacrifice for the welfare of "all sorts and conditions of men," including women and children. There are societies to relieve any need whatever of particular classes of persons. The Hebrew Benevolent will do this for Israelites, the German Society for Germans, the St. Andrew's Society for the Scotch, the denominational societies for those of their faith and for an undetermined number of outsiders. On the other hand, there are societies that will relieve any person whatever in some particular way. The Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor will give coal and groceries to any applicant it considers worthy, without regard to religion, race or color. The dispensaries will give medicine, the sewing societies clothing, and so on. It will be noticed that the lines of activity intersect. The classification by race overlaps that by religion, the classification by needs overlies them both, several agencies for the same sort of work are superimposed upon the others, while unlimited claims upon individual benevolence supplement or duplicate the whole.

From this philanthropic chaos the Charity Organization Society brings such order as it can. Its published "Directory of Charities" is a useful clue to the labyrinth, and its agents as animated directories of the charities of the city are still more useful. The key to the whole situation is, however, the system of public charities, city and State, and until these are properly organized and administered we must count on much useless expense and much needless degradation of the poor.

The Interest of Real Estate in the Water Supply.

NEW YORK, September 9, 1889.

DEAR SIR—Will you please let me know, through THE RECORD AND GUIDE: (1) When the water from the new aqueduct will fill Central Park Reservoir? (2) Will there then be sufficient pressure to supply water in, say, the third story of houses in 21st street, between 5th and 6th avenues?

I ask these questions because, not having had water for years during the day time in even my second story, my plumber doubts if the new source of supply will remedy the trouble, and says I must put in tank and pump, which I dislike. The plumber thinks, unless the pipes leading down town are much enlarged, the draft will exhaust the water before it reaches 21st street, as it now does, until after 7 P. M.

Very respectfully,

TWENTY-FIRST STREET.

It is impossible to give a definite answer to the first question which our correspondent propounds. The information he seeks is probably beyond the knowledge of anyone in the city. The latest word on the subject that has been sent down to the public by those in authority is: It "seems to be nearly a year away yet." Of course it is not necessary to point out that the day when the new aqueduct is put into service, and the day when the service is up to the full capacity (300,000,000 gallons daily) are two different dates not falling in the same calends by any means. The Sodom and Titicus dams, the completion of which will materially increase the water supply of the city, are still in the course of construction. As to the date when they will be ready for service it is impossible to be more definite than Lord Lovel was about his return home to his bride, in the old ballad, where the line runs: "In a year or two, or three or four, I'll be back my Lady Nan-cy."

Those in authority expect, or at least say they expect, the dams to be completed by 1892. This date is fixed on probably because it is the year of the Exposition, and is a convenient time to look forward to. The entire water supply of the Croton District cannot be utilized, however, until the much-talked-of Quaker Bridge dam is completed. It has not yet been commenced. There are probabilities that it never may be. But if work were started to-morrow, about six years would be necessary for the completion of the structure.

Question number two touches upon a disputed matter. It cannot be answered beyond peradventure until the aqueduct is put into actual use with a full supply of water. It is very probable that the third story and certainly the upper story of houses in the lower part of the city will be without water then as now. The chances are such, indeed, that a betting man in our correspondent's position would proceed at once to put tank and pump unto his building. He would consider the plumber's opinion as straight a "tip" as circumstances permit.

The foregoing letter is only one of many received at this office from owners of real estate making inquiries on the same subject. There is no manner of doubt that in so essential a matter as that of water supply, with which it is needless to point out the health and safety of the city are closely concerned, New York is in a disgraceful condition. The supply is both inadequate and inefficient. This fact has been attested by civil engineers, medical societies, fire insurance underwriters and householders. Not only is there not enough water, but with the present arrangements, and even with those so far contemplated, it is physically impossible that it can be properly distributed throughout the city, so that the higher stories of buildings of only moderate height can be supplied. The altitude of the reservoir in Central Park is not sufficient, and though the water supply were increased a hundredfold it would still be necessary to have recourse to some mechanical appliance to provide the middle and upper stories in buildings down town with water. The extra tax which this state of affairs imposes upon the city (which, of course, falls upon tenants in the form of higher rents) must be considerable, and would be worth computation if data were obtainable.

The situation in which the city stands has been recognized, but no very close attention has been given to the matter by the public, who have hoped that the new aqueduct will somehow "put things right." But the aqueduct is not yet completed, two of the dams, as we have seen, are still further from completion than the aqueduct itself, and the Quaker Bridge dam, without which the full capacity of the Croton water-shed will not be available, is a paper project requiring for completion six years from the day the first stone is set. The population of New York is increasing at the rate of 80,000 a year. If we put the per capita requirement at 100 gallons a day, we see that 8,000,000 gallons additional water is needed every year. Thus, at least 48,000,000 gallons above the present requirements would be necessary before the Quaker Bridge dam could be completed, supposing work were begun to-morrow. The city to-day needs 175,000,000 gallons. The available supply at present is only 112,000,000. The total amount that can be obtained from the Croton water-shed is, according to the report of the Aqueduct Commission, 250,000,000 gallons, so that by the time the Quaker Bridge dam and the other reservoirs could be constructed, and the entire available rainfall of the Croton water-shed given to the city, the supply would only be about equal to the requirements.

What do our officials intend to do about the matter? We hope to have the Exposition here in 1892. The population of the city will then be increased by several hundred thousand, and whatever the Exposition may be we shall certainly give the world a fine exhibition of municipal management if we cannot furnish our guests with sufficient water, or have to limit the supply in the fear of producing a famine.

Last November a proposition was made to the Sinking Fund Commissioners, by J. R. Bartlett and others, to furnish the lower part of the city with an auxiliary supply of water, drawn from the Passaic water shed. The company, which now supplies Paterson, Newark and Jersey City, offered to furnish the city by the spring of 1892 with 50,000,000 gallons of water daily under a pressure sufficient to reach the tops of the highest buildings. This proposition had the support of the New York Board of Underwriters, the Produce Exchange, the Medical Society of New York, and was of such a character as to require the attention of the commissioners. Nothing, however, has been done. The matter should be considered at once, and judgment pronounced on it according to the merits of the scheme; otherwise the chance of giving the city an abundant supply of water by 1892 will be lost, for unless work is commenced this fall it is doubtful whether the conduit could be laid and carried under the Hudson before the opening of the Columbian Exposition. Even if we were not in our present condition there are many considerations to recommend an auxiliary system. No other large city in the world but New York depends upon a single source of supply which accident or violence could cut off, leaving the city helpless. As much dynamite as a man could easily carry, in the hands of a crank or desperado, could paralyze the life of the city and produce an amount of loss and suffering not easy to estimate nor pleasant to contemplate. If an auxiliary system will supply the lower part of the city with the water it needs badly, and by lessening the demand on the Croton system improve the supply up town; if it will put us in a condition to meet the extraordinary requirements of 1892; if it will remove the extra tax now exacted from the owners of high buildings in the shape of the cost of tanks and engines and the attendant expenses, and if it will in a great degree insure us against the consequences of a mishap of whatever nature to the Croton system, why should it not receive consideration? If it is no good let the fact be known and the matter dropped. If it is what the city needs, the city should have it.

There seems to be a growing feeling of dissatisfaction among the Republican organs of this country that there is not more response from the great public to their assertion that liberty is endangered in principle by the disfranchisement of the blacks in the South. Our religious contemporary, the Mail and Express, which has taken the lead in pointing out this peril, expresses not infrequently considerable regret at this torpidity of the people. Its attitude reminds us of a story. Lord North, the Prime Minister of England at the time of our Revolution, was a man of small sagacity but considerable wit. He had a habit of feigning sleep while gentlemen on the Opposition benches used to thunder forth their dull tirades against his policy. Late one night one of these gentlemen, seeing Lord North in his customary dormant condition, paused in his speech to exclaim: "I perceive that in the midst of all these perils, which threaten to ruin his country, the noble lord is asleep." "I wish to God I was," answered the noble lord.

A philanthropist who really desires to put his money where it will do a maximum of good should bestow it upon Johns Hopkins University. The financial troubles of that institution have been very generally known, but as yet nobody has come forward to give substantial aid. It raised enough money by solicitation and economy to tide itself over for a couple of years; but the security is only temporary. Nothing can put the institution permanently on its feet again but the rehabilitation of the Baltimore & Ohio stock or the generosity of some rich man. The University was and is still doing a good work. Since it has come into existence and post-graduate facilities have been offered to students, not only have valuable contributions been made to the political and economic history of our country, but the standard of American scholarship has been raised and post-graduate courses have been started in other universities with the same object in view. In no field has

American philanthropy been so generous as in the educational field, and it is this fact that renders the future of the University tolerably secure, in spite of the decline in Baltimore & Ohio stock; for it is inconceivable that, if the actual shutting up of the University were threatened, an abundance of money could not be found to help it over. But it is a shame that the institution is allowed to remain in its present straitened condition.

Monopolies vs. Ordinary Business Pursuits.

Monopolies, against which so much complaint is being constantly raised, are a distinct feature of the economic development of this age, and have come into the industrial field to remain. It is time that this truth were more clearly recognized and that, instead of endeavoring to cry monopolies down, a little of the energy thus wasted should be expended in seeking to determine their nature in order that they may be dealt with intelligently. Monopolies in themselves are not the bugaboo they are painted; in their very nature lies the possibility of efficiency and cheapness—qualities beneficial to the community. In general, under the present regulation of monopolies, however, these benefits do not accrue to the community at large, but to private owners, and therein lurks the cause for the bitter opposition to which they are at the present time subject, and for which they in themselves give no justifiable occasion. Is there any intrinsic difference between a monopoly and an ordinary business pursuit, such as that of a merchant or manufacturer? If so, it stands to reason that the laws which regulate one should not be the same as those which govern the other. The kill or cure remedy, in common use only a few years ago among physicians, of bleeding the patient for every ill to which flesh fell heir, has given way to the more intelligent practice of specific treatment, and it is only sensible that this principle be adopted in the treatment of economic questions and applied when in an industrial community there are found to exist businesses which are totally different in other natures.

The following distinguishing characteristics of monopolies, based on a scientific study of this subject by a noted English writer (Farrer), show wherein they differ from ordinary business pursuits, and furnish reasonable grounds why they should not be subjected to the same regulations. Monopolies (and by monopolies is meant natural monopolies in the present treatment unless stated otherwise) occupy peculiarly favored tracts of land, and supply an article or convenience which is necessary, which is used in connection with the plant by which it is supplied, and which can, in general, be largely if not indefinitely increased without proportionate increase in plant and capital. Take, for example, the supply of gas to this city by private corporations. The plants of these companies occupy peculiarly favored tracts of land, namely: the public streets, where the limited space precludes the possibility of competition in any real sense of that term. The gas which the companies supply is a household necessity, and can only be furnished in connection with the plant—the consumer cannot procure it in the market as he does the food he eats or the clothes he wears, but must have it conducted to his house or place of business through a fixed system of mains and pipes. The fact that when once a plant is established its business can be extended without a proportionate increase of capital often enables the companies first in the field to crush out rival corporations which may attempt to start up. Since as soon a new company approaches anywhere near the point where the action of competition is felt by the old a consolidation is almost invariably effected and the price of gas raised to allow interests and profits on the total investment of capital in the combined plants, it would be just as well, perhaps, if rival companies could be kept down by this means, if consumers had only some assurance that gas would be supplied to them at a reasonable price, which, judging from past experience, it is vain to expect. An examination of the nature of wagon roads, streets, railways, telegraphs, the post-office, electric lighting, waterworks, street cars, etc., shows that they possess substantially the same inherent characteristics as waterworks—characteristics that place them superior to the regulative action of competition. The post-office is as much a monopoly as the telegraph, yet a constant warfare is not waged against the government mail service. The cause for the difference is that the post-office is recognized as a monopoly and treated as such. Under government control of the postal system, cheapness and efficiency, which monopolies make possible, accrue to the public. A proof of this statement is seen in our prompt and reliable mail service and in a constant reduction of the charge for postage. The general rule of public financiering is that receipts should cover expenses, and no more. Place the government in charge of monopolies, and in any extension of these businesses the receipts therefrom, which increase out of proportion to the capital expended, will go to the relief of the public at large, instead of to further the interest of individuals or private corporations. Monopolies are essentially different from ordinary business pursuits, and are not to be governed by the same laws.

The Central Turnverein.

Such, according to an inscription on its central gable, which can be made out across 67th street only with difficulty, by reason of the projection of the main cornice under it, is the name of a building now nearing completion on the north side of the said street between 2d and 3d avenues. The building is very noticeable by reason of its magnitude, having a frontage, and for architectural purposes a frontage only, of nearly 175 feet in length by six stories in height, and by reason of its material, a rich yellow brick used in connection with a purplish brown sandstone, that makes an effective and agreeable combination of color. It also possesses considerable architectural pretensions and some architectural interest.

The division of the front, both laterally and vertically, is entirely regular and symmetrical, so much so as to be a trifle monotonous, three pavilions. The lateral entrances are confined to the ground story, and consist of arches flanked by pilasters and crowned with pediments, the decoration of the pediments being much more pretentious than successful. The main entrance at the centre runs through two stories and is a large round arch flanked by pairs of columns. Like the lateral pediments these columns are profusely ornamented, in the taste of the debased German Renaissance, while the inclosed arch has a decorated roll at the intrados, continued down the jamb, a detail so rational and structural as to seem incongruous with the florid unmeaningness that surrounds it. The wall flanking this entrance in the central pavilion is in the second story pierced only by an oval opening on each side in brick, with keystones at the sides, top and bottom. This story, though of brick, is united in treatment with the brown stone plinth, so as to form the

the only deviations one notes being that the side entrances are not, in situation, exact counterparts of each other and that on one side a room apparently runs through the third and fourth stories, which on the other are distinctly separated by a floor. There are five lateral parts, a projecting pavilion at the centre and one at each end, the three amounting to more than half the front. The projection is slight, only about a foot, but it would suffice to account for a separate treatment of the roof. It is not called on to account for that here, the roof being flat, or at all events invisible from the front, but it is called upon to account for a gable over each pavilion, which it does not succeed very well in doing, the gables being obviously shams, mere triangles of wall veiling vacuity.

In spite of the jogs by which the pavilions are detached the treatment of the front in general is such as to emphasize and enhance its apparent length, the horizontal lines being strongly marked and only enough stress laid on the vertical members to evade monotony. There is a considerable slope in the line of the street, so that the eastern corner of the basement is distinctly higher than the western. This appears in the lower story alone, a wall of brown stone, appropriately massive in treatment and appearance. The windows are square-headed and simple, and the planner of the basement is relieved only by the entrances, one in each of the architectural base of the building, and is separated from the superstructure by a heavy string course that might be described as a cornice. The openings of the second story, like those of the first, are square-headed, with the exception of the two bulls'-eyes just described, but in brick, and are covered with flat arches with protruding keystones.

The next division of two stories is united by the continuance of the openings through both. The curtain wall is here still further recessed a few inches, while the plane of the basement is continued in pilasters of brick belted with stone. The feature of this division is a large round arch at the centre over the main entrance, the line of which it perhaps repeats too closely, but it is none the less an impressive feature. It runs through both stories, and is still broad for its height. The voussoirs are alternately of brick and of projecting stones, and the keystone is prolonged upward into a flourishing and somewhat bloated trophy that incorporated itself with the heavy string course that separates the middle from the upper division of the building. On each side of the arch a small square-headed opening is interpolated under the impost, and above in the spandril is a medallion of a German worthy.

The upper division consists of two stories, taller, at least in effect, than either of the other two groups. There are slight differences of treatment in the direction of greater lightness. For example, in the lower division the angles of the pavilions are heavily and continuously quoined in stone, and in the second division the quoins occur at intervals and the pilasters are belted with stone also, while above both angles and piers are of plain brick. The fenestration of the curtain walls and of the lateral pavilions, pairs of round arches, is continued in the third division, while a triplet of arches at the centre takes the place of the main entrance of the first division and the large window of the second. At the sides an effective variation is introduced in the form of a balcony in each lateral pavilion, while all the pavilions are disfigured by ugly and unmeaning subordinate cornices.

As has been hinted, the main cornice is of too great projection considering the introduction of the sham gables above it. It is quite true that these ought not to have been introduced at all, and that if they were hidden altogether the appearance of the front would be improved; but having been introduced, and being manifestly of no utility, we conclude that they were added in order to be seen, and this purpose the projection of the main cornice defeats. The field of the gable on each side is pierced by a bull's-eye, while at the centre it is occupied by a floral design in terra cotta. All the gables are flanked by chimneys and crowned by finials that are clumsy, lumpy and ineffective in design. These show gables are the most conspicuous defects in the design. The whole wall treatment is arranged for the purpose of accounting for them, and they are unaccountable. Either a separate treatment of roof was demanded with the treatment adopted, or else if an invisible roof was unavoidable the wall should have been kept in one plane, and other devices introduced to avoid monotony. Up to the cornice line the composition is very good. The projected and recessed masses balance each other agreeably, and the vertical division is also appropriate and effective in a six-story building. The architect seems, however, to have been anxious to show that his building was German in origin and purpose. This he has thoroughly succeeded in doing, but at a considerable sacrifice of beauty. For the characteristic front of the Roman Renaissance that he has introduced, as in the detail of the pediments and the doorways, unfortunately are very crude and ugly, as well as very German.

Our Impartial Observer—The Lesson of the Hamilton Case.

I often think what absolutely erroneous judgments of the affairs of this world that very large class of persons must form who have little taste for literature, and less capacity for observation, and whose stock of information is therefore necessarily derived, like their ready made opinions, almost exclusively from what they pick up from their favorite newspaper.

In almost every narration, however circumstantial, as to the facts regarding the tragedies, the dramas and the comedies of every-day life which occupy so great a part of journalistic space, it is not too much to say that there is almost always lacking any adequate attempt to explain the underlying motives which lead men and women to acts resulting in crime, misery and disgrace.

The average newspaper reader, therefore, who cannot supplement this reading of the mere, bald facts of such events, isolated from any consideration of their causes with any philosophical judgment of his own, must be often puzzled to account for the occurrence of many of these transactions.

If he ponders at all upon their cause (and the great majority of humanity can scarcely be said in a philosophical sense to think), the only conclusion he probably arrives at is the convenient mediæval one that His Satanic Majesty is at the foundation of all human evil.

Take the recent case of Mr. Hamilton as an example. With all the reportorial ability with which the minutest details of the antecedent lives of the actors in this scandal have been unearthed, and the entire career of shame of most of them disclosed to public gaze, how little space has been given to any sufficient consideration of how it happened that such a scandal has occurred. Here is a man of refinement and education, accustomed to the society of the very best people our American culture affords, not known to be addicted to any gross form of vice, and who had attained a very respectable position in political life with a fair prospect of advancement, who is suddenly found to be married to a woman whose character is not at all doubtful, and whose "family circle" is no more doubtful than her own. It is not necessary to repeat the nauseous details, because our concern is not with the facts but with certain phases of this case and certain directions which it illustrates, which have almost escaped attention in the newspapers if they have not been purposely suppressed.

The usual Anglo-Saxon prudishness which attempts to deny the existence of certain human emotions and passions arising from the fact of sex by the convenient policy of ignoring them has probably never been more forcibly illustrated than in this very instance. It has been constantly insisted throughout all the accounts which I have seen that Mr. Hamilton has been completely deceived as to the character of his wife when the probability is in fact entirely the other way. It seems to be assumed by the gentlemen who write the moralizing editorials in the newspapers that it would have been impossible for a man like Hamilton to have passionately loved a woman like his wife if he had known her real character. But not only is this untrue, but the evidence that it is false is notorious to men of the world. The women who have been best loved on this earth since it began its diurnal course have not been by any means those of the most irreproachable character. In fact the record of conspicuous examples is decidedly the other way. Considering how familiar the fact of sex is to all of us it is remarkable how little general study has been given to the phenomena of sexual attraction. What is known on the subject is too often the result of the study of persons by no means best fitted, either from their character or ability, to draw the most judicious conclusions from the fact within their observation. There are certain well ascertained conclusions, however, drawn from a reasonably sufficient number of examples and generally known among students of this subject, which point unerringly to certain facts which are not without profound significance. Among the records of divorces taken, where the greatest care has been given to the collation of statistics, two facts stand out in bold relief; the first is, that the marriage of widows and widowers are least often followed by divorce; that the subsequent dissolution of the marriage relation is still less frequent where both the contracting parties have been married before, and that so far as the facts are possible of ascertainment the marriage of persons who voluntarily passed from illicit companionship into more definite relation is rarely if ever followed by either seeking divorce.

There is no well-posted New Yorker who will require to go very far to find many auspicious examples of very great felicity now enjoyed by certain well-known people who from circumstances beyond their control and certainly opposed to their volition were for many years prevented from participating in that form of sexual relationship to which alone the law gives its sanction.

What Hamilton therefore undertook to do was only what he had ample opportunity to observe had been successfully achieved around him. He unfortunately failed in his experiment; but that in no sense militates against the general rule to which I have pointed. That sexual attraction is a safer basis for marriage than the average mere contracted relation which is based on a transatlantic form of the marriage de convenance our divorce records will indicate.

I believe that the psychology of sex, if properly studied by trained observers with no hobbies or prejudices, either scientific or ecclesiastic, would be of profound value to the human race. It seems as though it were absurd that in this age of investigation and discovery man should be allowed to continue to procreate his species with no more thought for the consequences than an animal. Some day enlightenment will dawn, and those who would reform mankind will agree to begin at the beginning.

CHRISTOPHER WALTON.

Our Letter Bag—Robbins' Park.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

Some eighteen years ago, in a suburban town, one Robbins bought a tract of land and subdivided it into plots, filing a map, and selling the property at auction. On said map, surrounded by three roads, was laid out about one acre, designated as "Robbins' Park." In the deeds of the lots sold no mention is made of any right in or to a park, nor are any lots bounded by said park. Robbins subsequently conveyed said park by warranty deed full covenant to one Thompson, of Indiana, for consideration of $4,000. Robbins soon after died insolvent.

The transfer not being generally known, the Board of Assessors assessed the park to Robbins estate; taxes stood unpaid, and the property, being sold at tax sale, was bought in by the town, which afterwards rented it to one Williams for pasture.

Two years ago Thompson turns up from the West, presents his recorded deed and claims ownership. The assessors compute back taxes, which Thompson pays, and has since paid taxes regularly. He now offers the park for sale.

Has Thompson good title? Have the town or neighboring property owners any rights which would bar a sale or valid conveyance to a purchaser?

A NEIGHBORING OWNER.

The facts stated in this case make it doubtful that a dedication of the park was in fact effected. Dedication requires not only an intent on the part of the owner to surrender the land to the public use, but also an acceptance thereof by the public; or in case of a map made and filed by the owner an unequivocal intent and decisive act to surrender to those purchasing on the faith thereof. In this case there is nothing stated to show that there was any representation by Robbins at the time of the sale that the plot called "Robbins' Park" was to be a public park or a park for the owners of lots shown on the map, nor any act of his shown indicating such a purpose. There is nothing stated to show that the park was thrown open to public use or to the common use of the owners of lots. It might be called a park on the map, and still be a private park. The printed terms of sale, or the representations of the auctioneer at the time of the sale, would help to determine the intent of Robbins laying out this plot on the map in the manner mentioned, and in calling it "Robbins' Park." If there was anything done by him at that time to show that it was his intent to dedicate that plot as a park for the use of the purchasers of the lots described on the map, or if the park were opened and surrendered to the public or to the lot owners; then we think there would have been sufficient dedication and acceptance, and also sufficient under the law to be notice to Thompson of the rights of the public or lot owners in this park.

The law, as to the dedication, is the same in the case of parks or open squares as it is in the case of streets. In a case somewhat similar to this, wherein a corporation had made a map of its property, which, among other parcels, contained a tract marked "Hudson Square," and thereafter purchasers bought lots from the said corporation bearing certain numbers on the map, it was held that the designation of the square on the map did not establish that one of the objects for which the square was marked was to secure to the lots sold a prospect and the passage of air over the square. Greene vs. N. Y. Central & Hudson R. R. Company, 12 Abbott's New Cases, 124. The first question, therefore, is the intent of Robbins, and what action was taken by him to carry the intent into effect.

It has also been decided that when the owners of urban property lay it out into lots, with streets and avenues intersected, and they sell the lots with reference to such a plan or map, it is thereafter too late for them to exercise a general and unlimited control over the property dedicated as streets, so as to deprive the grantees of the several lots of the benefit to be acquired and to have such streets kept; and this rule is equally applicable to the case of dedication of lands to be used as an open square or a public walk. Trustees of Watertown against Cowen, 4 page, 510.

The rule to be deduced is that the mere making of the map in the absence of anything showing an intent that the plot called "Robbins' Park" was to be an open square or public park would not be conclusive on the question of dedication. If, however, the notices or posters for the sale, the written terms of sale, the printed statements on the maps for the sale, or any other indication upon the map filed, or any act or conduct by Robbins or his agents authorized to act, show that the intent was that this park was to be a public park, or a park or square for the use of the lot owners, we think there would be a sufficient dedication or surrender, and that Thompson would hold his title subject thereto.

It would seem that the public did not accept the plot of land as a public park. But if there was a surrender or dedication to the lot owners, there does not seem to have been any acts done by them releasing or extinguishing their rights. Their failure to assert their rights to the plot of land for the purpose of a park is a matter to be considered in determining the question of dedication or surrender, and laches or delay is not favored in equity. There does not seem to be sufficient in this case to sustain a dedication of or surrender of the plot for a public park, or for a park common to the lot owners.

Men and Things.

One of the engineers of the Pennsylvania Railroad said, in conversation the other day, "The public have an idea that the Americanization of European railroads, especially in the matter of equipment, is being carried on as speedily as the cramping conservatism of the Old World permits. Undoubtedly Europe is borrowing ideas from us, but few people have any knowledge how liberally we are being repaid. The Europeanizing of our railroads is a matter no one speaks of, perhaps because it is not noticed. Some innovation may be noticed, but often the observer is not sufficiently informed to recognize that it is borrowed, and is not, as he may think, original. For example, travelers in Europe express astonishment that the railroad companies there are so slow in equipping their cars with the automatic air or vacuum brake—an American invention in its present form—and conclude that it is due to a lack of enterprise peculiar to the Old World. The automatic brake is no doubt very essential to the safety of fast trains, but it is scarcely more so than interlocking signals and the "block system," which, in England at any rate, have been in general use for many years, but in this country have been adopted only recently by a few of our trunk lines. The great advantages of interlocking signals and the "block system" have long been recognized and acknowledged by our railroad managers, and the foreigner might with justice ask, why have they been so unenterprising? Lighting cars by compressed gas has been a general practice for years in Europe; we are only beginning it. The elevated roads in New York City still use petroleum. The compound locomotive is now in use in England, France, Germany, and even Australia, while in this country the Pennsylvania Company is still experimenting with an engine, No. 1320, purchased on the other side from the London & Northwestern Railway. In stone ballast, heavy steel rails, iron and masonry bridges, handsome stations, fast trains, even our wealthiest roads are following and not leading Europe. In many things, of course, we are ahead of the Old World, but I think it would be much better for us if, instead of keeping our eyes steadily fixed on these, we turned now and again to our deficiencies."

Two flats are being erected on the northwest corner of 8th avenue and 21st street, which for solidness of construction are equal to any which are to be found in the lower part of the city. They are to be fire-proof throughout with iron beams and all such modern improvements as conduce to the safety and comfort of the occupants.

A strange law suit is now on trial in the New Jersey courts. From the evidence it appears that some time ago some parties from New York purchased 131¼ acres, bordering on Raritan Bay, from a resident of Monmouth County. Shortly after purchase the new owners had the land surveyed, when it was discovered that 12½ acres were missing. Upon investigation it was ascertained that the missing acres had been stolen by the encroaching waters of the bay. The original owner declined to make restitution for the missing land on the ground that he was not responsible for what nature had done. The purchasers have, therefore, instituted a suit to recover for the bay's theft.

Sardou is responsible for the statement that all possible plays could be classified under seven heads. The statement is meaningless of course, without adding the principle on which the classification was based. It would be true enough, but as useless as it was true, to say that all plays could be classified under two heads—those which consist of two acts and those which have more. In the same spirit, however, as Sardou's statement was made, and without descending into particulars, it may be said that all the jokes of newspaper paragraphers could very well be placed under less than two heads. Consequently, it is something of a relief to come across a clever reply that is not simply an old joke dressed in new clothes. The story is told of a manager who wished to get the better, as managers will, of an actress in his employ, who, by the way, was a Jewess. She did not take kindly to his proposals, and expressed her feelings by glaring at him. "Why," said the manager, "you look as if you wanted to eat me up." "Thank you," returned the injured one, "my religion would not let me." The repartee was rather the whack of a club than the stab of a sword, but it was good nevertheless.

In the days when Hoyt's absurdities flourish and English gayety inanities are all the rage, it may seem paradoxical to say that there must be something really good in play and player before it makes a success; yet there is much to be said for such an assertion. It would be obviously impossible fully to justify it within the limits of a paragraph, but a few facts may be mentioned that bear upon the statement without quite proving it. There were a number of women who were to star during the present season depending in no wise upon their dramatic ability, but rather on a certain kind of celebrity obtained in other spheres—not, by the way, as angels. These women have all of them given up their intention, and the rumor is that in many cases they were unable to make dates. The failures of Miss Dis Debar and Miss Violet Cameron, not long since, point to the same moral, viz.: That dresses and previous notoriety may help a woman who has some claims to consideration as an actress, but they themselves are not enough to fill the house for more than the first two or three nights. In the same way plays, which are put upon the stage because the story on which they are based has made some success as a novel, irrespective of its fitness for public representation, have failed in every case. "The Quick and the Dead," "Robert Elsmere," "As In a Looking Glass," all are proofs of this fact. On the other hand, "Fauntleroy," "Edita's Burglar" and "Bootles' Baby," all have succeeded because they had some dramatic fitness. It would be a somewhat more difficult task to show that in all the late success, there was very much that was deserved; but this, also, would not be impossible.

Residents of Harlem and others have commenced to look around for investment property near the location of the proposed Exposition grounds. A number of Harlem brokers have been asked to secure corner lots at Inwood by their clients; but this, it seems, is difficult of accomplishment. One owner who, last year, purchased a lot for $5,000, has now, solely in view of the proposed Exposition, placed the price of his lot at $10,000. Instances of this kind are numerous and indicate the expectations that property-owners attach to a World's Fair.

The late Samuel S. Cox was particularly sensitive to criticism. Any attack in the newspapers, it is said, used, if it was unjust or mistaken, to hurt him severely and often provoke retaliation. A well-meaning but somewhat officious friend once wrote to him pointing out the uselessness of such supersensitiveness, and implying possibly that there was some lack of dignity in taking criticism as he did. The reply was, perhaps, characteristic of the man, and was couched somewhat in the following terms: "You have told me that it was better that I should not care what other people say; very well, I do not care a d— what you say."

It is by no means a small compliment to a man's business efficiency and standing that his name should be so much valued and so closely connected, not only with his own business but with good business methods, that it should be found desirable to continue it after his death as the firm name of those who succeed him. Such a compliment has been paid to Leonard J. Carpenter as it was to E. H. Ludlow and A. H. Muller. Mr. D. Y. Swainson, A. H. Carpenter and E. E. Carpenter will in the future constitute the firm acting under the late L. J. Carpenter's name.

Readers of Walter Besant's "Herr Paulus" will remember how that gifted young prestidigitator and hypnotist was able, by a kind of instantaneous mesmerism, so to affect the mind of anybody whom he looked at attentively as to make them see exactly what he wished them to see. This instantaneous hypnotic power is very rare, but that it exists and is dangerous to our pecuniary and possibly even personal safety is shown by a story which comes to us from Oxford. A young man in that town used his gift of instantaneous hypnotism to make purchases at prices which not even a Fourier, with all his hatred of middlemen and their methods, could call exorbitant. He would, for instance, hypnotize a salesman, lay down a penny to pay for a purchase and receive change for a sovereign. A rare and beautiful gift that, which can make something out of a tradesman in a University town. We do not admire the young man; but nobody who has ever been in the clutches of the shopkeepers around a college can sympathize with the tradesman. Alas! however, philanthropical acts are liable to be misinterpreted. A policeman came to a knowledge of the young man's ways; but even this hard-hearted servant of the law refrained from arresting this undergraduate's Phenix for two weeks, showing that he appreciated the good work. It was not until the young man attempted to pass off on a box-office clerk a piece of brown paper as a five-pound note that the policeman felt compelled to interfere—sadly, no doubt. Probably he had seen the play and knew that a spectator got more out of it than the price of a piece of brown paper, although that, of course, is merely a surmise. We regret to say that at the time of his arrest the young man did not display his customary ingenuity. He ought to have hypnotized the policeman, compelled that functionary to mistake the box-office man for the culprit and thus avoid arrest himself. The young man, however, failed to use his powers for his own advantage, and he will probably have to make the jailer imagine that he is the Prince of Wales in order to escape. Like a prophet, he is not appreciated in his native land.

Architects should take note that the time fixed for receiving plans for the new Municipal building has been extended until October 1, 1889.

Public Improvements.

THEIR PRESENT CONDITION AND PROSPECTS.

Now that the city government officials have returned from their vacations and are about to settle down to real work again, it is pertinent to ask at what stage of progress a number of public improvements are which are to be undertaken in the near future. Among the foremost of these are the widening or cutting through of several streets which have long since required this improvement, as well as the question of several small parks, etc. The list includes the following:

1. The widening and extending of College place. The plan, as adopted, will widen that thoroughfare appreciable. It will be widened between Chambers and Murray streets from 64 to 90 feet, thus taking 26 feet from the buildings along that line, and its width between Murray and Barclay streets is to be 80 feet. It then cuts through the blocks intervening to the south till it strikes Greenwich street, near Fulton street. It widens College place 25 feet between Murray and Barclay streets, and it cuts through the blocks between Barclay and Fulton streets to a width of 80 feet. There has been some opposition to the contemplated improvement, but not sufficient to defeat the plan, which is now practically assured. The completed plans are ready and will be presented by the Commissioner of Public Works at the next meeting of the Board of Street Opening and Improvement, which takes place on Friday, the 20th inst. The board will very probably pass a resolution at that meeting asking the Corporation Counsel to take proceedings to have commissioners of estimate and assessment appointed in the matter.

2. The extension of Bethune street. This requires the taking of some property which is to be cut through between Greenwich and Hudson streets, north of Bank street. There is no way of access from that street at present to Hudson street, and passengers and vehicles turning in from Hudson street have to go a roundabout way to get into Bethune street. The block is a long one, and it is to be cut through at a very small expense to the city. The properties required for the improvement are Nos. 779, 781 and part of 783 Greenwich street, on the east side, commencing 136.3 north of Bank street, and running through to Nos. 593, 595 and part of 597 Hudson street, west side, commencing 99.8 north of Bank street. When cut through Bethune street will have direct communication with Abingdon square, 8th avenue and Hudson street. The cost of acquiring title to the property and completing the necessary improvement is estimated at $84,925. The Corporation Counsel has just received a rule map, and a petition is now being prepared for the appointment of commissioners of estimate and assessment in the matter.

3. The exterior street, between 64th and 86th streets. Nothing seems to have been done to advance this improvement during the past four or five months. Now that the width of the street has been settled upon definitely there seems to be no reason for further delay in this matter. The street is to be 115 feet wide, of which 65 feet is to be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Works and 50 feet under the Dock Department. Nobody seems to know when the work will be commenced, nor do any of the city officials seem to be in a hurry to push the proceedings forward so that the work can be begun at an early date.

4. The 155th street aqueduct. Nothing has been done in this matter for several months. The most recent plan proposed is to run the structure from a point level with Macomb's Dam Bridge, and thence through 155th street to St. Nicholas avenue. It is to be connected with the "L" road by stairs, and is to have a 40-foot carriageway of asphalt and sidewalks on each side 10 feet in width. It will save climbing the hill from the elevated road to 155th street and the neighboring streets and avenues, as well as the descent to the "L" road, which is the great obstacle to living at that point. The value of property, as well as its improvement, is much retarded for the want of some such viaduct as this. Its completion would yield many times over the cost of the assessment to the surrounding property-owners in increased values. The matter is now in the hands of the Sinking Fund Commissioners, and awaits their further action.

5. The transverse road through Central Park. This small measure of improvement seems to hang fire in a manner which is highly provoking to many people whose business calls them from east to west, or west to east. The delay which has occurred in this matter is absolutely unwarranted. The Park Commissioners cannot be complimented on the thoroughness with which they have performed their duty to the public in this matter. They started out with an estimate of $11,500, and after half a year's dilly-dallying they discovered that they would want $10,000 more than they originally demanded. The matter was referred back to the Sinking Fund Commissioners, where it lay for several months. It was only a few days ago that they at last took action in the matter by asking Park Commissioner Robb to see the railroad companies, and find out whether they are willing to pay a rental to the city on the extra $10,000 in addition to the $11,500 on which they said they were prepared to pay a rental. There is no reason why the Sinking Fund Commissioners should not have made this request three months ago. If they had it would have given the people of this city a transverse road through the Central Park just three months earlier. It is hardly likely now that the road will be built before the snow is on the ground. The line will start in at 85th street at the east side and end at 86th street on the west side. Although both the Madison avenue and Second avenue horse car companies have bid for the franchise, it seems pretty certain, as far as present appearances go, that the former will secure the lease.

6. Mulberry Street Park. The proceedings in this matter are progressing slowly. The maps have not all been completed yet. They are to be made in five parts, and three of these have so far been sent in to the commissioners. The property to be taken comprises the block bounded by Baxter, Bayard, Mulberry and Park streets. It takes in 2,739 acres, or nearly forty-eight lots. The estimated cost of acquiring title to the property is $648,750, of which 30 per cent. will be assessed on the property-owners and 70 per cent. on the city. The area of assessment extends to a line on the north drawn parallel to and 100 feet north of Canal street; on the east to a line parallel to the easterly line of the Bowery, Chatham square and Park row and 100 feet beyond each of those streets; on the south to a line parallel to and 100 feet south of Pearl street, and on the west to a line parallel to and 100 feet west of Elm street. The commissioners in the matter are Gilbert M. Speir, Jr., Patrick H. Kerwin and John J. Scanlin.

7. Corlears Hook Park. This is bounded by Cherry, Jackson and Corlears street and the East River. It comprises three blocks. Proceedings are pending for acquiring title to the property required for the purpose between the boundaries named. All the property-owners have been heard on the question of the damages to be awarded. The commissioners in the matter are Myer Thalmessinger, Henry Campbell and Lyttleton G. Garretson.

8. Highbridge Park. The commissioners appointed in this matter will not serve and other substitutes or successors have not been appointed as yet. Everyone is familiar with the main outlines of this park. It commences at 155th street and runs northwards to Dyckman street, and is bounded on the east by the Harlem River, and on the west by Edgecombe road, 10th and Fort George avenues. It takes in 1,976 lots, and their estimated market value, according to ex-Comptroller Myers' figures, is $1,743,329. It is said, however, that when the commissioners get through with their testimony the values will be found to largely exceed that figure. The Corporation Counsel is now considering a petition from property-owners in the neighborhood asking that the size of the park shall be reduced, so as to be bounded on the south by 170th street and on the north by 182d street. They state that the park as now laid out will cost $5,000,000. The petitioners include Vice-President Levi P. Morton, George Bliss, Robert C. Rathbone, Geo. S. Lespinasse and others.

9. East River Park addition. The present park is bounded by the north side of 84th street, the south side of 86th street, Avenue B and the East River. The addition starts in at the north side of 86th street, and then runs northerly to marginal street (about 89th street), thence easterly to the East River and thence southerly to 86th street. The latest stage of the proceedings in this matter is the filing of rule maps in the Register's Office.

10. Elm street widening and extension. There no less than five plans prepared, but none of these are likely to be definitely settled upon. The engineer who drew the plans says that it is impossible for any outline to be given of these plans as they have neither head nor tail. They are merely sketches carrying out propositions made, and each route differs from the other. A resolution was passed by the Board of Street Opening in February last to the effect that it was the sense of the board that the street should be widened below Broome street, and a committee was appointed to consider the desirability of extending it to Lafayette place. Plans were prepared accordingly, but nothing has been done in the matter. One of the earliest and most important of the plans proposed was the following line: Centre street, from Broome street, through the block to Spring street, thence along the west side of Mulberry street to Bleacker street, and thence through the intervening blocks to Lafayette place. This would extend Centre street for a width of 80 feet to the southerly line of Lafayette place. The assessed value of the property affected would be about $1,500,000, and the estimated full value about $2,500,000. Another and costlier plan proposed is to widen Elm street to a width of 80 feet northwards to Lafayette place, through the centre of the blocks intervening. This would make the street run from Lafayette place to Pearl street, thence diagonally across to Centre street at the south side of Reade street, and thence down Centre street to Chambers street. The property required to carry out this plan is assessed at $2,750,000, and the total cost, including flagging, grading, etc., would probably be close on to $5,000,000. There is no plan, however, definitely decided upon, and it is understood that the matter will be brought up again for consideration at next Friday's meeting of the Board of Street Opening and Improvement.

To the thousands of property-owners interested in the above improvements a word of advice will not be untimely. Quite a number of the improvements have been hanging fire for some time. There is only one way to have them pushed forward, and that is by unceasing vigilance on the part of the property-owners interested. A combined effort by property-owners on any of these improvements will always push them through more expeditiously than if they were left in the various city departments to take care of themselves. The delays which have occurred in many cases are no doubt vexatious, but property-owners have, to a large extent, the remedy in their own hands.

Is the Committee Packed?

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

While the committee for the proposed World's Fair of 1892 was selected most admirably and judiciously, and commends itself to the judgment and approval of every one, yet it is most unfortunate that there is, or seems to be, a general impression that the Sub-Committee on sites is packed in the interest of a site on the "Sound," which impression is heightened by an examination of the personnel of the sub-committee, composed, as it is in part, of parties interested in steamboats and real estate along the Sound who are evidently not disinterested. I would call attention, again, to the failure to invite the whole committee, and the evident wish to exclude all save the sub-committee from the tour of inspection, etc.

It is an equally general opinion among well-informed persons that there exists three sites only of proper consideration, viz.: Central Park, Van Cortlandt Park and the Inwood site, and that the selection of any other site would involve foreordained failure—both because it would fail to secure financial support and because it would savor of a job or scandal.

Yours respectfully, FRED'K J. STONE.

A Unique Front.

"THE PRESIDENT" FLAT.
[Communicated.]

On the east side of Lexington avenue, adjoining the northeast corner of 27th street, the passer-by will notice a five-story building. If he should happen to give it more than a casual glance he will observe that the brown stone front is ornamented on each story with the heads of some of the best known of the Presidents of the United States. The design is a remarkable one and it is understood to be the idea of the owner and builder, Wm. Broadbelt, who seems to have spared no pains to have a good carving of a

The front is worthy of more minute description. The steps leading to the entrance are flanked on each side with newel posts, on each of which a carved vase is set. The entrance has granite columns on each side surmounted by Indians' heads, and the first floor windows have as supports carved panels with the Stars and Stripes in the claws of an eagle, emblematic of the national flag. Above the entrance appears the noble face of Washington, having*on the one side the features of Lincoln and on the other those of Garfield. On the second floor the heads of Presidents Grant, Taylor, Monroe and Jefferson appear; on the third floor those of the two Adams, Jackson and Polk; on the fourth floor those of Harrison, Hayes, Cleveland and Buchanan, and on the fifth floor those of Van Buren, Tyler, Madison and Pierce. There is a uniformity in the idea throughout, and this oneness of design is the principal virtue which characterizes the exterior. There may be two opinions about the architectural design, but its consistency admits of no qualification.

The flat is the only one in existence between Granercy Park and 30th street, and it stands out in bold relief amid the surrounding dwellings. The interior of the flat shows that good judgment has been displayed in the domestic arrangements, the object evidently being to attract the housewife, and thus rent the apartment easily. The vestibule entrance is of hardwood and is handsomely equipped in its way. The ceilings, walls and wainscoting are entirely in oak, while the flooring is of American encaustic tile, the word "President" being inlaid in blue letters on a white background. The door leading to the hallway, as well as that at the entrance, is of oak, with bevel plate glass windows, while the ceiling is decorated. The stairway leading to the upper apartments has on the one side a balustrade of oak, and on the other side a wainscoting of the same wood.

The apartments are well planned. There are ten suites in all, and they each contain six rooms and a bath, etc. The parlor is a cosy room fronting on the avenue, and into it streams the western light. It is trimmed in antique oak. The fire-grate is of oxidized silver and is surmounted by a handsome mantel containing a bric-à-brac stand and a secret cabinet. The room has a pretty chandelier of special design, with safety gas keys. The walls are covered with gold embossed paper, and the ceiling is hand-painted in flowers and palm branches. The rear parlor, which can be used as a bedroom or music room, has a portière entrance, surmounted by a transom of trellis work. There are two bedrooms beyond. Adjoining this is the dining-room, which is finished in cherry. The ceilings are hand-painted and there is a mantel of a pretty design. Beyond this is a miniature butler's pantry, with an English decorated porcelain bowl and marble slabs, with the faucets of brasswork of an improved patent. There are three refrigerators, etc. There is a cosy bathroom beyond, which is trimmed in ash, and contains a decorated porcelain closet, with nickel-plated legs, and a cistern which is copper lined. The kitchen beyond has a sink, the faucets and waste pipes of which are a pretty piece of plumbing; they are of nickel-plated ware. The washtubs are of stoneware and the room is in cherry finish. The range is the "Provident," of the Richardson & Boynton Co.

On the whole the flat strikes the observer as though the builder had been trying to get so many improvements in it as to warrant the belief that he is not going to make a large profit on his venture. The exterior stone work and carving is not an inconsiderable item of expense, without speaking of the interior work. The cabinet trim has been done by Bradley & Currier, and the plumbing, which was done by day's work, by Joshua S. Lindsay. Every ceiling is decorated in a different design, and the light and ventilation is excellent throughout, while electric bells and other improvements are provided. The whole interior arrangement, for a flat of this character, is as excellent as the exterior is unique.

It has become a frequent custom with builders to copy the designs of their predecessors. This has been the cause of such a monotonous profusion of brown stone fronts of the same uninteresting style, that any change from the ordinary front is welcome. LYNX.

"THE PRESIDENT" APARTMENT HOUSE, NO. 101 LEXINGTON AVENUE.

More Inspectors Asked For,

The Fire Commissioners, in their estimate of the pay rolls for the ensuing year, ask for an increase of five inspectors. One of these is to have a salary of $2,000 per annum and is to possess "a high order of technical knowledge and superior practical experience." The others are to receive $1,100 each. There are at present forty-six inspectors and two superintendents in the Building Department.

The Health Department intends asking for six more inspectors, but they are to be appointed for the inspection of milk only. There are at present six inspectors for that purpose, but a law passed last session makes it necessary to have complaints made of adulteration by two inspectors. This is why the six additional men are needed. They will have to go on their tours of inspection in batches of two at a time, instead of singly, as formerly, so President Wilson says.

There has been an impression for some time that the plumbing and ventilation bureau of the Health Department has been shorthanded in its staff of inspectors. A reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE called upon President Wilson to ascertain what truth there was in this supposition.

He replied: "At present we have enough inspectors in that bureau. They now number eighteen, and they are able to cope with the cases as they come along satisfactorily. I have received no complaints to the contrary. We don't require any more inspectors in that bureau."

The New Government Buildings.

Now that Secretary Windom has definitely settled upon the purchase of the Battery site for the new Appraiser's Stores and Custom House, a glance at the character of the property will be of interest.

There are three blocks in all. They are bounded on the north by Bowling Green, on the east by Whitehall street and on the south and west by State street. Bridge and Pearl streets intervene, while Whitney street runs in the rear of the most northerly block and leads into Bridge street. The parcels of property to be taken are quite numerous and are given in the following list:

Total.....			$1,634,000

The tax valuation of these three blocks being $1,634,000, or 67 per cent. of the total supposed value, it is estimated that the property will cost $2,438,806, though it is probable that over $3,000,000 will be required to purchase it.

It is contemplated that if new Appraiser's Stores, Custom House, Sub-Treasury and Assay and Refinery buildings are built on these blocks, the present Government buildings on Wall street can be sold for over $6,000,000, thus raising, with the sum already appropriated, nearly enough for the purpose of buying the Bowling Green site and erecting the new buildings. The present Custom House, Sub-Treasury and Assay Office, in Wall street, are said to be antiquated, incommodious, and badly adapted for the purposes for which they are used, and if this is so it would be well to dispose of them and build new and modern buildings, all to adjoin one another, so as to save the trouble and cost of transportation, etc.

The plan proposed for the new buildings would be as follows: The Sub-Treasury would front on Bowling Green, State and Whitehall streets, and be 135x214 in size. The Assay and Refinery Office would adjoin, and be 100x250 in size. The Custom House would come next with a dimension of 212x275, while the Appraiser's Stores would adjoin at the extreme south, and be 225x313 in size. The latter would be connected by tunnel with the Barge Office, so that samples of dutiable goods could be landed at the latter place and sent through the tunnel right into the Stores for appraisal.

A comparison between the ground occupied by the present and contemplated buildings shows the following:

	Sq. feet.
Present Custom House, plot about 155x200.....	31,000
Present Sub Treasury, plot about 90.6x204.....	18,463
Present Assay and Refinery Office, 46x135 and 29x40.....	13,197
Present Appraiser's Stores, about 180x230.....	41,400
Present Naval Office, say.....	4,254
	108,313

The Bowling Green site would give 183,400 square feet, being 262 by about 700 feet in dimension, or about 73 full city lots. So that the new buildings would have nearly 80 per cent. more area, while they could be built up to any height desired.

A Recipe—How to Make an Exposition.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

If New York does not have the Exposition in 1892 it will, like the boy who broke his fiddle, at least know how to make one. From present indications the recipe will read something like this: Get a number of well-known Names and form from them two unwieldy committees. Call a meeting of these committees where the Names composing them have quite completed their fishing trips, summer vacations, travels in Europe, Mozambique and the uttermost parts of the earth, and fulfilled all their social and business engagements. Wait for them. Take things as easily as possible. Let one of these committees be called a Committee on Sites or Sight, it does not make much difference which, for its duty should be to see the entire city as leisurely as possible. The Names should go over it as though it were an ancient ruin in which there is no saying what might be found. When this is done let the Names meet, and then it should be their duty to call for maps and plans and drawing and surveys and reports from engineers, sanitarians, real estate experts, house-owners, cranks, and the managers of transportation companies. Let them fix upon a distant date to hear them and adjourn, permitting the president or other officials in the meantime to take a trip through Spain. The Names should then disperse and forget as far as possible about the Exposition. When they meet again they should resolve to take further excursions to sites purposely overlooked at first, and this accomplished they should meet (when thoroughly rested) and call for more reports, plans, maps and surveys, etc.; table those received and adjourn. The other Committee of Names, known as the Finance Committee, should assemble to receive donations, towards defraying their own expenses, from newspapers and others wishing to advertise themselves, and should adjourn to consider how to meet the cost of an undertaking, the height, length, breadth and nature of which are positively unknown. This adds the charm of uncertainty to the enterprise and calls for the play of some imagination. This is in accordance with the good rule, that the last thing a business man about to raise money should think of is the amount needed. It will be seen that this makes a perfectly balanced arrangement, for, while the Finance Committee are scheming for the cost of an undefined scheme the Committee on Sites are at the same time seeking land for buildings, the size of which has not been determined upon. In this way the two committees, metaphorically speaking, chase one another around a stump, and the principal thing to be done is to keep them apart and "at it" as long as possible. Haply and happily the Committee on Sites may then come to the conclusion to select a 400-acre site, and the Committee on Finance may, at the same time, concoct a scheme to raise money for a 200 or 300-acre Exposition. The round hole and the square peg problem will be brought up in a new form. Let plenty of discussion, argument, adjournments, delays and so forth follow, and let the entire matter be concluded when the public is sick of the imbecility and mismanagement, and the announcement is made that some other city that has talked less and done more with fewer Names has captured the Exposition.

CHICAGO.

Returning to Town.

Wm. Boggs, who has been summering at Deal Beach, N. J., has returned to town.

Broker M. B. Baer has also returned from Deal Beach.

Builder John Livingston has returned after a trip extending over nearly two months. He visited the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Ausable Chasin, Lake George and Saratoga, after spending a month or more among the hills of Pennsylvania.

Broker Leon Tanenbaum, who went to Europe last May, returned to the city last Sunday. Mr. Tanenbaum came home on the French steamer La Champagne, and has been greatly benefited by the trip abroad.

Among the brokers, builders and investors seen on 'Change, Thursday, were Richard V. Harnett, John R. Foley, Samuel McMillan, W. C. Lester, Myer Finn, L. Z. Bach and Timothy Donovan.

On Wednesday the stalwart form of George F. Johnson was noticed on 'Change. Mr. Johnson is considering several propositions already made by brokers looking to the sale of some of his holdings.

President E. A. Cruikshank was seen at the Exchange several times during the week. He is looking well.

Chas. G. Dobbs' address is now 206 Broadway, instead of East Moriches, L. I.

Investor Leo Schlesinger has his paper sent to 128 East 74th street, instead of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Mayer Kahn, who is a frequent caller at the leading down town offices, has signalized his return by selling a parcel on West 49th street, at $100,000. Mr. Kahn spent the heated term at Long Branch and Sharon Springs, N. Y.

B. L. Kennelly is back to business, after a trip to Lake Placid in the Adirondacks. Mr. Kennelly's ability as a ball player was shown in a match game between the guests at Lake Placid and a nine from Paul Smith's. Mr. Wm. Kennelly was too busy to take an extended vacation during the summer.

Wm. C. Reeber, of J. Reeber's Sons, has returned from Barnegat Bay.

Builder Chas. Twigg is in town again.

P. J. Cushley has returned to town from Black Rock, Conn.

It is rumored that a scheme to build a tunnel under the Harlem River is under way and that a capital of $2,000,000 is ready so soon as the necessary legislation is secured. The plan is to have two driveways, one on each side, and a pathway in the centre for foot passengers. The engineering difficulties, it is understood, can be easily overcome.

The New Tax Rate.

The Board of Aldermen on Tuesday, at 1:35 P. M., fixed the tax rate for the year at $1.95, and the taxes become a lien on all city real estate from that date. Some comment has been made upon the delay which has taken place in the confirmation of the rate. It was even hinted that several Aldermen absented themselves from the meeting of the previous week from motives of personal gain. It is well known that property sold in August is frequently not taken title to until a few days after September 1st, so as to give the buyer an opportunity of acquiring title free of all encum-brances. When title is likely to be taken subject to the confirmation of the tax rate, a provision is generally made in the contract, stating whether the seller or buyer shall pay the new taxes. And as evidence of the manner in which the delay in the confirmation of taxes causes unnecessary hitches in real estate transactions, the following instance is related: In the middle of July last a sale of $200,000 was made, the contract calling for the title to be passed September 3d, so as to allow time for the tax rate to be settled upon by the Board of Aldermen. The taxes on the property amount to about $2,000. The purchasers paid a deposit on signing contract. On September 3d the tax rate had not yet been fixed, and the purchasers did not complete the sale, urging that the seller should pay the taxes, as was the original intention. The former brought suit to recover the deposit paid, but the Court held that the tax had not yet been made a lien, and that the purchaser could consequently not recover. It can easily be seen, therefore, how the delay in fixing the tax rate can be made advantageous to the seller.

President J. V. H. Arnold, of the Board of Aldermen, was seen. He said: "I don't think there is anything to the story that the Aldermen absented themselves purposely. The circumstance is no doubt explained by the absence of several of those gentlemen on their vacations, thus preventing a quorum from being present."

The remedy proposed is easy. The tax rate should be fixed by law as confirmed on the first day of September, or by any other date near that time, so that real estate brokers, buyers and sellers, lawyers and others should know definitely when they can depend upon the taxes being made a lien on property. This would obviate the difficulty in making out contracts for the sale of real estate.

Real Estate Department.

Although the volume of business transacted on 'Change during the week has not been large, the attendance has been greater than during any other week for the last couple of months. Nearly all the offerings were under foreclosure, and more than 50 per cent. were postponed or withdrawn. None of the parcels offered were of a costly character, and the bidding was generally confined to a very few persons. The details are given on another page.

The return to town of investors and speculators has led to a great deal of preliminary work on the part of the brokers, and if some of the reports as to the number of buyers in the market are correct it will not be long before a number of good sales are consummated. We hear that sellers are asking full figures for their properties and are not disposed to make concessions in prices.

On Tuesday, September 17th, Wm. Kennelly & Brother will sell the building known as "Concordia Hall," at Nos. 28 and 30 Avenue A, near 3d street. It is a three and five-story assembly room, and covers a plot 44 x 120. The property is to be sold by order of the Supreme Court under foreclosure.

James L. Wells will sell at auction on Tuesday, September 17th, a plot of four lots on the northwest corner of 10th avenue and 184th street.

Jere, Johnson, Jr., will hold an important partition sale on Tuesday next, by order of Court. The sale will be held at Gravesend avenue and Village road in the town of Gravesend, and the property to be sold embraces 441 valuable lots and about fifteen acres of land belonging to the Stryker estate. Music and collation will be served before the sale.

The lease of a stand in the Real Estate Exchange until May 1st next will be offered at auction on Monday, the 23d inst., by Manager Hardwick.

A firm with offices not far from the Exchange has been paid a commission on the sale of a down-town parcel which did not go through. It is whispered about that Herman Wronkow, of Union square, is the purchaser of No. 55 Broadway, reported sold a couple of weeks ago at about $350,000. In March last the Equitable Life reported having sold the property to a Mr. Miller at $340,000. We hear that the real buyer was John B. Out Among the Builders.

Thom & Wilson have the plans on the boards for five four-story, high stoop, brown stone front residences, to be built by Patrick Farley, on the north side of 74th street, about 300 feet east of 9th avenue. They are each to be 20x60, exclusive of a two-story and basement butler's pantry extension, and they will be in hardwood finish, with all the improvements. They will cost about $110,000. They will be commenced immediately.

Charles P. H. Gilbert is the architect for a five-story apartment house, to be erected for D. F. Kidd on the northeast corner of St. Nicholas avenue and 120th street. The materials are to be red sandstone and two shades of buff brick. All the modern improvements are to be introduced. Cost not yet estimated.

The contracts have been awarded for the work on Henry O. Havemeyer's house on the corner of 66th street and 5th avenue. The plans show a fine dwelling, 113x52, in the French-domestic style. The front will be of picked granite and the roof of corrugated tile. Charles C. Haight is the architect. Mr. Haight also has drawn the plans of the new building of the Leake and Watts Orphan Asylum, just beyond the city lines at Riverdale. The building, three stories high, about 250x90, is built in the Old English style. The front is of red buff brick, trimmed with Potsdam sandstone. It will cost $250,000.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—The week opened with demand keeping up to about former average, no great excess of supply offering and prices steady, but after the storm set in matters became quite dull, and some slackness developed in value. The severity of the weather was such as to practically stop all work, and the influence was felt as well upon deliveries, but as there was also a curtailment of shipments receivers were not burdened with any great excess of supply. The weight of the influence, however, was on the whole adverse to sellers, and finally led to some modification in figures where such course would secure custom, with the change most marked on medium grades, leaving the two extremes of quotations about as before, though it would have to be something extra fine, and buyers very anxious to get it in order to realize the top line at the moment. The storm will make another break into production, and had it come a little later when many manufacturers were nearer completing their intended output, it is thought likely there would have been quite a shutting off for the season. As it is, however, there is a chance that in resuming work it will be carried to full capacity if good weather holds and make no actual reduction in the product, if indeed there is not some little addition. We understand that there is a probability that only the pits of Monday last are likely to be impaired by this storm, as most of the stock at yard was beyond danger on Saturday, and since Tuesday no additional risk has been taken. Little or nothing new has developed regarding consumption, though there is no idea it will fall away to any extent. For Pales the demand seems to retain volume sufficient to exhaust the supply and keep prices in uniform condition.

LATH.—The changes have been moderate, yet principally in sellers' favor, and the market is stronger. Supplies came in slowly, and when buyers were not ready to negotiate here custom could be found out of town, resulting in a steady disposal of the offering, until it is said that there now remains only one cargo afloat from the Provinces unsold, and no knowing when it or any Maine stock coming will arrive owing to the effects of the storm. The latest report of business is at $2.10 per M, obtained without difficulty and unquestionably an inside figure. Consumption is reported as good, with dealers' stock diminishing.

LIME.—Of Rockland the offering has been moderate, the demand for it good enough to afford quick sale, and sellers retained about all the advantages, the price at least remaining unchanged. There was a little more St. John stock available, for which custom was obtained at steady rates, and the receivers of State product report good success in disposing of all they had to offer, with inquiry still sustained.

LUMBER.—Some of the chronic grumblers have rather disagreeable stories to tell of their experience with trade during the week, and they just about make a balance against those enthusiastic operators who are so apt to distort any little gain that may be made into a "decided" improvement in business. Taking the average and conservative report, however, it looks as though the movement was holding well up to all recent gains, and if anything making some little headway, as in the natural course of the season new wants are arising on most consumptive outlets. Dealers, too, are themselves becoming somewhat better customers, not through any feeling of special hurry or anxiety, but simply in following the usual course that at this period ordinarily sets toward the gradual accumulation of supplies for stock against winter requirements. Indeed, a few very good-sized contracts have already been entered upon by some of the larger houses for goods particularly adapted to their wants, and deals in random stuff are becoming somewhat more frequent, with values as a rule well sustained.

Eastern Spruce, it is claimed, has only fair immediate consumption, and buyers make a point of that whenever they can. They can prove it, too, by selecting the right localities in substantiation of the assertion, but those who are interested in getting full information and go hunting about for it find that at many points within the city limits, to say nothing of the city across the bridge, a great deal of stock "exhausts" from week to week, and while dealers may be enabled to meet the calls made upon them for the present they cannot permit a continuous impairment of accumulations, and are therefore reasonably good customers for additions, not only from random offerings but in the matter of specials. Specifications of the latter sort, indeed, are somewhat difficult to place, as the order books of manufacturers are getting pretty well filled up and it makes them feel somewhat independent accordingly.

Piling varies a little at times, just enough to afford buyers an occasional opportunity to claim and partially substantiate a slight gain only to be followed by a reaction, for it is now as it has been all the season, that unless advantages are secured from some receiver anxious to get rid of a cargo, bids must range up to a full line of valuation to be successful.

Hemlock has the usual all sorts of reports, which are not entirely free from evidences of some little jealousy among operators on the selling side, with statements now and then almost flatly contradictory. It looks, however, as if the ordinarily shrewd buyer need not labor under any great disadvantage or pay extreme quotations, unless desiring something of rather radical strain in the matter of quality or having a bias as to where orders shall be placed. Deliveries have been somewhat free of late.

White Pine is doing no worse, and in some respects the market tends towards a general gain so far as the movement of supplies in bulk lots may be concerned. There seems to be a certain number of salesmen who cannot get a wholesome grip upon this market and as a natural sequence they complain now and then rather loudly, but others are going right along picking up orders, mostly for small lots to be sure, but now and then getting in a deal for very respectable-sized invoices. There is a considerable amount of stock purchased also that cannot be called local business only so far as having the buyer located here, as it is done mostly by mail with mills whose owners have become thoroughly educated to the wants of their customers and can be depended upon to serve just what is wanted. On all leading grades of stock former rates are ruling and may be considered as about steady.

Yellow Pine retains a pretty good and even market as a rule. There is a certain amount of talk about operators cutting loose from the restrictions imposed by combination rules, etc., but if it be done at all it is certainly not to an extent sufficient to affect the general status of the market. Some operators might, if they would, give more information upon the actual status of trade, but the average impression obtained is of a healthy market, with fair running demand, and values supported on standard goods with little or no difficulty.

Carolina Pine timber is rarely salable on this market, and has only a nominal sort of valuation. Otherwise, however, the stuff is selling very well up to the average manufacturers have been accustomed to, either locally or out of town, and value is well supported as a result of the careful preservation of quality, standard and general close attention to the wants of all desirable customers.

Hardwoods are still a disappointment to those who have been waiting for a boom on this market, and the chances are all against anything of that kind materializing. Of course the prospects for consumption are better, indeed there is some improvement in that line already developing; but dealers are prepared to meet it apparently from the accumulations in hand, and many of them when tendered the suggestion that restocking may become necessary, quietly retort that they have prepared for that emergency by contracting for supplies yet to come forward. The selling of bulk lots, therefore, is a matter of some uncertainty, with a more or less nominal line of valuation, though probably there is no need to fear any special slaughter on price, unless quality is unusually derelict.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Northwestern Lumberman says:

The dealers are quite well satisfied that there will be a heavy movement of lumber during the remainder of the year, and that next winter's sales will also be large. Their only anxiety now is to have prices firm up, so that they can realize a fair profit. At present prices are weak and flexible, so that competition necessitates cutting and concessions to customers that make it impossible to secure a paying margin in the handling of stock. There is a general complaint of this throughout the trade, and an earnest desire for change. Dealers do not hesitate to say that unless prices harden soon the year's business will be a profitless one. They are hoping, however, that the demand will be such that it will tend to firmness in time to save a little profit on the late fall and early winter trade.

Evidently the dealers have come to the conclusion that the cargo market has reached its weakest point for the season. Lake freight rates will soon go up, lumber piled at the mill will be dry, or partly so, and the manufacturers will hold for present or advancing prices. It is seldom that a slump in cargo prices occurs in the fall. For this reason the yard dealers must count on firmer prices in the yards to regain what has been lost.

There is no reason why fair profits should not be realized on all lumber above the grade of flat common. C strips are scarce and in demand. B and clear will be wanted for car factory and siding purposes. Recently good sales of sidings have been made in the East, while Western strips suitable for siding are scarce. Holders of all select and clear lumber should be able to make enough on it this year to somewhat compensate for their losses on piece stuff, fencing and common cull boards.

The hemlock trade is gaining. Dealers say that customers who try hemlock come back for more. Thus the trade is likely to become established. Hemlock lath are in demand, the supply here not being equal to the requirement. Such boards and strips as have been carried in stock have also been readily taken, and more could have been sold if they had been on hand.

And referring to cargo market:

The commission men report a good demand for piece stuff and high grade strips. Short green piece stuff is selling for $9 to $9.25, the last named figure being realized only when the tally is especially inviting. Slim jims are in better demand than earlier in the season, and sell for about $10. A load in which there was a percentage of 2x12 was sold at $10.75. Strictly dry piece stuff is held at $10. Some have accumulated at the mills, especially at Manistee. If the manufacturers can realize 75 cents to $1 a thousand on such lumber more than it was worth when green, it will compensate them for holding. Yard men will buy it if they can load it on to cars or wagons from the dock and deliver it to customers at $1 advance on the cargo price. The tendency hereafter will be to call for dry piece stuff, because the period of good seasoning weather is near a close.

The Timberman says:

Chicago is losing its grip on the Eastern trade to an extent which is a trifle disturbing to the dealers; at least, it is losing some of its trade for good lumber. It is true that there is considerable medium and low grade lumber now going east of the Alleghenies, but the distribution of good lumber and medium grades has been transferred to the north to a considerable extent. The Northwest is getting such a complete and direct trade via Tonawanda that Chicago is losing ground because of the difference of freights between Tonawanda and Chicago, caused primarily by the difference in barge rates, which are quite as favorable to Tonawanda as Chicago. It is therefore hard work for Chicago to compete with her friends at the far north.

Perhaps no market in the United States puts its lumber into better shape for the East than the Chicago market. Particularly is the interior finish material put up in extra good grades. It is necessary that such should be the case. In the first place if the lumber dealer ships cull flooring, many of the Eastern dealers will expect to get "D" flooring every time, but the thoroughly intelligent dealer will take a cull strip occasionally and not "kick," and need not "kick" for the No. 2 fencing strips are as good as cull flooring. They will pay $21 delivered on the Boston rate right along, and take what they can get. This grade of stock is equal to our No. 2 fencing flooring, and is as good as No. 2 fencing. Siding has a good reputation, such as is sent from this market, with three out of five dealers in the East, who will most frequently raise the grade from No. 2 to No. 1 and from No. 1 to clear, after he gets it. Many of the wholesale dealers mark the lumber up a grade for the Eastern dealers by their instruction, and frequently the "kickers" themselves will mark it up a grade.

Occasionally the merchant will "kick" on No. 1 or No. 2 siding, although he will be quite as likely, as before said, to raise it a grade after making any demands that may seem fit to urge on the party from whom he purchases it. Such experiences are quite common. But these comments may seem to reflect somewhat on Eastern dealers. It may appear as though everybody down there was a "kicker." Such is not the case. There are many reliable firms East who are not disposed to want the whole hog; they do not play the bluff game when they get a car or a half dozen cars of lumber, nor ask $2 off a thousand, but are frequently quite willing to divide on half of that sum, or even accept the goods as shipped.

Philadelphia is a very critical market. The lumber shipped to dealers there must be handled with a great deal of care. New York City is not nearly so hard a market to do business with. The Gothamites are very fond of nice wide tub plank, for one thing. They ask for it and will not take anything "hard" in grades—nothing that is not strictly uppers—and will pay $55 therefor. They have paid $60 for dressed both sides and extra wide. It is used for stationary laundry tubs, and must be strictly prime, so that it will not rot out quickly under the very rigid use it is put to by the laundryman. The Gothamites look upon black-knotted stuff as inferior. They would rather have the red cross knot any time, and in this they are right, to be sure, as the red cross knot will seldom get loose or come out.

There is not a great deal of flooring goes East from this market. Some of it, dressed all sides and matched, goes under the name of flooring, but it is used for sheathing, &c. Extra fine flooring of 1 1/4 of 4 inches for verandas is frequently called for. In fact, it is in good demand right along, but the North Carolina and Southern pine generally is taking the "bakery" at the East for flooring.

ENGLAND.

The Timber Trades Journal says as follows:

American Black Walnut.—This is for the most part quiet, and though holders of stock are anxious to trade, and will accept more moderate prices in order to do so, it does not seem to have induced much increase in buying as yet.

American Whitewood.—The market continues steady, and we believe buyers have displayed more freedom in their operations. The pressure to sell is diminishing, but we are not aware of any actual improvement in prices, although there is greater regularity.

American Oak.—Stocks are not now so excessive as they were some time back. There is a fair trade doing, and prices are generally firm. Wholesale dealers speak more hopefully for the future, but, of course, this will solely depend upon how the market is supplied.

METALS.—COPPER.—Ingot has found about an average demand from ordinary sources representing the consumptive outlet, but at somewhat irregular rates.

Indeed, the market has been a great deal disturbed of late by the want of harmony among manufacturers, and strong evidence that no positive pooling arrangement has really been perfected, a condition of affairs pretty sure to operate to the advantage of buyers, and demand is in consequence figured down closer and closer to actual necessity. Quotations are somewhat nominal at about 11 1/4¢ for Lake, and 10 1/4¢ for casting brands. Manufactured Copper without important change, the business running fair and steady, though likely to be reduced under any permanent decline in material. We quote as follows:

Sheets, not above 30x72 in., 16 oz. and over, 20¢; do, 14 to 16 oz, 21¢; do, 12 to 14 oz, 22¢; do, 10 to 12 oz, 23¢; do, 8 to 10 oz, 24¢; do, under 8 oz, 25¢. Sheets longer than 72 inches add 1¢. for 12x14 oz, 2¢. for 10x12 oz, and 3¢. for 8x10 oz. Sheets, not above 36x96 in., 16 oz and over, 20¢; do, 16 to 32 oz, 20¢; do, 14 to 16 oz, 22¢; do, 12 to 14 oz, 24¢; do, 10 to 12 oz, 25¢; do, 8 to 10 oz, 30¢. Sheets longer than 96 inches add 1¢. for under 16 oz; and 1¢. for 8 to 10 oz. Sheets, not above 48x96, 32 to 64 oz, 20¢; do, 16 to 32 oz, 22¢; do, 14 to 16 oz, 25¢; do, 12 to 14 oz, 26¢. Sheets 60x96 and over, 20¢; for 32 to 64 oz, and over, and 25¢. for 16 to 32 oz. All bath tub sheets, per lb., 16 oz, 23¢; 14 oz, 25¢; 12 oz, 27¢; and 10 oz, 30¢. Bolt copper, 3/4 inch diameter and over, 30¢. Circles, 60 diameter and less, 3¢. above price of sheets of same thickness; circles, 60 to 96 do do, 5¢. do; circles, 96 do and over, 6¢. do. Segment and pattern sheets, 3¢. above price of sheets required to cut them from. Cold or hard rolled copper, 1 1/2¢. per lb. above the foregoing prices. Copper bottom, 25¢. per lb. Iron—Scotch Pig has retained a firm position upon the support of the continued very encouraging accounts from abroad, where figures are in some cases above a parity of this market. Demand, however, is indifferent, and the general run of business rather slow. We quote at $19.50@23.00 per ton, according to brand, delivery, etc. American Pig has secured a very good demand with some increase of business in foundry grades and full prices obtained without difficulty. Indeed, there has been a little buoyant talk on the market at times, but agents of the leading brands do not appear inclined to raise the line of values at the moment. Deliveries on contract are quite free. We quote at $17.00@17.50 per ton for No. 1 X foundry; $16.00@16.50 for No. 2 X do.; and $15.00@15.25 for Gray Forge.

Old metal shows a sort of natural irregularity, yet on the whole a pretty fair business has in one way or another taken place and very good prices as a rule obtained, especially on rails. The offerings are not large. We quote at about $24.00@25.00 for old rails; $20.50@21.00 for No. 1 wrought scrap; $14.00@15.00 for cast scrap, and $17.50@18.00 for car wheels. Steel rails meet with some attention, though there is no special measure of force or anxiety to the demand in this locality. Advice from the West, however, have been stronger and that gives an additional support to the market, especially as most mills are under contract. We quote at $28.00@28.50 per ton at the mills and $29.00@30.00 do. at tide water. Manufactured Iron meets with no great demand for lots from steel, though some dealers report an increasing tendency to business. There has also been some very good orders placed within a few weeks in the way of special contracts for architectural work, etc. All calls are readily met. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 1.90¢@2.10¢ from store, and refined at 2.00¢@2.30¢; Rods, round and square, 2.10¢@2.30¢; Bands, 2.20¢@2.30¢; Norway Nail Rods, 4¢@5¢, and domestic sheet on the basis of 2.75¢@2.80¢, for common Nos. 10@16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10¢. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig has no special degree of speculative attention, but a fair, general trade demand prevails, and for some little time past holders have inclined to firm more on the plea of anticipated diminished supplies. We quote at 4.00¢@4.05¢, as to quality. The manufactures of lead are quoted: Bar, 4 1/2¢; pipe, 5¢; sheet 6 1/2¢, less the usual discount to the trade; and tin lined pipe, 15¢; block tin pipe 45¢, on same terms. Tin—Pig was sold short pretty freely last month, and a squeeze has since followed with the speculative price in consequence forced up. For natural trade purposes, however, the deal was slow with buyers contesting an increase of value. We quote at about 21 1/2

@2c. for round lots and 22@22½c. for jobbing parcels. Tin plates secure a very fair general passing trade for all standard grades, and with supplies under control the market rules firmly all around. Futures are in some cases held firmer than spots. We quote prices as follows: I. C. Charcoal, ½ cross assortment, Melyn grades, $5.50@5.52½; each additional X add $1.50; I. C. Charcoal, ½ cross assortment, Allaway grade, $4.70@4.72½, each additional X add $1; Charcoal terms, M. F. grade, 14x20, $6.00@6.65; M. F. grade, 20x28, $13.30@13.25; Worcester, 14x20, $4.75@4.80; Worcester, 20x28, $9.50@9.55; Deane grade, 14x20, $4.25@4.30; Dean grade, 20x28, $8.45@8.55; Allaway grade, 14x20, $4.10@4.15; Allaway grade, 20x28, $8.25@8.30; I. C. Coke, Penian grade, $4.30@4.32½; J. B. grade, 14x20, $4.35@4.37½; I. C. Bessemer steel, squares, $4.60 basis; I. C. Siemens steel, squares, $4.65@4.70. Snelter undergoes little or no change of importance, the usual trade demand prevailing with prices steady as stocks are under control. We quote at 5.10@5.20c. for ordinary brands of Western.

NAILS.—The market as a whole appears to be pretty well in hand, and is maintained in a generally steady position. A certain amount of competition exists between the leading points of production, but that affects bulk parcels in the main, and when it comes right down to job lots buyers have little chance for advantage. We quote at $1.85@1.90 per keg for car lots, and $1.95@2.00 per keg for parcels from store.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Out-of-town trade has been taking considerable stock in one way or another, and with local demand keeping up to an average the movement is satisfactory and about up to calculations. This, in conjunction with the excellent control exercised over staple articles, such as leads, etc., gives matters a healthy tone, with good reason to expect that it can be retained. Linseed Oil seems at times a little irregular, but sells fairly and closes at 57@58c. for Western and 60@61c. for City. Spirits Turpentine has continued slow of sale, but the influence of restricted offerings has been stimulating and prices are higher. We quote at 45@46c. per gallon, according to quantity, delivery, etc.

TAR AND PITCH.—With some shipping orders filled the available stock is reduced and the position strengthened. Local consumption, however, keeps within about average bounds. We quote Pitch at $1.40@1.50 per bbl.; Tar at $2.40@2.60, according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date. Whenever the rate is not given, read as 6 per cent.

+ Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

A lien of $750 is recorded against me. The lienor delivered some granite blocks weighing some four to five tons without adequate and safe Loois holes, though contract specially called for them. The stone-setters refused to hoist these blocks in condition, owing to the danger attached. I offered to pay lienor if he would try and set even one of these blocks. He refused. Evidently he considered his own carcass more valuable than the lives of the poor laborers entrusted with the work. I deal with the banditti in the building trade as I see fit, lien or no lien.

Wall street seems to be full of stocks bought in anticipation of big crops, and consequently heavy business to the railroads. The big crops are here, so are the customers with their stocks, and both are awaiting the next development—a good market to sell on. As for our wheat, Europe seems to be in no hurry to buy, and when we consider how well they got along last year, with short crops all around, it is plain enough that they are not at all frightened about the present outlook. Our farmers do not care to sell at ruling prices, and railroads can get no further very large earnings until wheat begins to move. As for the corn crop it takes a long time for this to be reflected in the benefits to railroads, as it must go largely into animals before it comes to the market, and the corn crop is moved more in the shape of hogs and provisions than in any other way. Our cotton, however, Europe must have at some price, and the clique which is buying it knows that not only must Europe have cotton very soon, but every one of our own mills is also short for manufacturing purposes. English and Continental spinners will put off buying as long as possible, but the best cotton is always that which comes first to the market; so we can surely count upon a lot of exchange being made in our favor in the immediate future whether grain moves or not. The rate question with the railroads, though far from being settled, seems to be gradually confining itself within narrower bounds, and should it be satisfactorily adjusted Wall street will soon again start off on the road to higher prices. The money question may be relied upon to soon settle itself, and tight money with plenty of business in sight is a very different thing from tight money brought on by over-speculation.

The government report of the exports of provisions from the United States during the past month shows that we are continuing to reap the benefit of the large corn crop of last year. Coming as it does at the moment when another large crop is assured it is pleasant news, as it foretakens a continuance of prosperous times so far as several of the principal products of the country are concerned. During August we shipped abroad more than twice as much corn as we did a year ago, twice as much ham, nearly twice as much lard, 50 per cent. more pork and over 10,000,000 pounds more bacon. Of course, all this is nothing but corn in a different shape. Every large crop of this cereal increases the live stock of the country, cheapens food, in this way reacting upon other industries, and adds to the surplus of provisions for export. With wheat it is becoming more and more difficult for us to meet the competition of other countries, and there is little doubt that in the future our supremacy in the markets of the world as to this cereal will be disputed more strongly than ever. Indeed, considering the rapid growth of our population, it may not be long before the home market will be the only market we need. But with corn we are so easily first that it is likely to become a more important factor on our foreign commerce than it is.

So far as the newspapers are concerned, the opposition to the Bowling Green site for the new Custom House and Appraiser's buildings is principally political. The selection was the act of a Republican administration, hence every paper Democratically inclined feels called upon to condemn it. No good can come out of Nazareth; though at the time ex-Secretary of the Treasury Fairchild was considering this same site, and was inclined to select it these critics had not a word to say about its undesirableness which now strikes them so forcibly. But then, Fairchild was a Democrat. Quite apart from politics, however, the site is about as good as could be chosen, despite all that has been said by up-town importers, who have talked from first to last to suit their own interests. So far as it goes that is all right. The selection of a site should be a matter of interest as distinct from other considerations, but the interest that decides the question should be not the interest of the up-town importers, or the down-town importers, but the interests of the entire port of New York, which it should not be forgotten includes Brooklyn, the seat of about one-half of the commerce of the port. Apart, however, from the interests of our sister city, which after all are our interests too, in the choice between an up-town and a down-town site, the facts favor the latter. Surveyor Beattie says there are fifty-three bonded warehouses in this city, and they are one-third of a mile nearer to Bowling Green than to the present Appraiser's Store at Greenwich and Laight streets, and of the number of packages sent to these stores the destination of about .51 was south of Canal street, about .26 between Canal and 14th streets, and only .05 above 14th street. All that has been said about the heavier expenses for hauling that will be entailed upon importers by the choice of the Bowling Green site for the Appraiser's Stores is largely nonsense, because packages for appraisement are delivered at the expense of the government, while other packages remain at the wharves where they arrive, and are thence carted direct to their destination. From the tenor of the objections that have been made it might be imagined that all merchandise imported, every ton of pig iron, every barrel of soda, or beer, all machinery, and every crate of goods passed through the Appraiser's Store, and, indeed, the Custom House as well.

In the recent strike in London, philanthropists, Socialistic reformers, Radicals and the "friends of Labor" generally, worked up a great deal of sympathy for the dockyard men by descanting on the "tyranny of Capital" and the "duty of employers," until one might be led to believe that in some way a certain portion of mankind has become tainted with vices from which another portion is wholly, or to a great part, free. This idea, or something like it—that there are two classes of men, the wolves and the sheep, and that the latter need constant protection against the former—underlies a great part of the Socialistic and paternal legislation of recent years, and has created and is creating a mass of purely class laws which in many cases are identical in principle with much of the obnoxious legislation of bygone centuries. The difference is this, that the legislative machinery then ground in the interests of the aristocracy, whereas to-day it is grinding almost as finely for Labor.

The criticism of Socialists to-day upon Capital is after all mainly a criticism upon human nature, and such phrases as the "tyranny of Capital," "the selfishness of Capital," with which our ears are filled would merely be completed by being widened into the "tyranny and selfishness of Human Nature." As a proof of this one has only to consider the treatment to which Labor subjected the men who took the place of the strikers in the London dockyards. They were bodily maltreated and in many cases driven from work. Every strike in this country wherein the "scab" has taken a part has furnished examples of this, and everyone who has had any dealings with Union labor knows how tyrannous and positively unjust many of the Union rules are, not only to the employer but to Labor itself, and especially to that larger part of it which is not organized and includes the most unfortunate. It is as certain as anything can be, that if Labor took the place of Capital to-morrow the "working class" would be no better treated than it is to-day, and we know that in co-operative enterprises, wherever they have been established, where the operatives are at once capitalists and laborers, wages are no higher nor is the treatment better than in the factories of the capitalists. That Capital as a whole is reaping the fruits of the earth and starving the rest of mankind is disproved by all the statistics that have been obtained. Edward Atkinson has shown that 90 per cent. of the firms that go into business go out of it by failure, and the erroneous ideas which obtain regarding the condition of Capital are largely due to taking a few extraordinary cases, such as the Vanderbilts, Carnegie and certain railroad and trust magnates, and holding them up as typical of all other capitalists. The same method of arguing applied to Labor would yield queer results.

The question which we should never lose sight of in all discussion of the subject is this: Is Labor less tyrannous, less selfish than Capital, or are both part of mankind possessed in an equal degree of its virtues and faults? The judgments which we pass on others are, nine cases out of ten, judgments on ourselves. During the great blizzard in 1888, if we remember rightly, some of the employés of the Western Union in this city roundly denounced the selfishness of the management in deducting wages for a part of the time that they were away from their posts. Yet it was shown that some of the employés easily made their way to the office the day after the storm, and many of those that stayed away spent their time inspecting the "sights" about the city. It might be added to this that these men themselves demand extra pay for overwork, and during this same blizzard were paid extra wages for the overtime they put in because of the rush of business which followed the resumption of the telegraphic service.

There are many laws on the statute books regulating employers. What would be said to a suggestion to pass only one law to regulate Labor as to its efficiency, cleanliness, industry and so forth. Some people are crying for a "minimum-wage" law. Suppose, at the same time, a maximum-wage law were also passed. An eight-hour day law is demanded. What would be said to the suggestion to put a clause into the bill making it obligatory for every able-bodied man to work at least eight hours every day in industries where such hours of labor would not injure the constitution. The one is as much needed as the other. Overwork is bad; but it is doubtful whether it produces as much evil as idleness. We have only to look at the matter in this light to detect class legislation.

There appeared not long since an interview in the Evening Post with Bank Superintendent Willis S. Paine. Certain statements made in that and other papers in reference to the national building associations made it appear that these organizations were conducting their business in an unauthorized and illegal manner; and it was inquired of Mr. Paine if he had any authority to make an investigation of such charges, answering them if they were true, or disprove them if they were false. Mr. Paine asserted that he had no such authority. The associations are organized either under the laws of 1851 or 1887; and under those laws the superintendent can not make an investigation into the affairs of any building and loan association, local or national, except when an application to do so, signed by five or three members of the association, is made to him, the theory of the law being that if the shareholders themselves are satisfied it is a pretty good guarantee that the affairs of the organization are safely conducted. In making these assertions, however, it would seem as if the superintendent had overlooked a passage of an act passed in 1875, amendatory of the act of 1851, which reads as follows:

* * * And the said superintendent may, if he be of the opinion that it is desirable, require that a like report, either wholly or in part, as to the particulars aforesaid, be made to him at any time, by any such corporation aforesaid, within such period as he shall designate.

He is further empowered, if it appear from such a report that the organization is conducting its business in an unsafe or an unauthorized manner, to order and force by law the discontinuance of such practices.

An investigation such as Mr. Paine has it in his power to make is greatly needed, for some such investigation can alone justify or disprove the attacks that are now being made on the national building and loan associations. If he does not wish to proceed under the act of 1875, it certainly would not be difficult to get three shareholders in one of the national associations, who have been sufficiently alarmed by the attacks made on such associations, to sign a petition requesting an investigation. That would be the first and certainly the easiest step. The local associations expect, if they find their attacks justified by official investigation, to get a law passed limiting the operations of a New York association to New York State, or perhaps even to a still smaller area, and forcing every organization operating in the State to organize under its laws. Mr. Paine has already recommended to the Legislature a law limiting the boundary of every association at least to the precincts of the county in which its office is located or to the adjoining counties. He recommended also local supervision whereby the clerks of the various counties might be granted special powers over the organization and general management of all the associations within their respective counties. It may be doubted if such a law will effect the purpose it is intended to effect. The difficulty with the national associations does not seem to be that they operate over large sections of territory, but that in so operating they adopt a wasteful system of management, give the shareholders no voice in its operations, charge separate fees for an expense fund, and so on. A national association with none of these characteristics is perfectly conceivable. But even allowing that such a law would strike at the root of the difficulty, it would be not difficult for clever men to overcome its restrictive provisions. So far as we can see, for instance, there would be nothing to prevent the American Association of Minneapolis from organizing separate associations in every county, and carry on its business practically as it does at present. It would simply lead to a little more conniving than there is at present.

It is a suggestive fact not hitherto noticed that the schism which has recently taken place between Henry George and Hugh Pentecost, was created by a difference of opinion substantially similar to that which divided Dr. Richard Congreve from the rest of Comte's English followers. Mr. Pentecost has been protesting, as we understand it, against the economic turn which the single tax agitation has taken and longs for the good old days when the anti-poverty movement in the exuberance of youth was animated by something of a religious fervor, while Henry George believes in convincing by argument as well as by eloquence. In the same way one party of Comte's followers believed that in appealing to the proletariat they should, in their master's phraseology, endeavor to touch the "heart," while the other wanted to influence the "head," that is, one party wished to devote their endeavors to a propagation of good scientific doctrine, while the other wished at the same time to arouse the feelings of humanity in men. This is hardly the place to go into historic parallels; but it would not be difficult to point a similarity of circumstance in the lines of division that have dissipated the energy of other social, philosophical, and economic movements.

The repeated schisms that have taken place between Mr. George and his followers is generally regarded as a symptom of weakness. This is by no means necessarily true. It would be but a weak doctrine about which there were no difference of opinion, even among those who believe in it. The history of all social and religious movements is simply a history of a difference of opinion. It is unnecessary to state examples; the induction is too complete to render them necessary. And so, arguing by analogy, it does not prove that the single tax agitation lacks vitality simply because certain of the agitators are men who think for themselves. It is not meant, of course, that a difference of opinion is a sign of strength; but it is certainly not a sign of weakness. Let any one who has seen in the divisions between Mr. George and his followers an indication that the holders of real estate have nothing more to fear from the single tax movement quickly banish any such belief. The fight is not over yet. The probabilities are rather that it has hardly begun. We are inclined to think that it is in Great Britain rather than this country that the war will first be waged, because on the other side the men interested are more influential in political circles and because it is more easy there with Parliament, constituted as it is, to bring a radical scheme before the public and by continued discussion to make it a living issue. Here, on the contrary, the agitation must be a State not a national one, and our political conditions are unfavorable to the introduction of radical measures, unless there is a strong popular demand for them. But wherever and however the agitation is continued, we have not begun as yet to see the beginning of the end.

Changes in the Real Estate World.

During the past three or four weeks real estate brokers, auctioneers and others have been busy with the preliminary work for the coming season, which, by the way, there is good reason for believing will be at least active if not prosperous. These preparations have become more and more important every year until now they are so essential to success that men used to the "old ways" cannot but be struck with the changes that have been made in the method of doing business during the past ten or fifteen years, not only in this particular but in many others.

A decade, or perhaps a decade and a-half ago, competition was not the fierce struggle that it is to-day, wherein even the "fittest" find it no easy thing to survive. The real estate business of the city was then practically in the hands of a few big firms. They controlled the largest and choicest part of it, and obtained it, too, with little effort, almost without leaving their offices. It is within the last ten years that men have flocked into the business from nearly every division of the commercial and industrial armies; until the saying, that a car-driver appears in the role of a real estate broker within fifteen minutes of his discharge, is regarded as only a slightly too forcible expression of a fact. Certain it is, however, that some of the most successful real estate men of the present day failed previously in their commercial career.

The increase in the number of brokers and the fact that no inconsiderable portion of them came from commercial ranks has had two effects upon the business. In the first place, competition has been intensified to a degree not dreamed of some years ago; and in the second place, the real estate business has been revolutionized by the introduction of methods which were formerly regarded as pertaining wholly to the "shop." The ambition of the influential brokers of fifteen years ago was to be "professional," to-day their methods are perforce mercantile. The broker can no longer sit in his office in Eastern fashion "at the receipt of custom," waiting for clients to consult him and place their estates, parcels or plots in his hands for disposal. To be successful now he has to be, in the common phrase, a "hustler." He has to "drum up" business, look after clients, use printers' ink freely, and keep his weather-eye wide open on his rivals. The successful men of to-day are the men who have pursued "commercial" methods the most energetically; indeed, that these methods are now employed and are recognized by everyone as essential to success is to be credited principally to the head of one of the largest and most successful firms in the business. He was among the first, if indeed he was not the first, to conduct a real estate office on precisely the same lines as any other business. It should be observed that though the number of brokers has been greatly increased and the crowd is, not to put too fine a point on it, more heterogeneous than ever, the real estate brokerage business is on a much higher and firmer footing than in the past. To be successful in it men have to be better equipped mentally and socially than ever. Larger sums are dealt in, nicer calculations have to be made, experience and character count for more than ever they did. The large brokers' offices reflect the change. They are very different in their appearance from the offices of fifteen years ago. They are no longer bare rooms well papered with old posters. They are now some of the finest in the city, with a large staff of clerks of more than average address. The broker is no longer the speculator also, as he was in past years. The two parted long ago, and to-day the speculator is the brokers' client.

The speculator, too, has his tale to tell of the changes which have been brought about in the last ten years or so. The field for speculation has been narrowed wonderfully; so that there is less of it now than ever. The chances one way or the other were once great, just as they were in wheat and oil and other commodities that are now pretty stable in value, and offer a much smaller margin for gain than formerly. Real estate used to be acquired on option and offered for sale publicly or privately by speculators long before they acquired title, or thought of doing so. The value of city realty is well established to-day. As to about what it will "fetch" there can be no very great uncertainty.

Property used to be acquired by speculators by the payment of a very small sum down, in the hope of catching a purchaser for it and a large profit. The speculation of to-day is done largely by the building loan men, and they seldom buy property until they have secured a purchaser ready to build with the money they advance to him. It is these operators who have made money lately, and are making it to-day. They are a distinct and very powerful factor in the real estate world. They have been instrumental in building up the city to an extent not generally recognized. The great movement on the west side was started by one of them, and the west side as it is to-day is really the creation of these men. There are now half a dozen building loan operators whom we could name who alone have at least $2,000,000 always out and being constantly turned over. This fact itself is sufficient to indicate the scale that building loan operations have attained.

One of the results of the arrival of this newcomer into the field in the last ten years has been to increase, relatively speaking, the cost of buildings. The man he advances money to is usually a successful mechanic, foreman or builder with little capital of his own. The land which the building loan operator has purchased is turned over to him at an advance which represents usurious interest. The money he gets to carry on construction is also obtained on hard terms, and the building material man to whom he applies for credit adds a generous percentage to his profit to cover the risk he incurs. Houses built under this cent. per cent. system are naturally somewhat more expensive than they would be if built for cash. Probably, too, the construction is not quite as substantial as it might be. The building loan man, however, is seldom the loser. Whatever loss there is falls upon other shoulders than his, and it may be said that, on the whole, the builder under this system seldom makes more than a foreman's wages. Now and again, of course, he makes a strike, and afterwards he and others are ready to gamble on the chances. In this, however, he is only like "all sorts and conditions of men."

Putting so much of the building that is done into the hands of builders of this class has not improved the architectural appearance of the city. The necessity to pare every expense as much as possible leads the builder to employ cheaper architects, whose efforts to design a "striking" exterior are more likely to produce the monstrous than the artistic. We used to complain years ago of the sameness of our buildings in both design and material. That complaint, indeed, cannot be made to-day. The brown stone front and the four-story high stoop, or English basement, has given place to the front that falls little short of being something between a geological display and a brickmaker's exhibit, arranged in a confusion of styles suggestive of a nightmare that might afflict a gourmandizing architectural student.

The trouble with private philanthropy is that it is seldom bestowed in the right place. Such a statement may not be universally true; but it certainly applies to most of the endowments and gifts made over to educational institutions. The gratitude of the public for their gifts should not hide the fact that in giving the money the philanthropist takes care that everybody shall know for all time who has given it. He can be compared to the many French psychologists of the present day, who delight in making sensational rather than instructive experiments in hypnotism. These scientists are seekers of truth; but they like to make truth interesting. So, too, many philanthropists, while they desire to do good, are careful to see that their own names are attached to their acts. In this way numerous small colleges have been started from one end of the country to the other—named, of course, after their founders. The public is better with than without them; but the same amounts of money concentrated and judiciously distributed among already existing institutions would enable the latter to provide facilities far more complete than at present, and would enable students to get far better instruction for the same money. The report for 1885 and 1886 of the United States Education Bureau gives the total number of institutions granting degrees in the liberal arts at 345.

Out of this enormous total very few answer the modern conception of a university—not more than nine or ten at most; and nearly all of these are found in the Atlantic States. Meanwhile the West and South are covered with small colleges, which bestow degrees so lavishly that an A. B. and A. M., or even a Ph. D., is not a guarantee of the scholarship of its holder.

We know that this is a familiar complaint, but it is important enough to bear reiteration. It is not denied that these small colleges perform a good work in the rural districts in making these facilities for a certain kind of higher education a part of the visible daily life of the countrymen, thus awakening a desire for knowledge in people that need some such external stimulus. But it is equally true that there should be some limitation of the degree-granting powers, and a greater concentration of facilities. It would be, perhaps, going too far to recommend a single State-regulated university in every State, because such a system might well check this flow of private philanthropy, which, if ill-directed at present, may later turn into wider channels; but at all events there ought to be some distinction made between the value of a degree that represents high school work and one which represents university work. The root of the evil, as we have said, is to be found in the fact that philanthropy itself is not untouched by selfishness. The same evil shows itself even in such gifts as the larger universities get at present. The donor generally provides that his gift shall be spent in a certain way, which may or may not be what the institution most urgently needs. Thus he provides for the building of a dormitory or the foundation of some scholarships, both to be named after himself. Such gifts are useful; but they are not as useful as they might be if no special provision was made for their expenditure. Not infrequently, at Harvard for instance, the cost of the building has been greater than the donation, and the corporation has been obliged to make up the deficiency out of a very empty cash box. If a rich man really wishes to put his money where it will do the most good, he should first find the really deserving institution which needs it most and then give without bestowing his own name and ideas at the same time.

Some Possible Legal Complications.

Citizens of the north end have been kept in such a state of exaltation at the prospect of seeing the Harlem Railroad tracks depressed that they have not been able to look at anything beyond the promised relief. Consequences have not entered largely into their calculations. Only give them spectacle of the cars rattling along below the level of the street grades, and they will submit to any inconveniences that may follow.

But will they always remain in this amiable humor? A person who will take the trouble of examining the improvements, now that the cars are running upon two of the four tracks that the cut is to contain at their final grade, will see some things that are very suggestive of breakers ahead. A question will be raised upon the right of the city to change the street grades in the interest of a railway company in a manner that will entail heavy expenses on property-holders along the line without bringing any compensating benefits.

The Harlem Railroad, between the Harlem River and Fordham, it is well known, ran upon a pretty level grade while it remained a surface road. It rose so gradually over the entire four miles that the rise was hardly noticed, and though the elevation was considerably greater at Fordham than at the bridge, it was not enough greater to suggest an up grade. The grade of the streets, too, had been made to conform, or rather they naturally conformed, to the grade of the railway, and the whole surface got along very harmoniously together. It looked like a proper grade for the future streets of what must soon become a very densely-populated district. It was evidently not thought that the surface needed elevating. Webster avenue, a thoroughfare which runs parallel with the road, a trifle below the railway grade at Tremont, was sewered, and there are no indications yet that the sewer was thought so low that it needed raising.

But observe the change which a little depression in railway tracks can make. As far as the eye can reach, looking up and down Webster avenue, the brick man-holes of its sewers, looking like the round towers erected in the Druidical days of the Old Country, rise to an elevation of ten or twelve feet from the ground. But why is this true? Because it was necessary to carry them to this elevation so that they could be on a level with the level of the so-called railway cut. Perhaps Mount Hope can furnish sand enough to grade up Webster avenue to the level of its man-holes.

What is true of Webster avenue is true of many other streets, chiefly, however, of the streets crossing the railway. It is not so much a depression that is being made as an elevation. Like the corresponding work along 4th avenue, south of the Harlem River, the first object to be attained seems to have been the creation of a ridge, and after this is finished the streets are to be graded up to its level. We say that this is the purpose, because it is not to be presumed that the Park Department would repeat the 4th avenue blunder of leaving the cut higher than the grades of the lateral streets; and their maps in part justify the assumption that everything is to be leveled up to a common grade.

But what are to be the consequences of this general elevation all around? The section through which the cut extends is quite thickly settled. Whole blocks of houses on some streets will have to be elevated to conform to the new street grade, and detached houses in a great many places are left standing in depressions which reach nearly to the second story. Who is to pay the cost of putting jack-screws under these buildings, of setting them up on new foundation walls, and sometimes of filling in the gardens?

Unquestionably, in the view of the Park Department, the cost must be met by the owners. But of this we are not quite so sure. Can it be shown that there was any public necessity for the elevation of these street grades? The necessity could hardly have been foreseen when Webster avenue was sewerred, and to persons familiar with the lay of the land when the railway ran along the surface the old grades seem to have been about right. If it should be found, then, that the grades have been changed to reduce the cost of making the cut, or to serve the convenience of the railway, it will look like a case where the city may have to foot the bills.

We do not overrate the saving in money to the railway in having to make only a shallow cut. The saving would be chiefly in cost of excavation through a soil where the expense is not excessive, and in the greater facility in handling material. Whether the cut was shallow or deep the same number of cubic feet of wall must be built, and most other expenses would be about equal. But here is the suggestion to give us pause. Had the cut been carried 15 feet below the old road-bed it would have gone below the level of the tides, and it could only have been kept dry by the use of a pump and a steam engine. This would have been awkward, and to avert the necessity it might be worth while to compel half a city full of property-holders to lift their houses and set them on new foundations.

This is an interesting question; and it is not yet clear that the city would not have saved money had she taken a direct instead of an indirect hand at sinking the tracks, and offered to furnish a pump and keep the road-bed dry for all time to come. We learn that the Park Department arranged with the railroad that they (the Department) would grade the lateral streets, and presumably the cost is to be met by assessing property-holders.

Our Impartial Observer.—The Passing of Ives.

The methods of corporate mismanagement which have been disclosed to public view in the prosecution of Henry S. Ives invite attention to the possibilities which are within the reach of successful "financiers."

There is nothing, however, novel in the means which this "young Napoleon" employed to become a financial king, and it is tolerably certain that there would never have been occasion to prosecute Mr. Ives had he only succeeded in his plans. What he attempted to do is what many railroad magnates had already done long before Ives came into Wall street, and this young man only attempted to employ methods which are entirely familiar to all students of American railroad history.

Is there any material or moral distinction between what Ives has done with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad, and what Jay Gould, in connection with the lamented Colonel Fisk, did when in control of the Erie Railroad? Indeed, the similarity in procedure is such that it might almost be said that Ives had sat at the feet of his Gamaliel, Gould, and been an apt pupil. It is true Mr. Gould made what was officially styled "restitution" to the Erie of several millions of dollars, but what does "restitution" necessarily imply? Of course, this does not in any wise exculpate Ives, but it makes it certain that he is in no way a phenomenon.

It is a curious exercise of the imagination to reflect how different would now have been the journalistic, and consequently popular, estimate of Ives had he been able to cross the very narrow boundary which was required for the ultimate success of his schemes. He would probably at this very moment be a railroad king of the very first rank, might indeed be president of, goodness only knows how many, railroads; obsequious reporters would wait on him almost hourly to ascertain and record his views and prognostications of the future course of "the market," and his opinions of the proper financial policy of the Treasury would be cabled to every part of the country. Distinguished foreigners would bring to America letters of introduction to him from European correspondents; a host of friends would daily inform him of how great a financial power he was, and almost as many newspapers would record the daily doings of "our distinguished fellow-citizen." He might, indeed, be "prominently mentioned" (by himself) for the next Presidency.

There are, however, valuable deductions to be drawn from such a career as Ives has shown to be possible which, as I have pointed out, is in no way different in its essential nature from many men of his kind, but who have succeeded where he failed, and as a result are now luxuriating on the proceeds of their "industry." The absolute helplessness of railroad stockholders in the face of adroit villainy, such as Ives and many others before him, and doubtless after him, has long been known. The mass of stock and bond holders are, to the men who happen to be on the "inside" and in control of a railroad, in very much the position of a mob before a well-drilled police force.

Without organization or leaders their only hope is, either that some benevolent banker may find it to his interest to champion their cause or that some rival gang of manipulators, brimfull of the morality and pious sentiment which always animates the souls of the party out of power, may invite them to join in an organized effort to force off the decks the pirates who are at present in charge of the ship. Moreover, the dense ignorance in which the average investor in railroad securities is with respect to the details of the enterprise in which he "assists" offers great facility to such enterprises as Ives & Company were carrying on. Not only has it often been possible so to juggle with the incomprehensible mysteries of railroad book-keeping as to deceive the entire body of stockholders, but the majority of them know very little, if anything, about the railroad itself or the country through which it runs. A prominent banker recently asserted that in his opinion not five out of fifty persons who owned railroad bonds had ever seen a copy of the mortgage by which they were secured, and that not more than one out of the five would have been able to appreciate the legal effect of the provisions of the mortgage if he had read them. A lawyer of my acquaintance was recently called upon by a distinguished coterie of railroad financiers who were about to issue a first and second mortgage upon a railroad which they had promoted. My friend was instructed to, and he did, draw the mortgages in such form that while on its face the first mortgage was a lien superior to the second mortgage, yet in fact the payment of interest on the first mortgage could be postponed almost indefinitely at the will of a bare majority of the bondholders as long as they saw fit, while payment of the interest on the second mortgage, a much smaller issue, was compulsory under all circumstances to avoid foreclosure. The possibilities which such a scheme as this affords are almost boundless. Both these issues have since been disposed of and the interest on the first mortgage has been so far promptly paid and undoubtedly will continue to be—just as long as those who control the road through their holdings of the second mortgage find it profitable to do so.

It is not, therefore, surprising that Messrs. Ives & Company came so near to success, but it would be very instructive if the public is ever allowed to know the extent and nature of the influences which at the most critical juncture in their affairs involved Messrs. Ives & Company in a financial cul-de-sac from which escape was absolutely impossible.

CHRISTOPHER WALTON.

Jersey City News.

The fall season is quite a busy one in real estate circles. The agents are kept busy renting houses and flats, for which there is a considerable demand. There are less people from Brooklyn looking for cheap houses than in former seasons, but there seem to be more from New York. Rents are holding their own well in all kinds of property. The asking prices for improved and unimproved realty are well held, and advances over last year's figures are the rule and not the exception.

In building matters are pretty brisk. Some of the very latest orders given to architects are as follows:

The Union Hill Turn Verein are having plans prepared by L. H. Giele for a large building to be erected on the northwest corner of Lewis street and New York avenue, Union Hill. It will be 100x100 in size, and will cost between $40,000 and $50,000. The basement will contain bowling alleys, bathrooms, boilers, kitchen, etc. The first floor will have a large parlor, a gymnasium (which will also occupy part of the basement), a bar and a billiard-room; the second floor will have a large theatre and ladies' and gentlemen's parlor and dining-rooms; the third story will have a lodge-room, singers' rooms and a gallery, and the attic a library and janitor's apartments.

The Provident Savings Institution, of which G. W. La Baw is the architect, and the Hudson County Bank, of which H. Kreiter is the architect, have both decided to add an extra story to their buildings over those originally intended upon. They will now be three-story and basement buildings. They are being built on York and Washington streets, and are now up to the basement beams.

Charles Kydd intends to build a two-story and attic house, 33x33 and extension, on Sipp and Tonnely avenues, from plans by R. H. Sailer, to cost $7,000.

The Hudson County Court House, on Newark avenue, will shortly undergo extensive interior alterations from plans by L. H. Giele, at an estimated cost of $7,000.

G. L. Bettcher has plans on the boards for three three-story and basement brick private dwellings, 15x50 each, to be built for Charles Fuhrlein on Madison avenue, adjoining the Jersey City Athletic Club, at a cost of $16,000. The same architect has plans for a three-story frame tenement and store, 25x50, to be built on Grand street for Peter Macabe.

The competition for the plans for the new police station and engine house has been quite a keen one among one or two local architects. The competitors were narrowed down to G. W. La Baw, L. H. Broome and L. H. Giele. Mr. La Baw received the order from the Police Board to proceed with the plans a few months ago, and actually drew the sketches, as reported in THE RECORD AND GUIDE shortly afterward. It was decided by the Board of Works that Mr. La Baw, being a non-resident, should not draw the plans. At the office of Mr. Broome, a few days ago, a reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE was informed that he had received the order for the plans. Mr. Giele, his competitor, says the final decision in the matter rests with the Board of Finance, and until they accept Mr. Broome's plans there will be no certainty as to who is to be the architect for the new buildings. Mr. Broome's plan calls for a three-story brick and stone police station, 50x100, and a two-story engine house, 20 feet front, the former to be built on the corner of Gregory street and Cooper place, and the latter on Warren street.

Rudolph H. Sailer has plans under way for three two-and-a-half-story dwellings, to be built on 53 feet on Montgomery street, near Bergen avenue, for Theodore Gubelmann, to cost $8,400; a three-story brick flat with store, 23.6x53, to be built on Central avenue, 25 feet south of Hutton street, to cost $7,000; a two-story and basement dwelling, 22x36, to be built on Atlantic street, 9 feet from Ocean avenue, and a three-story frame flat, 25x53, to be built on Hopkins avenue, near Summit avenue, for Mr. Strube, to cost about $5,000.

The Hotel Beresford.

This fine building, an illustration of which is presented herewith, is an example of the new mode of living due to the desire to avoid the cares of housekeeping. It is the first of its kind ever built west of the Central Park, and its success, already assured, opens up a new vista to the builder and capitalist. The Beresford is not a hotel in the usual acceptance of the word. It is what is in future to be known as an "apartment hotel." That is, it is comprised of a number of suites for families and bachelors, which they occupy just as though they lived in an apartment house like the Dakota, the Osborne, the Rutland, or any other first-class flat. But it differs from them in this respect, that no cooking is done in any of the suites, as everyone eats in a large dining-room, the meals in which are cooked, served and supplied by the owner and manager of the building. There are no kitchens or culinary appliances in any of the suites, for the simple reason that they are unnecessary. All one requires to do is to eat, drink, sleep and pay one's check when it becomes due, the cares of house-keeping being shouldered upon the proprietor of the hotel. Ladies who have for years been breaking their hearts over their troubles with servants will no doubt welcome with open arms the new era of apartment hotels which has just dawned upon us.

The Hotel Beresford is situated on the northwest corner of Central Park West and 81st street, within one block of "L" station. It has an imposing exterior and its windows overlook Manhattan square on the one side and Central Park on the other, views which will be uninterrupted as long as the building stands. It contains thirty-four suites of apartments, some two-thirds of which have already been rented, although the building will not be ready for occupancy until October 1st. The rents of these suites range from $1,200 to $1,800 each, according to their size and location. They contain four rooms, with a bathroom and all the other conveniences while there is steam heat throughout. There are also several bachelor apartments, which are considerably lower in price. The rents include chamber and waiting service, like any large hotel. Every suite enters upon a wide hallway, and the elevators bring the upper floors practically within as easy access as the lower floors. The dining-room is a superb room on the seventh floor. It is delightfully located, as it places the guests, while they are taking their meals, in full view of Central and Manhattan

HOTEL BERESFORD.
NW COR. 81ST STREET AND CENTRAL PARK.

Parks, the Museums of Art and Natural History and other objects. To dine under such conditions must surely aid both appetite and digestion. In order to attract tenants and make them feel perfectly content to remain in their quarters the proprietor appears to have adopted a wise plan. He has cut down the cost of meals to as low a sum as is consistent with good food and service, the figure being understood to be $7 per capita weekly. This makes life in an apartment hotel not only easy, but comparatively inexpensive.

The entrance to the building is quite handsome and spacious, the hallway being 18 feet wide. There are two elevators to conduct tenants to their different suites of rooms, and the appointments are of an attractive character, all the improvements being introduced. The owner and manager, Mr. Alva S. Walker, is the same gentleman who built the Winthrop on 7th avenue and 125th street, an apartment hotel which has been remarkably successful.

The ground on which the Beresford stands has, by the way, quite a little history. It is one of the choicest and most costly on the west side of the city, and was formerly owned by José F. de Navarro. The latter, indeed, once filed plans for the erection of a grand fire-proof apartment building on the site, but owing to the financial complications in which he became involved, due to underestimating the cost of the Central Park apartment houses, he mortgaged this and other properties to secure advances, and the mortgagee, Jas. J. McComb, the well-known millionaire, subsequently acquired the property under foreclosure proceedings. He then sold it to John D. Crimmins, who, in his turn, sold it to Mr. Walker, the present owner. The latter owns a plot of four lots adjoining the Hotel Beresford, on the southwest corner of 82d street and Central Park West. These he proposes to turn into a small park, and he has in contemplation the laying out of two tennis courts in the centre, with seats around, for the use of the guests in the hotel. This idea, if carried out, will prove an attractive feature.

The Beresford is probably only the beginning of an era of apartment hotel building on the west side. The advantages of such a mode of living as these buildings afford will in future attract hundreds of families to whom the inconveniences and expenses of housekeeping have become a burden.

LYNX.

Real Estate News.

A quarter of a million dollars is the figure at which the choice plot of six lots on the southwest corner of Central Park West (8th avenue) and 72d street is held. The Harsen estate are the owners.

Broker F. R. Houghton, who owns the plot of four lots on the southwest corner of 9th avenue and 72d street, is holding them at $160,000. About $25,000 apiece was paid recently for adjoining street lots.

As high as $3,000 per year is asked for suites in choice flats on West 72d street. They contain twelve rooms. On West 73d street $300 less is asked for similar apartments.

For private houses, say, of 22 feet frontage, located in the vicinity of the 72d street "L" station, from $1,600 to $1,800 rental is realized; 72d street houses, of course, excluded. So says a 9th avenue broker.

An office on the west side which had 200 houses to rent a year ago reports that they now have only forty. The number of vacant houses has thus been largely reduced.

We hear the Occident Club has selected a site for a new club-house. The Building Committee is composed of Richard Deeves, Samuel Colcord, John T. Farley and C. W. Luyster. This club was organized last April, and now has 300 members, who are estimated to be worth $20,000,000. They occupy one of the Batchelor houses on West 72d street, for which $3,500 per year rent is paid on a two years' lease. D. S. Brown is the president, and among the members there are something like fifteen ministers.

A full lot on the south side of 59th street, east of Madison avenue, was recently conveyed to Wallace C. Andrews, of the Standard Gas Light Company, at $25,000, or $1,000 per foot front. Choice lots on the west side—on West 72d street for instance—are held at higher figures. We hear $40,000 apiece was refused for two lots on that street between Central Park West and 9th avenue.

Some of the brokers signs on west side lots are very ancient. We recently noticed one of a firm which was dissolved about three years ago.

Among the costliest block fronts of private dwellings on the west side is the row of nine erected on Central Park West, between 84th and 85th streets. They were built in 1887 by Wm. Noble, and the plans gave the cost as $37,000 each. Few if any have been sold straight, without involving the exchange of other properties.

Another costly row was built by Bernard S. Levy on West 77th street, opposite Manhattan square. They changed hands at about $90,000 each. The plans called for a total expenditure of $275,000 for the five houses.

Some idea of the magnitude of the volume of water to be supplied by the new aqueduct may be had by those who get a sight of the eight rows of 48-inch mains which are being laid on 9th avenue, north of 125th street. We hear two of these mains will turn out at 125th street, two at 110th street and four continue on down to the reservoir in Central Park.

An up-town broker, who was met by the writer on the "L" road the other day, when asked if there was any news, said: "Yes, we arranged three sales within a week at the figures given by the owners only to find when we secured purchasers that all three owners declined to sell. Two of the sales embraced parcels of lots and the third a dwelling." Of course the owners paid you for your work? "That is the annoying part of it," he answered; "but I am now going down to place the collection of our claims in the hands of our attorneys, and teach owners that even brokers have rights which must be respected."

The cost of regulating and paving with granite blocks the roadway of Madison avenue, from 94th to 103d street, will be $30,493. Matthew Baird has secured the contract.

The Water Grant Arrangement.

Owners of lands originally acquired by water grants are certainly going to get the best of the bargain in the arrangement which the city has decided to make with them. The Department of Public Works has now formally advertised the terms under which the obligations of those owners for all future time will cease. By the terms of the original grant the latter are compelled to pave, repave, keep in repair and maintain the streets along which their property runs. This in nearly every case they have neglected to do, because the conditions are somewhat harassing, and because it is generally conceded that the city has as much right, in equity, to take care of the streets used by citizens generally as the owners have. Recognizing the force of this view of the case and to avoid having the public thoroughfares affected continue in the bad condition in which they are now, the authorities have decided to repave and repair the streets, charging the cost to the owners of the property, once for all, and thereafter to keep the streets in repair at the city's expense. They will only do so, however, on the application of the property-owners interested. Commissioner Gilroy said: "The owners will be benefited by the arrangement, for it will assess them just once and never again, whereas the city will gain by the streets affected being placed in good condition, instead of being continually out of repair, as they are now." Owners of lots under water grants from the city who desire to signify their adhesion to this arrangement should make an application to that effect to the Board of Aldermen, and not to the Commissioner of Public Works, who has no authority in the matter until directed by the board to proceed with the pavement, repavement or repairs.

Men and Things.

In conversation the other day with a well-known oil producer, who was stopping in the city for a short time on his way home to the Pennsylvania Oil Regions, I learned some facts about the effect of the Interstate Commerce Act which, perhaps, are not generally known. Said this gentleman: "I don't pretend to speak of the way the act is working so far as the entire country is concerned. It may or it may not be producing a great deal of good. But I know that so far as the Oil Region is concerned it has done a great deal of harm, and ere long it will deprive us of every refinery we have. Curiously—and by the way it is a pregnant example of what a poor guide selfishness is for the interests of a community—the independent refiners in the Oil Region were practically the originators, or at least among the first powerful agitators, for the short and long haul clause of the Interstate Act. They wished to be put on the same footing with the railroads that the Standard occupied. That monopoly was granted rebates by the railroads, and this made the path of the independent companies, which at all times was a hard one to hoe, especially difficult. If they could obtain transportation as cheaply as the Standard could, then, they thought, they could compete successfully. Popular feeling in the Oil Region was with them in the matter, for every owner of real estate, every merchant and manufacturer thought that if the independent refineries made plenty of money more of them would be established, population would be increased and everyone would flourish. The calculation seemed accurate enough; but like all the rest of the world who hurry to the Legislature with every egg they wished hatched they had no real knowledge of what was in it. They fancied they knew; they felt sure it was a bird that would do excellent service in their barn-yard, but they didn't know. That is the radical defect of all such legislature. There is no means of finding out beforehand what the result will be. One thing is certain in almost every case: the result will not be what is expected. It was so in the Oil Region with the short and long haul clause. The passage of the Interstate Commerce Act delighted everyone. Independent refiners said now at last they had a chance. Affairs went along for a time in about the old way. Then the Standard began to shut down their Oil Region refineries. One by one they were closed and the workmen discharged or removed to the company's other refineries at the seaboard at Cleveland and other points. The Standard practically "cleared out." They piped their own oil through their own pipe lines to their own refineries wherever they might be and left the "situation" for what it was worth to the Independent Refiners. They had closed the doors on themselves. If they could obtain differential rates or rebates now, they could compete in "outside markets." But the short and long haul clause prevents this. They must either remove their factories or close down. One thing is certain: the Oil Region will refine less oil hitherto than ever." New York, Cleveland, Buffalo and other large refining points have been benefited. I don't think it will be found that the act has produced exceptional effects in the Oil Region. It was thought that it would give the little places a chance to compete with the big places. It has done nothing of the kind. One is reminded by the matter of the story that is told of the famous Dr. Parr. He was caught in a rainstorm one day and was drenched to the skin. He sought shelter in a friend's house and was provided with a change of clothes, but his wig had to be sent to be dried in the kitchen. By-and-by a savory odor of roast goose floated up-stairs. The Doctor smacked his lips and said to his friend: "How very kind of you to remember my love for roth goothe." His host, not understanding the matter, hurried down to the kitchen and found the doctor's wig on fire."

There are some things that pass men's understanding; and "Ferncliff," which at present holds the boards at the Union Square Theatre, is one of them. It is worse than the ordinary run of plays which we see nowadays, simply because serious imbecility is always worse than comic imbecility. As I was leaving the theatre a young woman in front of me inquired tragically of her escort "What would you do with a man who wrote a play of that kind?" "I would kill him, by Heaven!" answered the young man. A person must needs see the play in order to appreciate the point.

Why will people ask unanswerable questions? Not long since an acquaintance came to me, even as the Greeks of old came to their oracle, and asked, which do you prefer, the "Brigands" or the "Poor Relation?" Somewhat taken back by the question, I answered him as Heine answered an inquiry as to his opinion of Goethe, "La illah ill allah, wamohammed rasul allah." He stared, not understanding the fine sarcasm contained in my reply. In this I was not disappointed, for the young man was obtuse; and I went my way congratulating myself on the aptness of the quotation. On thinking the matter over, however, I came to the conclusion that I should have told him a story out of Charles Reade's "The Cloister and the Hearth." Two parishioners of Gerard, the curate, came to that godly wit with disputation on their mouths and anger in their hearts. Each of them declared roundly that his hay was the best, and they left it to their shepherd to decide the question. The shepherd answered them not, but called for his donkey. Placing one bunch of hay on one side and one on the other he gave that saturnine animal his choice. He who was gifted with the wisdom of the hay made his selection, and the parishioners were answered. Quoth Gerard, the wise: "Come not to me with such questions; leave them to your donkey." Very prettily said, my curate; but every donkey I have ever seen would have eaten both.

The "Drum Major" was a sad disappointment; it was nothing more or less than deadly dull. The success of the performance depended on Miss Pauline Hall, and there was very much lacking in her rendering of Stella. She neither looked, sung nor acted the part. Her figure was too matronly, her voice too hard, and her acting too heavy. It is only just to say that an improvement can be discerned in all her qualities as an actress except her appearance; but that is not meant as very much of a compliment to her present performance, for any change must have been for the better. It is not unfair to emphasize her utter inadequacy, because the management in giving her the part announced the fact in such a way and made such elaborate floral preparations as would lead one to expect something very excellent. It is a significant commentary of the standard of operatic excellence that such a display should be made of so lustreless a performer. Through the whole dreary, stifling three acts, no fact was more apparent than that the lady under discussion was delighted in the fact that she was herself.

Mayor Grant don't intend to wear himself out while in the Mayor's chair. On Monday morning he was seen out riding on the west side, and again in the afternoon passed through 72d street toward Riverside behind a handsome pair of horses. He is looking exceedingly well and seems to be growing stouter.

The Site Selected.

A THREE HOURS' DISCUSSION.

The meeting of the Committee on the World's Fair of 1892, which met in the Governor's room yesterday afternoon, was remarkable in many ways. It comprised a score or more of gentlemen who represent the choice of the city, but who acted, in open meeting, more like a boy's debating society than a set of able business men. Cornelius N. Bliss occupied the chair, but showed himself to be such a weak chairman that more than once he confessed his ruling to be wrong, and for a time it seemed as though the meeting was likely to end up in utter confusion.

A resolution was offered by H. R. Towne to the effect that the site selected should take in Riverside and Morningside Parks, and such adjoining lands as might be found requisite, and, if necessary, that section of Central Park north of the Reservoir.

After some discussion, John Bogart offered, as an amendment, to take in whatever lands might be necessary between 97th and 127th streets, 4th avenue and the North River. The resolution specified that Morningside and Riverside Parks and the contiguous lands should be taken, and also the Central Park, north of 97th street, if necessary.

Andrew H. Green opposed the taking of any part of the Central Park at all.

Ex-Mayor W. R. Grace thought that Mr. Green's suggestion should be adopted first of all.

Mr. Green rose to read part of the Act of 1881, which prohibited the use of the Central Park for exhibition purposes, and wanted to know if the committee intended to violate the law. The people were opposed to the Central Park being taken, and the Legislature would not allow the law of 1881 to be repealed.

Mr. Towne indorsed every word Mr. Green had said, but he considered the accessibility of the site to be the keynote to its success. "I believe the necessary area can be obtained outside of the Central Park," he said, "but failing that, then, and only then, will I favor the small portion of the Central Park being taken, mentioned in the resolution. I would only favor it on one of two conditions, either that horticultural buildings shall be erected there and made permanent structures, or that any buildings placed there shall be removed directly the Fair is over."

Roswell P. Flower spoke in favor of the resolution. He said that the Morningside and Riverside Parks and adjoining lands covered about 385 acres. If the people who own this property will put the rents down to a fair price the committee could acquire the site. South of this 200 acres were available in the Central Park, north of 97th street, while there were thirty-three acres or more between 106th street and Morningside Park. He was in favor of locating the Exposition there, because it would enable every workingman to get there for a five cent ride. It was a curious fact that when the committee drove over all the other sites they were kindly piloted and entertained by parties interested, free of cost; but when they came to the site of the Central, Riverside and Morningside Drives, the newspaper men who were with them remarked that this was the only site where the committee had to pay for their own carriages. [Laughter.] The other sites mentioned were too far away from home.

Several members here spoke to the resolution, some favoring and others opposing the Central Park site.

W. W. Astor rose and said: "The point that divides us is the matter of Central Park. I agree with Mr. Green, as a matter of principle. I am opposed to taking any part of the Central Park. The injury to it would be so great that it would require a generation to repair it. We will also have difficulty in getting the law repealed."

Edward Cooper rose and said, that although the resolution took in the Central Park if necessary, he would vote with the full expectation that the northern part of it will have to be taken in. He thought the Fair would be a failure if they went further north. He thought that the people were really in favor of part of the Central Park being taken rather than being against it, if their vote could be got at. He estimated that the area between 110th and 127th streets was 148 acres, and that, at an estimate of $100,000 per acre, the ground would cost nearly $15,000,000. He thought that a considerable portion of the ground chosen for the site north of the Central Park could be acquired by the city and made a continuation of Central Park.

Mr. Green again rose in opposition, several members springing to their feet. R. M. Hunt obtained a hearing, and said: "I am surprised that there should be any opposition to the Central Park, when every Exposition ever held has been located in parks. This is so especially in Paris."

Mr. Astor: "The case is different. Paris is a city of parks, New York has really only one park."

Another member rose to say that he had traversed the parks and he had never found the workmen there. They wanted an attraction—the lake, the museums, the music—that is where they gathered.

J. I. C. Clarke, manager of the Morning Journal, favored the resolution.

Ex-Mayor Grace rose to favor Mr. Bogart's resolution.

A desultory discussion followed, in which half-a-dozen members interrupted another half-a-dozen. Mr. Flower said something about one of the members calling him "a lunatic."

Isidor Straus rose to pour oil on the troubled waters, and hoped that whatever verdict the committee arrived at it would go out to the world as being unanimous.

John D. Crimmins spoke in favor of Mr. Bogart's resolution.

Mr. Green rose and again spoke against it. Mr. Cooper thereupon asked him to state his objections to it precisely.

Mr. Green accepted the challenge. He said: "There are seventy to eighty blocks in the site you propose. They are owned by 700 to 800 people. Any one who knows anything about these matters knows that it will take years to acquire title to this property."

Ex-Mayor Grace thought the word of warning given by Mr. Green was timely.

The secretary then read a letter from the Corporation Counsel, showing that the Legislature had power to authorize the use of the parks for exhibition and other purposes tending to promote the general industrial success of the people.

Then arose a medley of discussion. Mr. Towne asked leave to withdraw his resolution in favor of Mr. Bogart's. Leave granted. Hereupon Mr. Green moved an amendment to select the site between 110th and 127th streets, 4th avenue and the North River, thus excluding the Central Park entirely. Mr. Towne at once arose to renew his original resolution. Somebody moved an amendment to the amendment. The chair rose to put Mr. Towne's amendment to the vote.

Ex-Judge Henry Hilton rose to point out to the chair that Mr. Green's amendment was in order. The vote was then taken, and Mr. Green was found to be in a minority of 12, the voting being 16 to 4 against him.

A member rose to say a vice-president of the New York Central Road had stated that there would be no difficulty in running four tracks from 4th avenue to the Exposition.

J. A. Cockerill opposed taking any part of Central Park, unless absolutely necessary. He placed stress upon the qualification.

A motion to adjourn was then made and lost. After further discussion and cries of "vote" the motion was finally passed to select a site between 97th and 127th streets, 4th avenue and the North River, the vote standing as follows:

Ayes—John Bogart, C. F. Chandler, J. I. C. Clarke, Edward Cooper, John D. Crimmins, R. P. Flower, John Foord, W. R. Grace, Henry Hilton, R. M. Hunt, Arthur Leary, Isidor Straus, H. R. Towne and George Warner.

Noes—John T. Agnew and A. H. Green.

The vote therefore stood 14 to 2. Several members abstained from voting.

The size and exact boundaries of the site will not be determined upon until the sub-committee of five report upon the ground obtainable, the estimated cost, etc. The committee chosen were Messrs. Bogart, Chandler, Crimmins, Hunt and Towne.

A resolution was laid over to authorize the Committee on Buildings to offer $20,000 for plans for the buildings. Mr. Towne also proposed to raise $1,000,000 by 200 subscriptions of $5,000 each for temporary requirements, the money to be refunded later on. Mr. Hilton opposed this, and the matter was laid on the table.

The committee then adjourned, subject to the call of the chair.

A large section of area in the territory in which it has been decided to locate the Exposition is evidently out of the question. On one part of it there are eight blocks solidly built up, excepting about half-a-dozen lots. This is east of Mount Morris Park. There are comparatively few buildings, however, in the section north of the Central Park up to 127th street. The Building Committee recommended that an observatory, not less than a quarter of a mile high, be erected as part of the Exposition buildings, to belong to the city eventually.

Personal.

The Q. W. Hawkes' Association, composed of real estate men, builders and architects of Harlem, started on an excursion up the Hudson last Tuesday. The excursionists, about 350 in number, were accompanied by a band of twenty-four pieces and were fully prepared to have a good time. The programme included a visit to Mr. Hawkes' farm near Hudson, N. Y., where a dinner, reception and other entertainments were provided, when the party in a body visited the Hudson County Fair. A start from Hudson was made on Wednesday night, and the pleasure seekers arrived in New York Thursday, after a thoroughly enjoyable time. A special steamer, the Kaaterskill, had been chartered for the occasion, and the party enjoyed a privacy not otherwise obtainable. The party included Architect Davis, John W. Haaren, the Beaudet Bros., L. C. Coombs and most of the other big Harlem real estate operators and dealers.

Returning to Town.

David De Venny will return to town about October 1st, to again become active in the purchase and sale of realty.

Philip A. Smyth has returned to town for the season. Mr. Smyth is confident that the market will be strong and active, owing to the cheapness of money, the decreasing tax rate, etc.

Wm. M. Ryan was too busy to take a vacation this summer, and about a month ago became the happy father of a young daughter. There are now three young Ryans, two girls and a boy.

Henry D. Winans is attending to the business of Bellamy & Winans. Mr. Bellamy is in Europe.

Messrs. Fairchild & Yoran, who spent their vacation at Westminster Park, in the Thousand Islands, are back to business.

Thos. C. Smith is back from Narragansett Pier.

The New Municipal Building Site.

There was a full attendance of reporters at the meeting of the Sinking Fund Commissioners, held on Wednesday last, to give a public hearing to such of the New York property-owners as had any opinion to express on the site for the new Municipal building. The Mayor's office was pretty well filled, about half those present being newspaper representatives, and of the remainder some nine gentlemen had their names entered as desiring to speak. Of that nine only eight cared to be heard, and these were ex-Judge Shannon, George Rose, Orlando B. Potter, Andrew H. Green, Prof. D. S. Martin, Edward Grosse, George S. Lespinasse and E. Ellery Anderson. Mr. Green was the only gentleman who spoke at any length.

Of the eight gentlemen who were heard, the opinions of six were so very similar that it is scarcely necessary to particularize their statements. They all opposed the City Hall site on grounds similar to those the newspapers have urged. Ex-Judge Shannon, O. B. Potter and Andrew H. Green, all of them resident in the city for many years, and all of them interested in municipal affairs throughout the whole period, protested strenuously against any further encroachment of the City Hall Park. The ground was historical; the citizens needed it as the only convenient open space in the lower part of the city. Mr. Green thought it inconsistent when the city was spending a million dollars yearly in providing open spaces in the crowded districts of the city, at the same time to occupy such spaces as already existed. He had opposed the selling of part of the park to the national government for post-office purposes, and he would always oppose such encroachments. He presented a set of resolutions passed by the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects "deprecating" the further absorption of down-town breathing spaces. Mr. George Rose spoke to the same effect; and Prof. D. C. Martin, of Rutgers Female College, claiming to represent the scientific men of the city, entered his protest on sanitary grounds. Edward Grosse, of the District Attorney's office, presented resolutions adopted by the United German Democracy, protesting against the City Hall site, and supplemented them by certain remarks of his own.

As some of the newspapers have presented Mayor Grant's attitude during the hearing of these protests in an unfair light, it is but just to dwell on this point for a moment. The comments that he entered from time to time turned upon the point of what site should be substituted for the City Hall Park. He had evidently heard enough of the arguments, which were rather wearisomely repeated by the different speakers, and rather brusquely, perhaps, asked all of them the question what site they had to propose. Very few of them had paid any attention to this aspect of the question, which, after all, is the most important from the point of view of the Sinking Fund Commissioners. Ex-Judge Shannon rather hesitatingly suggested that part of Chambers street which lies east of the Industrial Savings Bank as far as Centre street; other speakers proposed the area covered by the Staats Zeitung building, while Mr. George Rose rather indefinitely suggested a site somewhere in the tenement house district. In reply to the Mayor's question as to the probable cost of such a site, they were pretty unanimous in considering that it was of minor importance how much the city spent, provided the City Hall Park was saved. They all of them seemed to think that it was an easy matter to find a suitable situation.

The Mayor thought otherwise; and he was evidently pleased to find Mr. George Lespinasse of the same opinion. Mr. Lespinasse confined himself to stating that the Legislative Committee of the Real Estate Exchange had declared itself opposed to any further encroachments on the City Hall Park, supplementing this statement by the remark that this, of course, did not commit the Exchange itself to either one site or the other. Mr. E. Ellery Anderson was the last speaker, and the only one who did not fear to occupy the park, if necessary. It was somewhat a relief to hear him, for, apart from the wisdom of his remarks, he spoke interestingly, which could not be said of most of the previous speakers. He declared that Mr. Green and others had been utterly inconsistent in the position they had assumed. They had stated on the one hand that open space down town was imperatively necessary, and on the other that they were willing to spend a sum of three millions to preserve it. But if open space was so very desirable, why not spend the three millions in making a park in the crowded tenement house districts, and locate the municipal building in the park where it properly belongs. A good deal more space could be secured for park purposes in places where it was needed than would be taken up in the City Hall Park by the proposed building. He referred incidentally to his own plan, remarked that the paramount importance of the new building was hardly appreciated, and contended that the opposition to it was raised principally by interested newspapers. He did not blame the newspapers for this; but thought that their motives should be considered in estimating the weight of their opposition.

In the City Departments.

The Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment, in the matter of acquiring title to that part of East 152d street, extending from Railroad avenue east to 3d avenue, in the 23d Ward, give notice that the bill of costs will be presented for taxation to one of the Justices of the Supreme Court on the 17th of September, at 10:30 o'clock.

The Mayor has returned, without his approval, the resolution passed by the Board of Aldermen on July 23d, designating October 3, 1889, for a hearing of the application of the Jerome Avenue Railroad Company for consent to build a street railway on Jerome avenue. The Mayor, in his message of disapproval, says: "Jerome avenue is now a pleasure drive, and is almost the only drive of the kind in that part of the city. The effect of the railroad would be to destroy it for the purpose for which it is now used, and I cannot see that the railroad would be of any benefit to the public. I am reliably informed that its construction is opposed by the property-owners in that part of the city." John Clafin, in a letter to the Mayor, also opposes the road, stating that it is the only direct continuation northwards of 7th avenue, and that it will be the natural route from Central Park to the new parks lately acquired by the city.

The New York Central Railroad Company and William Oliver, and the Union India Rubber Company and Edward M. Shepard, are defendants in two suits of ejectment brought against them by the city for using lands which belong to the Corporation. The ground is located on and adjacent to the Harlem River at 4th avenue, and the city has been deprived of its use for six years. The trespassers are now asked to surrender the lands which they occupy, the former on 4th avenue, from 133d to 134th streets, and the latter on 131st street, 4th and Lexington avenues. They are also asked to pay $103,250 as damages, of which the former are to pay $67,000 and the latter $36,250. It is rather curious that the city should have allowed these corporations and individuals to occupy the property. It is equally surprising that the latter should have taken possession of property which did not belong to them.

Real Estate Department.

There has been no material change in the realty market. The brokers are working hard, and say there is lots of inquiry for desirable property, especially in the business districts. Then again the bad weather of the last couple of weeks has done much to give the market a setback, or rather to delay the closing of sales which are being negotiated, by preventing buyers from making tours of inspection of the parcels offered. From more than one section we hear that buyers are withdrawing property from sale, and even refusing to complete sales when buyers have been found at their figures.

Sales at auction have been almost entirely of a judicial character, and the properties put up have generally been secured by interested parties. The sales announced for the next few weeks are not very numerous or unusually important.

Only one sale was advertised for Monday, and owing to the recent death of Referee Ransom the sale was postponed.

There was a fairly large attendance at the Salesroom on Tuesday and three sales were held. The most important was of "Concordia Hall," Nos. 28 and 30 Avenue A. It was offered under foreclosure to satisfy a third mortgage on which over $35,500 is due and bids were taken over the first and second mortgages which aggregate $50,000. The first bid was $1,000 over said mortgages and the last $24,500, or a total of $74,500. The name of R. S. Newcomb was given as the purchaser, but the real buyer is Moritz Bauer, defendant in the foreclosure proceedings. A plot of four lots on the northwest corner of 10th avenue and 184th street was knocked down at $21,250, but it is not believed they will change hands, as the owner's selling price is said to be $23,000. They were sold in 1888 at $15,000.

The attendance on Wednesday at the Exchange was small, due largely to the bad weather. The sale of a five-story store and tenement on the northwest corner of Hester and Suffolk streets, with lot 25.1x75.1, attracted the largest part of the audience. It was started at $35,000 and sold at $39,700 to Lewis Jacobs. The same property was sold at auction in July at $40,300, but the buyer failed to complete his purchase owing to an error in the announcement as to the rental of the premises, which we hear is about $2,700 or $2,800. Another piece sold was No. 340 East 61st street, a five-story brick tenement with lot 26.8x100.5. The offering was made to satisfy a first mortgage held by the Young Women's Christian Association, on which about $20,000 is due. Although it was announced that $18,000 might remain for a term of years at 5 per cent. interest, the best bid was $19,000 and the plaintiff the purchaser. The house and land probably cost more than this, but the locality is a very undesirable one for renting pur poses, and the collection of rents thereabouts is said to be an exceedingly difficult task.

Thursday's offerings consisted entirely of foreclosures, and the bidders were few, although the attendance was fair. A plot of four lots on the southwest corner of 8th avenue and 119th street was sold at $40,000 to Samuel Schwab. It is understood the purchase is made on behalf of Lawyer Ferd. Kurzman, who recently acquired the plot which, by the way, was sold about two years ago to a building loan operator at $43,000, who, in turn, resold with a loan at $49,500. Before title passed the building loan operator's lawyer found some objection to the title, refused to take the property, and is now suing to recover the amount paid on the contract. BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—Matters have been somewhat irregular since our last, and in a measure disappointing alike to buyers and sellers. Notwithstanding the almost total suspension of demand during the storms of the preceding week, and also the lighter shipments from primary points, there was an accumulation here on Monday morning of over forty barge loads seeking market, to say nothing of a great many previously sold, but which it had been found impossible to discharge, and buyers seemed to act and talk as though they expected a slump in value all around. That, however, they failed to secure to the general manner calculated upon, yet to get business in motion receivers had to concede something, say, on a variable scale of from 12½c. to 25c. per M. and with such an allowance and careful management the supply has of late worked lower, the amount unsold at the present writing proving comparatively moderate. There is enough however, so far as immediate actual consumptive wants are concerned, as there is a very good supply on the spot wherever construction is going ahead, and it is believed that a considerable proportion of recent buying was of a semi-speculative sort of character in securing stock against future wants on the impression that it was cheap enough. There does not appear to be much news from manufacturing points, though an impression prevails that production is on the line of shrinkage and a number of yards making preparations for an early wind-up. Pales have sold fairly, but some of the trade report less promising business, and only something extra heating $3.50 per M. Manufacturers and receivers manifest considerable interest in the location of the site for the World's Fair, and calculate upon an influence very beneficial to their business. There is also considerable talk upon a proposition to create a Brick Trust, though a tendency to reticence and a profession of ignorance when specific information upon the subject is sought. We understand, however, that the prime movers in the project suggest about the usual methods in forming combines of this character, such as putting property into the pool at an extreme valuation and accepting stock in payment, with cost of brick to be controlled as to insure bondsmen dividends. It is reported that a couple of meetings have already been held, but without enough encouragement from manufacturers to progress the scheme very greatly.

LATH.—The market keeps along in very uniform condition, and presents nothing surprising except the fact that the claim of a hardening tendency made last week by receivers has been verified and cost is fractionally higher. It has not been an altogether good period to unload cargoes, and that prevented demand from exhibiting much force, but the arrivals proved small and evidently came to receivers who were under no hurry or necessity to realize, and they have in consequence made a showing of strength that brought the selling rate for full cargo up to $2.12½, with $2.15 now asked, and even a trifle more on parcels to arrive. From out of town sources a fair call is still occasionally received.

LIME.—There appears to be no change or new suggestion to make on this market. The supply and price are kept so well under control that business is largely of a perfunctory character, and everything runs along like a piece of well adjusted machinery. It is thought some of the yard accumulations are running down and making room for fuller shipments should manufacturers conclude to ship with any greater freedom.

LUMBER.—Our local market undergoes very little change of a positive character, about the former average of trade being maintained in standard goods, possibly a slight tendency to increase, if anything, and the fluctuations in value of limited character. It has been asserted that there are too many salesmen upon the market, especially from interior points, and possibly with some truth, as the majority of dealers seem to be in an independent mood regarding the chances for obtaining stock in the matter of random purchase outside the special contracts they already hold, and are to some extent commencing to receive. Everything would seem to indicate plans for the accumulation of an ordinary winter stock both in the matter of quantity and assortment, and if present prospects are not unusually deceptive there will be a good consumption and a satisfactory export trade.

Eastern Spruce has some very enthusiastic friends who are inclined to deny the probability of any influence that can seriously hamper the selling side of the market. There is the one stereotyped feature to be taken into account in the matter of arrivals, but it is claimed that the season is now so far along that it must be an unusually heavy accumulation of cargoes to materially weaken values even on small stuff, and that from any drop under such an influence recovery must develop promptly and surely. The liberal aggregate of some of the cargoes occasionally causes a little annoyance as, even if the dimensions be attractive the number of dealers who can conveniently handle such bills are few, and they are not adapted to the out-of-town trade. It is said that many of the favorite mills are no longer willing to book specials, as the bulk of the supply of desirable logs is contracted for.

Piling has secured somewhat greater attention in some cases, though principally from a line of trade expected to develop about this time and it is not considered really new demand. In the matter of supplies receivers say they have come to hand about as expected, and beyond now and then some moderate fractional fluctuations values undergo no change.

Hemlock moves along apparently in about the same general form of late noted. Naturally from the selling side comes the most hopeful view of the situation, with a certain amount of talk about intentions to store product rather than submit to any modification from full asking prices; but the testimony of buyers is to the effect that supplies are costing no more than for some weeks past, and they appear to find good accommodation as to quantity and assortment when the call is made.

White Pine is not a difficult article to find on offer from either near or distant points, and some of the trade consider that there is altogether too much of it. Not, probably, because there is any vast amount of stock at the rear pressing forward on a determined search for an outlet, but a great many salesmen rushing about looking for custom on even only small individual parcels, create a feeling of comparatively easy character, so far as buyers are concerned, and pretty much all the solicitation comes from the selling side. Some fair-sized piles of stock commence to appear in various localities, as dealers are gradually getting accumulations together, but the majority say they do not intend carrying a liberal winter supply.

Yellow Pine is held steadily in value, and when anything that looks like cutting rates is suggested, it seems to be traceable to some outside deal and not within the regular lines of the ordinary market. Of course, a great amount of the steadiness must be attributed to the business-like way in which the market has been handled, both here and at primary points; there is a good natural demand to help matters, coming mainly from home sources, but including new and desirable f. o. b. orders.

Carolina Pine in a general way shows about former features. The area of distribution is probably not expanding to any extent, but loses nothing, and as that keeps about all the mills employed and affords support to values, the conditions appear healthful and cheerful with former rates supported all around.

Hardwoods have on the general run of assortment been offered quite as freely as the wants of the market require, and now and then there is a little fine work that looks as if holders were anxious to quicken matters. It is not often, however, that any very large order can be placed, and the claim of dealers of having fairly provided for expected winter requirements seems to be substantiated by their generally indifferent action. On the general line of quotations about former figures might be used, but there continues a measure of irregularity on popular, and we have heard suggestions of a somewhat easier feeling on plain oak of late.

Shingles are reported upon in a somewhat irregular manner, but as a whole the movement runs pretty full, and sellers have most of the advantage. Consumption has been fuller in some localities than expected, and the occasional orders filed for export add fairly to the outward movement of supply.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Timberman as follows:

Whatever may be the outcome of lumber operations the present season in Eastern Michigan, it is safe to say that very few mills will "get left" next year for the want of logs, if it can be avoided. The early part of the present season was a provoking experience for many millmen which they don't care to have repeated, and in consequence preparations for extensive logging operations are already in vogue. Sufficient logs will be skidded early so that every inch of snow and every frost will be utilized on the log roads to hustle the timber to the streams. There will be very few logs left on the skidways the coming winter.

And of the Chicago market as follows:

The week's receipts at the Chicago market have not been extensive, in fact they have been quiet. With the demand for lumber was the usual assortment of of Menominee inch, Manistee inch, and all classes of stock from Muskegon, and an unusual large cargo of Lake Superior lumber was found on the market beside 40 cargoes of lumber of next week's arrivals.

Monday's arrivals sold off with considerable freedom and there was evidence throughout the week of a greater disposition to take the lumber as it came.

Prices continue about as previously mentioned; $9 for piece stuff with a good portion of lengths at $9.25. The inquiry is very much better than it was at the beginning of the month, showing that retailers are not well supplied with lumber.

An effort was made to advance prices, which though not very satisfactory, had its effect. Everybody admits that prices for which lumber has been carried from Chicago are very low.

The variety of opinions expressed by dealers in hardwoods, renders the task of defining the condition of the market a rather difficult one. One thinks trade is duller, another that it averages about as usual, while a third pats himself on the back over the fact that his September trade is opening with better prospects than a year ago. After carefully weighing all reports we should say that the volume of business is about the same as at this time last year, but prices are lower.

Stocks are in fairly good shape, although here and there we have met with complaints of shortness in some lines, 14-inch quarter-sawn white oak has been picked up, pretty clean, but with the exception of one yard, all seem to have enough to supply the demand for the present.

The Northwestern Lumberman says of the Chicago yard trade:

"Trade is good," is the general expression among dealers, when they give an off-hand reply to inquiries. When the question is gone into a little further, dealers say that while the volume of deliveries is quite satisfactory, there is crying need of an improvement in prices; they are too low and flexible. What is now wanted is a little stiffening put into values, so that sellers can realize prices and not give everything to the buyer. They want such a state of things as shall stop so much cutting as has prevailed for the past three months, and has so demoralized trade that purchasers of bills have known that they could obtain important concessions in price, simply by passing schedules round from yard to yard for competitive estimates. It has come to be a big, expensive and altogether unpleasant job in each yard to go over bills and make estimates thereon, with little hope of being able to secure a sale. It worries a dealer to the verge of disgust to employ his office force estimating bills, knowing that, after he has scaled down prices until there is no profit in them, half a dozen others are cutting under his figures, and somebody will undoubtedly capture the sale away from him. That style of doing business has prevailed all summer, and dealers now want to see an end of it.

After a repose of several months, the trade list of the yard dealers' association was awakened on Wednesday evening, September 11th, revised and declared to be in force. There has been no revision of the list since September 20, 1888, and it had fallen into disuse. On the date named, last year, piece stuff was based on a valuation of $12.50 a thousand; 12-foot common boards, $14.50; No. 2 boards, $13; first quality 16-foot fencing, $15.50, and No. 2, fencing, $13. The list adopted on Wednesday evening priced short piece stuff at $11.50; common 12-foot boards, $13.50; first quality 16-foot fencing, $14.50, and No. 2 fencing, $13. Thus it will be seen that there has been a fall since last September of about $1 a thousand, so far as prices on paper are concerned. But this must not be taken to mean that prices have lately declined. Demoralization began last spring, and prices have been shaken down during the season to the present basis. Cargo prices have correspondingly declined during the year. Last September short green piece stuff was quoted on the market at $10 a thousand, with long stuff worth proportionately much more than it is now. The decline in the value of common boards and strips has been nearly in correspondence with that of dimension. So it will be seen that the claim set up by the yard dealers that cargo market prices have been held relatively higher than those in the yard is erroneous. In fact there can be no such thing as the rise and fall of the one without a like fluctuation in the other.

The meeting took the important step of rescinding the classification first and second clear, and third clear, and included all in a grade of uppers, at a uniform price. One-inch finishing and 1¼, 1½ and 2-inch were treated alike.

There was a diversity of opinion about siding strips. Some thought they were scarce, while others took the contrary view. The advocates of an advance, on the basis of a short supply, lost their case. Without much doubt, however, siding strips are really not plenty.

The Mississippi Valley Lumberman as follows:

Trade is not improving very rapidly. The Minneapolis shipments this week are only 135,000 feet larger than those of a week previous. The receipts at both St. Paul and Minneapolis are considerably larger. Wisconsin shippers would seem to have put a pile of lumber into St. Paul during the week, for the receipts in the two cities are 3,000,000 feet in excess of the receipts of last week, and are larger than those of any week of the season so far. With this exception, the aspect of affairs is the same that it was two weeks ago. The improvement that was expected has failed to materialize again, and the dealers in Minneapolis are feeling rather down in the mouth. The St. Paul offices of Wisconsin concerns make a bold front, and declare that business is good, and that they are getting the best kind of prices. No doubt some of them are. An examination of invoices in one instance show the claims of at least one concern to be pretty well grounded, but the volume of trade in this particular instance was not as large as had been expected and was considerably below what was done last year at the same time. The general report from offices both local and outside is to the effect that August shipments did not foot up well as compared with August 1888, and that September has made a very poor beginning towards retrieving the discrepancy.

ENGLAND.

The London Timber Trades Journal as follows:

It will be found that the strike has thrown business back a month, and the period lost to the timber trade will be quite as important as to other branches of commerce.

With regard to spruce deals, the import has been the largest for one month in the annals of the trade, the imports reaching 24,100 standards, most of it being brought forward by the huge steamers to which we have, week after week, drawn the attention of our readers. The crowded and disorganized state of quays has prevented much of the recent importation from being forwarded, and thus what would under ordinary circumstances have been delivered now appears in the statistics as stock. Still, what has gone into consumption amounts to no less than 14,210 standards, and as it is probable the present rush will not continue long, the stock of 18,000 standards may be reduced before the next list is issued. None of the other figures call for any special comment just now. Perhaps we may return to this subject next week.

American Black Walnut.—Supplies continue to come forward, though with but little improvement that can be noticed in the character of the wood, very many logs being of the poorest possible description, for which, as we have already stated, there is now no inquiry whatever in this market. There is very little trade doing.

American Whitewood, Oak and Satin Walnut.—In all of these sales are very slow, but the disturbed condition of trade has occasioned this rather than any falling off in consumption.

AILS.—Business on home account is of fair general proportion with an apparent tendency to increase, and prices are in consequence well supported, especially on jobbing lots. Supplies, however, prove plentiful enough thus far, and sellers are unable to exact any extra advantage. We quote a $1.80@1.90 per keg for car lots, and $1.95@2.00 per keg for parcels from store.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—Reports, as a rule, run in about the former cheerful vein. There is a fair local call tending to increase if anything, and out-of-town orders want a good general assortment of stock, against which there is a sufficient offering, but under perfect control, and the line of valuation supported without apparent difficulty. Linseed Oil is plenty enough for the outlet offered, but sellers claim a fair advantage and steady rates at 57@58c. for Western, and 60@61c. for City. Spirits Turpentine again higher with a fair general trade demand, but not enough to lead to any real animation. We quote at 47½@48½c. per gallon, according to quantity, delivery, etc.

TAR AND PITCH.—Supplies are costing about as before on jobbing orders, and there does not appear to be enough stock offering to have any special influence upon the position. The demand fair with an increasing tendency if anything. We quote Pitch at $1.40@1.50 per bbl.; Tar at $2.62½@2.87½, according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date. Whenever the rate is not given, read as 6 per cent.

*Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

A mechanic's lien appearing above, as I am informed, against me and premises No. 17 East 12th street, is an imposition.

The contractors who filed the lien were, owing to breach of contract and condemnation by the Building Department, discharged by the architect, and I was compelled, for my own protection, to pay all bills, including even cellar digging and water permit, which the contractors had neglected to pay, and have paid over one thousand dollars more than the contractor's payment amounted to, or would have amounted to had he ever reached any payment. And, in addition, I gave him money frequently to aid him personally. I hold receipts from such responsible parties as Seaman & Co., Schuyler and others, including even the most humble laborers to substantiate the above.

MARY L. MORGAN.

A Valuable Map.

We shall issue next week as a supplement to THE RECORD AND GUIDE, a map showing the lines of the Harlem River Improvement and all that section of Manhattan Island, as far south as 173d street. The map is in part a fac-simile of the Government's map now in the Chief Engineer's department at Washington, and can be relied upon as being correct. The boundaries of the property at Inwood, which were considered as a site for the World's Fair, are also shown. Owners and brokers desiring quantities of the maps should send in their orders at once. They will be supplied at $4.00 per hundred.

General business throughout the country during the past week, while not up to the pitch of the previous one, is still very good, and there is every indication that the season will end very satisfactorily. The one adverse factor is the closeness of money, which is now at a very uncomfortable figure for those people whose necessities require them to go into the market for borrowing purposes. In the stock market prices for good securities have shown alternate weakness and firmness, while such uncertain stuff as Atchison, Sugar Trust, and one or two fancies have suffered considerably in the figures marking values. The Union Pacific Company is reported to have plans in railway paralleling, which, if carried out, will end by stranding the company just as the Atchison Company was wrecked by reckless management. There is some queer stock jobbing going on now in connection with Union Pacific. Not a great while ago Charles Francis Adams stated in a report that the Oregon Railway Navigation lease would lose for the Union Pacific Company a million of dollars this year. At the time this statement was made the Oregon Transcontinental Company owned a large amount of the Navigation stock, and Mr. Adams' assertion so affected the price that the quotations ran down to below 85. At this figure buyers appeared. Shortly afterward Mr. Adams and his friends were reported to hold large amounts of it, and now the price is quoted at 102. The Union Pacific people, who some time ago said the Oregon Navigation lease would cost the Union Pacific a million of dollars, now state that this same lease will prove a source of profit.

Everyone who wishes to see the World's Fair held in New York in 1892, and held with success and credit to the city, should accept the decision made by the Committee on Site as decisive. Looking broadly at the matter it is beyond all fair controversy that the site is a good one, and, despite the wrangling of newspapers, the selection undoubtedly has the approval of the public at large. Admittedly it is more central and accessible than any other available site, and these two essential qualifications, when duly considered, will be regarded by all intelligent persons as sufficient to outweigh whatever other advantages are possessed by other sites that have been named.

Very little stock should be taken in the bickering about the matter that fills more space than it merits in the daily papers. The editorial quarrel—for it has become such—is solely about the proposition of the committee that as much as may be needed of the northernmost end of Central Park should be taken for the purposes of the Exposition. Unquestionably the people of New York would be practically unanimous in opposing any scheme that would lead to the permanent disfigurement of any part of the park, or any destruction of what has cost them so much to obtain; but no sensible estimate of public opinion on the matter will say that it runs to the extent of the fanaticism of the Evening Post, the World and the Tribune, which would make people believe that even the shadow of an Exposition building would blast the trees and every natural beauty, and leave the park a desolate and irreclaimable waste.

The common sense of the matter is to be found, and will yet be found, between the extreme views of those who would use the park as the principal site for the Exposition buildings and those who would not have a single square foot of it built upon for any purpose whatsoever. There are certain parts of the northern end of the park that could be used as sites for certain buildings of a certain size without impairing the beauty of the park in the least. Mr. Frederick Law Olmstead, the highest authority on the subject, is of this opinion. His words are worth quoting. He says: "It appears probable to me that good use might be made of some localities of the park for the exhibition of objects not needed to be brought within any of the larger buildings of the Fair. If the Fair is to centre on a plot connecting Riverside and Morningside Parks, the Central Park will be a fine attachment to it, and it is probable that localities could be found in the park for the exhibition of objects not required to stand in systematic connection with any of the classified exhibits." The quick of the entire matter then is this: What portions of the northern part of the park do the committee think should be used? "As much as is needed," they say, but it is an unknown quantity, and until some definite information is forthcoming, argument, denunciation and editorial anger is very much a beating of the wind.

Another matter to be decided before the question can be intelligently discussed is the size of the Exposition. Is the P. T. Barnum idea of a "biggest show on earth" to prevail, or are we to have a Fair limited in size but excellent in its arrangement and the quality of the exhibits. Everyone at present is playing on the big drum about the Exposition, but when our ears are quite tired of the noise a little thinking may be done, and then perhaps the ideal of an Exposition a trifle above the showman's may receive consideration. There is nothing to be gained by a chaotic display of merchandise in huge buildings that have to be traversed on a railway to be seen. Buildings slightly smaller would be better, and if this idea were adopted there is plenty of land in the Riverside-Morningside site proper, without encroaching to any really dangerous extent upon Central Park. The Art Gallery or the Horticultural building might be erected in the open spaces at the northern end without damaging the park in the least. There is no reason, moreover, why the Exposition buildings must be grouped together. They could be put in different parts of the city with advantage. The Agricultural Hall could be erected at Inwood, Machinery Hall on the Riverside-Morningside site, the Naval Exhibit or a Fishery Exhibit in Pelham Bay Park, and so on. One building is as much as any person can see comfortably and completely in a day, and variety would be added to the inspection if the buildings were scattered in different parts of the city. The discomfort of the crush of a large crowd in summer time would be removed, the exhibits would be more completely inspected, whatever educational benefits are to be derived from an Exposition would be increased, and the advantages which it is supposed real estate will reap from the Fair would be diffused instead of concentrated in a single locality.

There is one proposition, however, which has been connected with the choice of a site which cannot be too severely discounted and denounced. It is the proposition to add to Central Park all the land north of it, between 110th and 113th streets, 5th and 8th avenues, after the plot has been used for the Exposition. It may well be that this proposition was made in good faith without any ulterior purpose; but it is certainly one of those suggestions which the public always receive with suspicion and refuse to accept for their "face value." Including streets there are about fifty-five acres of land in this plot, which at present prices is worth between five and six million dollars. The 3,807 acres of new park land beyond the Harlem cost the city only about $9,000,000, and the idea of burdening the city now with $6,000,000 for fifty-five acres is too absurd for a moment's consideration. The city is now well supplied with parks; but if any more money must be spent it should be used for the purchase of small open spaces or squares in the overcrowded tenement districts.

There is one suggestion that this controversy as to Central Park and the site for the Exposition has brought out which has not received the attention it deserves. Mr. Olmsted proposes that the reservoir in the park be floored over and used as a site for some of the main buildings. At first glance the proposition may appear to some to be extravagant; but if there are no engineering difficulties too great or too costly to be overcome, it will bear serious consideration. The site would be an excellent one, and in using it none of the "natural beauties" of the park would be impaired.

Chicago is very much excited over the question of municipal gas works just now. In 1887 there were eight gas companies doing business in the city. Charter after charter had been given away, each with the delusive hope that it would bring cheap gas to the community. The companies were waging fierce war one with the other, and rates consequently were relatively low. The usual result followed. The companies combined, issued $18,000,000 of bonds and $25,000,000 of stock. The city is paying to the trust some $3,500,000 per year—about twice the sum they should pay, according to those who believe in the change. Mayor Cregier, Comptroller Onahan and many of the Board of Aldermen believe in the municipality assuming the function. It already supplies its own electric lights at a cost of fifteen cents per night for each arc light, while the average for cities in which the lights are controlled by private companies is forty-five cents per night for each light. The city has been successful in this branch of illumination and the Mayor sees no reason why it should not be successful in a kindred field. The question is complicated by some legal difficulties. There is no doubt about the city being able legally to manufacture gas, but it is a problem where the money is to come from. No more money can be borrowed without an amendment of the charter, which limits the issue at present to 5 per cent. of the assessed valuation. This difficulty, however, can easily enough be removed by the Legislature. The Commissioner of Public Works is of the opinion that a plant can be erected in that city (exclusive of real estate) capable of an output equal to that of the present for $6,000,000. Just now there are only four cities in this country manufacturing their own gas—Philadelphia, Richmond, Wheeling and Alexandria; but if Chicago follows suit it will not be long before other cities will come into line.

General M. C. Meigs published a paper in Science recently showing an estimate of our probable increase in population during the next century, on the basis of a growth of 33.3 per cent. in every ten years. The following is the table:

1900.....	80,633,333	1960.....	509,018,449
1910.....	119,737,777	1970.....	678,691,265
1920.....	159,650,377	1980.....	904,921,686
1930.....	212,867,177	1990.....	1,206,562,248
1940.....	283,822,877

A similar attempt was made as far back as 1815 by a man named Elkanah Watson, of New York, who undertook to predict the increase in population from 1820 to 1900. A comparison between the predictions and the figures is interesting. Up to 1850 he was remarkably successful:

	1820.	1830.	1840.	1850.
Watson.....	9,625,734	12,833,645	17,116,526	23,185,568
Census.....	9,635,822	12,866,020	17,069,453	23,191,876
Watson's error.....	-8,088	-32,375	+47,073	-6,508

But his failure after 1860 was as glaring as his success up to that time:

	1860.	1870.	1880.	1890.	1900.
Watson.....	31,753,824	42,328,482	56,450,241	77,266,989	100,355,985
Census.....	31,443,321	38,558,371	50,155,783
Watson's error..	+310,503	+3,770,061	+6,294,458

In 1890 Watson's figures will be at least 10,000,000 too large, and in 1900 they will be fully 15,000,000 out of the way. His success up to 1850 was due to the singular uniformity of conditions which prevailed in this country throughout the whole of that period. It was as the immigration increased that the rate of increase decreased. In 1815 only about 5,000 people came over every year, so that Watson in his estimate did not take this factor into account. Between 1850 and 1860 the foreign arrivals arose to the enormous total of 2,579,580, yet it was in this decade that the statistician made his first large error. In the next decade, of course, the war, which he could not be expected to foresee, still further falsified his calculations.

General Meigs' basis of estimate is entirely too large. It is practically the same as that of Watson, and the tenth census established beyond a doubt the fact that economic and social causes were at work reducing the rate of multiplication. Between 1870 and 1880 the increase was at the rate of 30 per cent., not 33½; and then it is very probable that in placing the population in 1890 at 67,240,000 he is rather too sanguine. Gen. F. A. Walker says that "the most reasonable computation which can at present be made fixes the population of 1900 at about 80,000,000," or some 9,000,000 less than Gen. Meigs' estimate. It is perhaps too much to say that the rate of increase will diminish very shortly to 2 per cent. per annum; but it is perfectly obvious that it will diminish to a certain extent, and a calculation with any pretension to exactitude should take into account a steady decrease in the rate of increase.

There have been some reports of a trust that is being formed among the building and loan associations of Pittsburg. But before accepting them it would be well to consider that a Building Association Trust must mean; in all probabilities, simply a combination. It cannot be organized with any intention to prevent competition, because there is no competition to prevent among building associations proper. The minute competition begins the co-operative sanction of the movement ends. The purposes of all the associations are the same. Even, however, supposing that in Pittsburg the associations were regarded merely as money-making institutions, it would not be possible for them to prevent any more building associations from springing up, because the expenses of a well-managed association are infinitesimally small, so that no advantage could be obtained in that direction, and as long as what funds the association has are promptly loaned it makes no difference what the quantity actually is. Indeed, it is difficult to see what possible good a combination could do that would not be obtained equally well from a league such as we have in this city. The Metropolitan League is organized for the purposes of discussing disputed points, arriving at correct conclusions, collecting statistics and disseminating information. With these objects it is an exceeding valuable association. From the fact that this Pittsburg association has been misnamed a trust, we judge that the proposition is to have the dues paid into a common treasury and the loans made therefrom. What earthly advantage this combination will have over a smaller association, except perhaps the equalization of the amount of premiums, is difficult to see. On the other hand, the largeness of the sums dealt in will be a constant temptation to dishonest officials, and may well lead to extravagant management. It is not desirable for a building association to be so large that the shareholders would be apt to lose their personal and retain only their financial interest.

"Very German."

We have been much grieved, and not a little puzzled, at the indignation expressed by several of our German readers and subscribers at the use of the phrase just quoted in a criticism of the new building of the German Turnverein. One or two of our protesting correspondents have evidently been misled by their own inadequate appreciation of the English language, and this has been promoted by an unfortunate misprint or two. The sting of the article seems to reside in the last three sentences thereof. As they were written these sentences read as follows: "The architect seems, however; to have been anxious to show that his building was German in origin and purpose. This he has thoroughly succeeded in doing, but at a very considerable sacrifice of beauty. For the characteristic traits of the German Renaissance that he has introduced, as in the detail of the pediments and the doorways, unfortunately are very crude and ugly, as well as very German."

This is the head and front of our offending, and how any intelligent German can have imagined that it was meant to be offensive to his patriotic sensibilities quite passes our comprehension. It is plainly a purely architectural criticism, and it is not a criticism upon German architecture in general, nor even upon the architecture of the German Renaissance in general, but only upon those special features of the German Renaissance that the architect of the Central Turnverein had selected, unwisely as it seems to us, for the purpose of stamping the nationality of the building. Of course it is open to anybody who chooses to maintain that these forms are not very crude and ugly, though it is not possible for anybody who knows anything of the history of architecture to deny that they are "very German." They are in fact intensely characteristic of that period of German architecture which is referred to in another part of the article as "the debased German Renaissance."

There may be Germans who will uphold this phase of German architecture as worthy of admiration and imitation, but the authorities are all against them. To turn to the first at hand: Fergusson says: "The Renaissance architecture of Germany may be dismissed in a very few lines, inasmuch as during three centuries not a single architect was produced of whom even his compatriots are proud, or whose name is remembered in other countries; and not a single building erected the architecture of which is worthy of much study, nor one that calls forth the admiration of even the most patriotic Germans themselves." This is much too sweeping, as one may show merely by citing the Sixteenth Century work at Heidelberg and the porch of the Rathhaus at Cologne. It is true also that while most of the costly and monumental buildings erected during the period of the Renaissance in Germany are failures, the common, unpretentious, vernacular building of the country during the same period was in great part straightforward, expressive, and not without grace. But the debased Renaissance, corresponding to the Rococo in France and to the Queen Anne period in England, the age that produced the Zwinger palace in Dresden, produced nothing to which German architects can point with pride, and of its characteristic details it is simply descriptive to say that they are very crude and ugly as well as very German. Rosengarter, a German authority, says of it: "A certain heaviness prevails" "which may be said to characterize the productions of the German Renaissance style in general." To conjecture that an architect chose these details for the purpose of establishing the nationality of his building seems to me a much more polite surmise than to ascribe to him the selection of them because of a preference for crudity and ugliness as such.

At any rate, there is nothing in the attribution to which any reasonable German can take offence, and nothing that indicates a lack of appreciation of German architecture. There are architects practising among us of whom it can be said in praise that their work is "very German," but they have derived their motives from the best and not from the worst period of German architecture. Such monuments as the round-arched cathedrals and churches of the Rhine and as the palace of the Wartburg in the Romanesque period, as Cologne and Strasburg and Regensburg in the Gothic period, and as the works of Schinkel in Berlin and Gartner in Munich and Schmidt in Vienna in our own century, are among the finest achievements of architecture in their respective epochs. But that any German should feel aggrieved by being reminded that the forms of German architecture at its lowest and worst are crude and ugly shows, if he will pardon us for saying so, that his sensibility has got the better of his sense.

The bursting of a Croton water main this week reminds people of the greater danger which perpetually threatens the city, because it depends solely upon one source of supply for water. A serious accident to the Aqueduct might at any time leave us with merely the supply that happened to be at the time in the mains and in the city reservoirs. Much privation and great loss in case of fire might easily result. As we have pointed out before, any crank with a hand-bag of dynamite could make water as scarce as corn was on a memorable occasion in Samaria. A suggestion was made to the Sinking Fund Commissioners as far back as last November to remove this danger, and it is worth inquiring why it has not yet received consideration. Mr. J. R. Bartlett and others made a proposition then to supply the lower part of the city with 50,000,000 gallons of water a day under conditions and upon terms which, on the face of them, seem advantageous. Why are they still pigeon-holed? Why should the matter not be passed upon, and a decision one way or the other arrived at?

The Sub-committee on Buildings have done what they were expected to do in recommending that a tower 1,320 feet high should be erected on some part of the Fair grounds. It may be reasonably objected that this is not quite high enough. Not only is there some danger that a company of English capitalists, organized of course for the mere purpose of making money and having no intention of showing the progress the world has made in the arts of peace during the last four hundred years, may erect a tower about 2,000 feet high. Obviously it would be puerile in the extreme to put up a tower that was not the highest yet; and, as far as the engineering is concerned, it is as easy to erect a low structure as a high one. But even if those Englishmen give up their project, it is but proper that we should show the great enterprise of our people and their masterly engineering and inventive originality by adding at least a thousand feet more to this tower of M. Eiffel. We should endeavor to make it not only a source of pleasure, but a source of instruction. It should exhibit the immense superiority the United States possesses over France in the amount of horse-power in use. Indeed, it would be but proper to increase the height of our tower in the same proportion that our American horse-power is bigger than the French horse-power. This would give it some material significance and mathematical precision. We could point to it as a piece of statics 2,000 feet high.

A specious objection has been made to the project that it would be an imitation of the distinctive feature of the French Exposition. We need not pay very much attention to this objection because, after all, was not the French idea borrowed from that of our own tower of observation down at Coney Island? And in putting up a similar structure are we not simply reclaiming our own? It is true that the external appearance of the two towers are not at all alike, and probably the engineering principles involved in the construction of the two are somewhat different, but their objects were identical, and that is the main consideration. Perhaps we might with profit—profit is, of course, what we want—borrow some other ideas from Coney Island. Visitors to that resort are familiar with those pleasurable machines which offer the privilege to the possessor of a nickel of getting into a car with a companion or so, and taking a toboggan swoop down one side of an elevation and up to the top of another. This comparatively crude idea could be improved upon even as M. Eiffel improved upon the crudeness of our Coney Island tower. The force derived from the first downward swoop could be so nicely graded by our ingenious engineers that when the car came to the top of the incline it would have enough force left gracefully to get around a lateral curve at the highest point. Then there could be another swoop, another ambitious climb, another curve, and so on until by a circuitous route the car could return to the starting place, and the traveler could step out with the proud consciousness that he had made as many curves up in the air as any man living. That pleasure alone probably would be worth a trip across the Atlantic. Some such machine as this would be superior even to an Eiffel tower, because no matter how high we made such a structure, a man could easily get higher by making a trip to the top of Mount Washington, while, on the other hand, there is, nothing in nature which could quite rival that circuitous ride roundabout the air. Another good plan would be to construct a cask, with twice the capacity of the tun of Heidelberg, to be filled with the beer brewed by that company which bids highest for the privilege. Then what grand opportunities also will the Fair provide for the nickel-in-the-slot men! What ingenious machines will they have a chance to make! The imagination is confused by the mere thought of what can possibly be done in this way to show the immeasurable superiority of our own times to those of Columbus. What an exhibition we can make of ourselves!

A Topic of the Hour—The Chaos in American Taxation.

It has been said of our American methods of taxation that they grow worse by improvement. The principle upon which they are based being unworkable, all attempts to piece out and patch up the system only tend to complicate and bewitch it still further. For twenty years New York has been tinkering with her tax system, and the "last state thereof is worse than the first." Boards of equalization, special commissions, multitudinous elective officers, and ingeniously inquisitorial oaths for both officials and taxpayers have been tried with worse results than none. Townships, counties and cities vie with one another in simulating poverty, and the assessor who does not perjure himself is seldom re-elected. Farm lands are undervalued that the owner may "get even" with the business man who fraudulently keeps back personalty from assessment; and the business man feels justified in keeping back his personalty because real estate is undervalued. The situs of personal property is regulated by conflicting State laws, "tax dodging" becomes a specialty, and some degree of proficiency in it is essential to self-preservation.

Nor is the experience of this State at all singular. The President of the Boston Merchants' Association told its members at their annual dinner that he doubted if there was a gentleman in the room who was not a tax-dodger. A gentleman who had served in one of the tax departments of the Ohio State government admitted, in reply to a leading question, that practically every wealthy man in the State of Ohio was a perjurer. A lawyer in Columbus, who holds estates in trust for several parties, says that whenever he goes to the tax office to pay the taxes on these estates he feels capable of committing robbery, arson and murder, because properties belonging to orphan children are assessed at their full value, whereas he sees wealthy clients paying on only 10 or 15 per cent. of what he knows they are worth. The State-Labor Statistician of Illinois says that "it is notorious that the valuation of lands returned by the township assessors is neither the cash value nor any uniform percentage either of the cash or nominal value. It is rather a capricious and arbitrary undervaluation, intended to obscure rather than declare the facts, and in this it is entirely successful."

All this is brought freshly to mind by some examination of Mr. Davies' "Compilation of Constitutional Provisions, Statutes and Cases Relating to the System of Taxation in New York." It was prepared at the request of the Senate Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, and is a monument to legislative and administrative awkwardness.

Our theory of taxation teaches us to levy one uniform tax on all property, real and personal. This plan seems to be simplicity itself, but the attempt to apply it leads to the stupendous absurdities of our present "system." If one were to plan to reach the North Pole by simply walking straight North from a given point his plan also would be eminently simple and doubtless adequate, if it could be executed. Just here would arise the complication. A uniform tax on all property would be simple and just, perhaps, if it could be assessed and collected. Here, as in the case of our supposititious Arctic pedestrian, comes in the difficulty; it cannot be done. Prof. Ely, in his work on "Taxation in American States and Cities" says that "one uniform tax on all property as an exclusive source of revenue, or the chief source, never has worked well in any modern community or State in the entire civilized world, though it has been tried thousands of times, and although all the mental resources of able men have been employed to make it work well. I have read diligently in the literature of finance to find one example, but in vain."

Somewhat recently the professional economists have given up the idea that the problem of taxation is a simple one. Seventeen years ago, David A. Wells, a careful statistician, and then one of the Tax Commissioners of this State, permitted himself to say dogmatically: "All taxes equate and diffuse themselves; and if levied with certainty and uniformity upon tangible property and fixed signs of property they will, by a diffusion and repercussion, reach and burden all visible and also all invisible and intangible property with unerring certainty and equality." The more recent view is, that while taxes do, indeed, diffuse themselves, it is "along the lines of least resistance." The modification seems simple, but is really of tremendous significance. It casts great responsibility upon the conscientious student of economics and upon the conscientious legislator, lest unwise taxation should strengthen the strong against the weak and crowd increasing numbers of the latter across the pauper line. No one acquainted with the actual influence of our chaotic mass of tax laws can doubt that such is their present and ever increasing tendency.

Liability of Landlords.

NEW YORK, August 8, 1889.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

DEAR SIR—The existence of the modern Dictator, the Board of Health, occasions a nice legal question as to the liability between landlord and tenant for repairs or alterations ordered by the board, upon which many landlords would like some light thrown. A tenant having hired a house and agreed to keep it in repair during his term finds that he would like some changes in the plumbing, and on the landlord declining to make them, the house having been put in repair to the tenant's satisfaction before the term began, the tenant complains to the Board of Health, and the desired alterations are ordered at a large expense. Has the landlord the right to collect the cost from the tenant, or cancel the lease, or must he submit to this enforced variation of the terms of their agreement without redress? If the tenant, in such a case, is not obliged to pay anything, he gets more than he is entitled to by the terms of his bargain, and the agreement is practically nullified for him, while still binding on the landlord.

Yours respectfully, TOWNSEND WANDELL.

In this case there is difficulty in getting at the true solution of the problem. If there were no contract about repairs the tenant would only be bound to keep the premises wind and water-tight at the most. The landlord on his side would be under no obligation to make repairs except such as might be enforced through the aid of a statute. It appears, however, that the tenant hired the house and agreed to keep it in repair during his term; repairs were made so that the house was put in a condition to the tenant's satisfaction before the term began; thereafter the tenant induces the Board of Health not to cause repairs to be made to the plumbing, but to cause changes in the plumbing to be made, and the question is whether the tenant is liable for the cost thereof, imposed upon the landlord. The difficulty is in determining the meaning of the word repair. This word has been up before the Court several times for construction, but in most instances accompanied by additional words which helped the solution. If there were no plumbing whatever in the house when the tenant hired, and he induced the Board of Health to compel the landlord to put a system of plumbing in the house, would the tenant then be liable for the cost of the improvement? We think not. Now, there being a system of plumbing in the house, which, although accepted by the tenant, was not, as we must assume, in compliance with the law, is the tenant when he calls the attention of the Board of Health to this violation of the law, and thereby necessitates the improvement or change to be made, liable for the same as a repair; or is the change or improvement something additional to the house outside of the category of repairs, and therefore not within the tenant's contract? Were there no contract to repair and the Board of Health should condemn the plumbing and order the same to be removed because likely to produce sickness and ill-health, and if they enforced their order and abated the nuisance, the tenant would by statute be permitted to leave the house and terminate his liability for rent because of its untenable condition. Now the Board of Health practically goes to that extent in its direction and order; and the tenant, unless his contract otherwise obligates him, may, as a right, if the house is untenable because of the condition of the plumbing, remove therefrom and terminate his obligation for rent; provided, however, that the improvement or change ordered and directed by the Board of Health do not come within the term of repairs. In most of the cases where the question has been before the Court for the construction of the term repair some additional words were used in connection with the word repair, having an influence upon its meaning. In the case of Waight against the Albany Railroad Company, 8 Weekly Digest, 86, under a general covenant to repair a house the Court held that the tenant must keep it in substantial repair according to the age and nature of the building; that if the house were an old one the tenant was only bound to keep it up as an old house, and was not obliged to give the landlord the benefit of new work; in other words, the tenant was not bound to restore the premises in better condition than they were in at the commencement of the term.

In the case of Lockrow against Horgan, 58 New York, 635, there was a covenant on the part of the tenant to make such improvements as he might require, to attend to all necessary repairs, to keep the house in tenantable order, and to leave all the improvements upon the premises at the expiration of the lease. The rear wall of the building settled, and thereupon, an action being brought for the rent, the tenant defended on the ground that the premises became untenable and claimed that his covenant to repair did not cover such a defect. The Court held that, as the covenant was absolute to make all necessary repairs and keep the premises in tenantable order and no fault on the part of the landlord being shown, that the tenant was bound to make the repairs irrespective of the cause of the defect, and that, the tenant having abandoned the premises without making the repairs, the landlord had a right to make them and recover the expense. That it being by his own fault that the house became untenable, he was not exonerated from the payment of the rent.

But it will be seen that in this case the rear wall of the house, being a part of what the tenant covenanted to repair by his agreement to make all necessary repairs, and therefore the case is not a parallel one with that under discussion.

In the case of the Hartford & New York Steamboat Company against the Mayor the lease contained the following covenant on the part of the tenant:

"And the parties of the second part further covenant that during the continuance of said lease they will repair and keep the said wharves, piers or bulkheads in good repair at their own proper costs and charges, and surrender the same at the expiration of said term in as good condition as they are at the time they take possession thereof, the natural wear and decay excepted; * * * and that all alterations and improvements and repairs of whatsoever nature or kind are to be made at the expense of the parties of the second part, and to revert to the corporation at the expiration of the lease, or sooner termination thereof, without charge or deduction.

"And the said parties of the second part for themselves, their successors and assigns, hereby expressly covenant and agree that they will, during the continuance hereof, keep the wharves in good condition, and safe and proper repair, including especially the string pieces and other superficial portions thereof for safe usage, and in default of their so doing at any time after notice from the Comptroller, or other proper officer of the city, that such repairs are necessary, and ten days thereafter the said parties of the first part may repair the same, and the said parties of the second part, their successors and assigns, agree to pay to the parties of the first part all expenses of such repairs and interest, damage by the elements alone excepted." Thereafter the tenant brought an action against the city, wherein the complaint averred as follows:

"That the plaintiff is a corporation owning and operating a line of steamboats running between New York and Hartford; that on the 25th day of April, 1865, the defendant being the owner of pier 24, on the East River, and being bound by its charter and by the laws to maintain it for the use of the public, made an agreement with the plaintiff, which is annexed to the complaint, under and pursuant to which the plaintiff began to use the pier; that plaintiff entered into said agreement upon the representations made by the defendant that substantial repairs should be made by the defendant to said pier, and the plaintiff would be under no obligation to do other than ordinary and usual repairs; that defendant neglected to make such repairs; that when said agreement was made, said pier was old and substantially destroyed by natural wear and decay, and hidden and secret defects concealed under the water, so that the same fell down in April, 1867; that the defendant refused to rebuild, and plaintiff could not procure another pier, or carry on business without a pier, and therefore built the same, and sustained large damages by interruption of its business, etc.

"By the lease or agreement annexed, the city assigned and transferred to plaintiff for a term of ten years, the wharfage accruing for the use and occupation of the upper half of pier 24. The plaintiff claimed to recover the expense of rebuilding and damages, while deprived of the use of the pier. Defendant demurred that the complaint did not state facts constituting a cause of action."

The Court held that the complaint did not set forth a cause of action, and a demurrer thereto was properly sustained; that the alleged representations did not vary or add to, but were merged in the written agreement; that the omission to exercise a power conferred upon defendant to make an improvement was not a cause of action; and, as the complaint alleged that the pier was entirely gone, rendering the construction of a new pier necessary, the case was the same as if no pier had been built, and no duty rested upon it to build one; but assuming that it was the duty of the city, as to the public, to make repairs, and thus maintain the pier, the covenant in plaintiff's lease requiring it to make all repairs was an answer to any claim on its part for a loss arising from the want of such repairs. As to whether conceding it to be a legal public duty of the city to rebuild, and that it was not relieved of this duty, as far as plaintiff is concerned, by any agreement, the expense of rebuilding could be recovered against the city, in the absence of any covenant on its part to repair or rebuild or to compensate plaintiff for so doing, quare.

But it will be observed that in this case it was the pier that the tenant agreed to repair and the refusal of the city to rebuild the same was the cause of the plaintiff's complaint, and consequently this case is not a parallel to the one under discussion.

We must admit that the question is involved in difficulty, and in the absence of adjudication we refer the writer of the request to the adjudicated cases. It is our opinion that the new system of plumbing ordered to be put in by the Board of Health was not a repair, but was an addition to the house and an improvement, and it was not covered by the tenant's covenant to repair, and consequently he is not liable therefor. This answers the question whether the landlord could bring an action to forfeit the term granted by the lease.

A Yorkville real estate broker says that in his section of the city the all-modern-improvement flats are fast losing their popularity among real estate owners and investors. It is found, he says, when the figures for the year are made up that the net rental of what are known as cold-water flats, those without boiler, range, bath-tub, etc., will, as a general rule, exceed the net rental of those flats where the gross rental is very large in consequence of the conveniences to be found in the houses. Bath-tubs are used for coal-bins, ranges are broken and boiler pipes made to leak by careless tenants who do not appreciate these "little fancy dodges," as they are contemptuously termed. Hence, when repairs have been paid for, and Board of Health violations varied, the investment does not prove as profitable as where the building is of a poorer class.

Men and Things.

Last week the first parlor car ever constructed for a cable railroad made its inaugural trip over the Harlem Cable Railroad. This car, the "Manhattanville" by name, was built by the company from designs furnished by the road's superintendent, Mr. J. H. Robinson. It is 31 feet long, of the usual width, and has a seating capacity of twenty-eight, sixteen of the seats being revolving chairs, and the rest ranged round the sides as in the ordinary car. The car, heated and lighted by gas stored underneath the floor, was built at a cost of $4,500, an increase of $2,000 over the value of the ordinary car. It is paneled with birdseye maple and cherry, and the seats are of black walnut. The front of the car has no door, the gripman being admitted to the platform by the gates at the side. A small shelf placed against the front wall of the car is for an ice water tank. Altogether the car is both comfortable and elegant, and a decided improvement on the usual street car. It has been built as a sample of what all the cars on the surface line of the Third Avenue Company will be like when the cable system on that avenue supersedes the use of horses. An enthusiastic official of the company declares that the car which will be run on 3d avenue, in the future, will be as much superior to the "Manhattanville" as that car is to the cars now in use. No change will be made in the cars used on the 125th street line.

Personally I do not know anything about Mr. George M. Pullman, except that he is a man and his car-works made him a capitalist. Consequently I was glad to learn, through a Chicago railroad paper, that "with his accustomed public spirit" he was going to subscribe $100,000 to the World's Fair in 1892. Truly, he is a generous man—this builder of cars. But further down I read he had conditioned his gift on the holding of the celebration in Chicago. This, of course, did not sound so well, and it occurred to me that instead of "public spirit," the railroad journal ought to have put "Chicago spirit," for there is some difference between those two things to any one who lives in the small part of the world situated outside that city. Still further down there came the following sentence: "At whatever place in the country the Fair is located, the sleeping car business will necessarily be greatly increased, but Mr. Pullman being a citizen of Chicago and the great works of his company being located only a few miles away he is naturally in favor of that city as the site of the World's Fair." At this my disappointment was complete, and I felt like the cat who declared, after being kicked by her ordinarily kind master, that all her illusions in life were fast disappearing. I should like to ask that Chicago railway journal what the difference is between public spirit, Chicago spirit and Pullman spirit so far as Mr. Pullman is concerned?

Isabella, Queen of Castile, wife of Ferdinand, King of Arragon, is a very-much-neglected woman. Good and wise as she was I doubt very much that could she have foreseen the success of Columbus meant the creation of a nation of Protestant unbelievers she would have said: "I will assume the undertaking for my own crown of Castile, and providing the funds in the treasury should be found inadequate I am ready to pledge my jewels to defray the expenses thereof." It was bravely said, showing full well that the blood of John of Gaunt, flowing so freely in her veins, could lead sacrifices that were made not altogether in the name of religion; but the fact that she would mourn for our unbelief in the Holy Roman Church does not absolve us from gratitude. How have we shown any recognition of it? Simply by naming after her a couple of Western counties and a few postal stations. An adequate recognition truly! We are talked of as a chivalrous nation, yet this little bit of romance in our history—for it is part of our history—has made such a slight impression on our imaginations that we lack almost entirely a feeling of gratitude to the gentle spirit that helped Columbus on his way across the unknown waters. In the love of Christ and his maiden mother Isabella caused much misery, as she herself confessed; but her faults were those of her time, and we who owe nobody can tell how much to her, can afford to forget the Inquisition and raise some sort of a monument to this pious queen. Here we are about to commemorate the fourth anniversary of the discovery, which was due in some measure to her, and never a person has suggested that she should figure in the ceremonies. Shame on such a churlish and neglectful spirit! One of the first things that should strike the eye of the visitor to the coming World's Fair is a noble monument erected to the memory of Isabella, the queen, who sacrificed her queenly jewels that an unknown land might be discovered.

In "Bootles' Baby" there is a race—which takes place, of course, behind the scenes—between a pig and a rooster. The rooster wins; but, as the disgusted owner of the pig explains, "he rode half the way on my pig's back." Now far be it from me to symbolize Englishmen by a pig. As every one knows it is the lion which, out of all the animals, they pride themselves in resembling. And far be it from me to symbolize Americans by a rooster, rather than an eagle, although crowing is more in their line than soaring. Still it appears to me that Americans, like that rooster, have an unconsciously monkey-like way of getting to any goal on the British pig's back. There has been a furore in London recently over Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian poet and dramatist, and immediately our American managers get his plays, put them in their pockets, and get ready to give them to us. A M. Palmer, the Lyceum School of Acting, and Mr. Amborg all intend to produce Ibsen's plays. If Ibsen has one tithe in him of what is claimed for him, this is a most excellent thing to do. But why can we not originate some worthy furore or fashion ourselves? We buy 200,000 copies of "Quick and the Dead," and the world laughs at us for trouble and bad taste. We make the fortune of a Gunter, and we are and deserve to be laughed at again. When will we do something original that is not ridiculous?

1892, found that the lady herself was out; but was informed that her daughter was in. The intelligent young man—an Irishman, by the way—immediately asked how old the daughter was, thereby opening the interesting question (quite unintentionally, of course, for reporters have nothing to do with interesting questions) as to the amount of age which a person ought to possess in order to give an intelligent opinion on World's Fair topics. Evidently he would have refused utterly even to consider her statements if she had been under five years old. Finally, however, discovering that the daughter had reached maturity, he bid her come to him and propounded the following weighty question with an unconscious humor that lost nothing from the strong Hiberian accent in which it was uttered: "When the Fair begins there will be a great many foreign ladies coming over here; now, how shall the American ladies receive the foreign ladies?" I do not wish to penetrate into sanctum secrets, but I should like to know whether that question emanated from the editorial or reportorial head. We Americans have drunk so deeply of the Exhibition elixir that we have been restored, some of us, not merely to youth but to the babbling nonsense of childhood.

Big Figures for Down-town Properties.

The transfer of the premises No. 25 Pine street to the Lancashire Insurance Company in consideration of $195,000 makes a comparison with values of other costly down-town properties interesting. There is about 1,834 square feet in the lot bought by the Lancashire Company, on which they will build a ten-story office building, to cost $100,000. The price per square foot paid for the lot is a trifle over $106. Here is a table of the figures realized for other valuable parcels:

New Members.

Thos. L. Reynolds, Eide H. Hines, Fred. Walter, Truman H. Baldwin, Otto Pullich and Samuel T. Ridley were elected members of the Real Estate Exchange on Wednesday.

Builder Francis Crawford, of 14 West 72d street, and J. Johnston Woods of 351 West 31st street, have been proposed for membership.

The Evolution of the Tenement House.

If there is one class of building more than another in process of erection to-day in New York City, which shows a more marked progress over that which prevailed a third of a century ago, it is the tenement house. At that period, the problem of securing to the unfortunate occupant even a modicum of light and air was difficult of solution, and the evils of the system of overcrowding in dark unventilated rooms, with defective sanitary arrangements, seemed to have settled down upon that class of the community which had to endure them with a tenacity of grasp that required a heroic effort to unloose. The remedy came at length, but not until the claim of the sufferers secured a large and much-needed share of public recognition, and the first effort at tenement house reform was brought about through legislative action taken in 1856-57. The Legislature appointed a special committee to examine into and report upon the condition of tenement houses in New York City.

A study of the report of the committee made to the Legislature in March, 1857, throws considerable light on the early history of the "tenant house" system, which was described as the offspring of municipal neglect as well as * * * over-population and destitution." The growth of the city's commerce encroaching upon the dwelling house—the vacations of old mansions from time to time by wealthy residents, so as to remove farther from the noise and bustle of trade—the passing of these mansions into the possession of the boarding-house keeper, the internal changes by which the large rooms were partitioned off into smaller ones without regard to light or ventilation, until they became filled from cellar to garret with a class of tenants living from hand to mouth. This was in part the condition of the tenement house of that day, and though the evils were very clearly brought before the Legislature it was nobody's business, and nothing was done.

The Citizens' Association was the next public body which took up the subject of tenement house reform, and having organized in 1864 a Council of Hygiene and Public Health, the latter body inaugurated in that year the first regular sanitary inspection of tenement houses. The sanitary survey then made showed that there were in 1864 over fifteen thousand tenement houses occupied by nearly five hundred thousand persons, and that the rate of over-crowding, both as regarded the allowance of superficial area and of air space to each person, far exceeded the ordinary degree of aggregation of the poorer classes in other cities.

"The plans, construction and management of these houses," the report of the Council went on to say, "had been left almost exclusively to the caprice and inordinate selfishness of men whose sole object has been to make small investments and a borrowed capital pay enormous advances without regard to the poor tenants' welfare or the public safety."

As illustrating the lack of proper provision for light and ventilation in the tenement houses which were being constructed at that period, the following diagram of a tenement building erected in 1863 (and at the date of the report a comparatively new building) is reproduced from the Council's report, and will, in the light of the present system of construction, be a revelation. It was designed for the accommodation(?) of twelve families on each floor, and contained twelve living rooms and twenty-one bedrooms, fifteen of the latter having no light except what came through the family sitting or living room, and being entirely unventilated. For convenience of reference the rooms are designated by letters, viz.: L, light rooms; D, dark rooms; H, halls:

TENEMENT BUILDING OF 1863—TWELVE FAMILIES ON EACH FLOOR.

The outcome of the work of the Council of Hygiene was the passage of the Metropolitan Health law in February, 1866, creating a "Metropolitan Sanitary District" co-equal in extent with the Metropolitan Police District of the State, and including in its operation the counties of New York, Westchester, Kings, Queens and Richmond (Staten Island), the sanitary affairs of which were to be regulated by the Metropolitan Board of Health. The law, however, while giving supervisory power of a more or less limited character over tenement houses, as then in existence, had no authority in the matter of construction. The faults so glaringly conspicuous in the arrangement of the rooms were not removed, and all that the Board of Health could do was to lessen the dangers to the community by the enforcement of the authorized sanitary regulations. In the following year, however, the Health laws were amended by the passage of "An Act for the regulation of tenement and lodging houses in the cities of New York and Brooklyn" (passed May 14, 1867), which covered the construction, the prefixed diagrams were in general use. It did not, however, come up to the requirements of the period, and as the problem of obtaining a plan which could be generally approved, with occasional modifications to suit individual tastes, was an apparently difficult one, a money prize was offered as an inducement to architects, which resulted in several hundred plans being submitted, from which the one, given above, was selected and adjudged the winner.

The result of the agitation of 1879 was the enactment of chapter 504, of the laws of that year, which vested the necessary authority as regards the construction of tenement houses, in regard to light and ventilation, in the Health Board. The difficulties in the way of getting architects, builders and owners, however, to fall into line seemed as insuperable as ever, and it was only by dint of persistent effort that small light shafts for bedrooms could be introduced, or the area of contemplated buildings on city lots be restricted so as to insure the best results. They were lively times for the architects and the board, and for a long time it was a difficult matter which had gained or lost in the struggle.

The diagram shown herewith illustrates the advance in so far as the ventilation of the bedrooms is concerned, and will serve to show how difficult it is to obtain everything supposed to be fixed by legislation. Reforms are of slow growth, and the tenement house article apparently offers no exception to the generally accepted rule.

TENEMENT HOUSE PLAN—FOUR FAMILIES ON FLOOR. HALLS OPENING TO OUTER AIR.

TENEMENT HOUSE PLAN. WATER-CLOSETS IN BUILDING.

The "French flat" style about this time came into favor with builders, but as these buildings were constructed on a more expensive plan than the tenement it is not our purpose to do more than refer to them in a general way. They were, as a rule, planned on no uniform scale, and it is to be presumed that in the provision for light and ventilation each plan had to be dealt with on its own merits; that is, its peculiar features had to be specially considered outside of any existing general method of approval.

We now come to the style of tenement arranged for four families on a floor with the studed light shafts lighting all interior rooms, water-closets in the yard, and halls running through the building and opening to the outer air. This was a long step in advance, so far as light and ventilation were concerned, but it was not without its dangerous feature so far as the possibility of a fire occurring was concerned. The studed shafts invariably acted as a duct for the flames; but the Building Department has had this remedied, and since 1887 these shafts are required to be constructed of fire-proof material.

In the diagrams above we have in the progressive order the brick shaft and for the first time the water-closets indoors. Under the Plumbing law of 1881 the plumbing work, in plan and execution, was made subject to the supervision of the Board of Health, and the sanitary facilities thus afforded were considered by some as advisable, while in many instances the enforcement of indoor sanitation was a failure. The system, however, was being developed, and looked at in this connection it must be considered as in accord with the progressive spirit of the times.

We now present illustrations of the latest development of the tenement idea, containing all the sanitary appliances needed in the house, with the exception of the bath-tub—a luxury rarely appreciated. It will be seen that every room opens to the outer air, and when it is remembered that only 78 per cent. of lots on which such houses are constructed can be built upon it must be admitted that the tenement house of to-day, in New York, so far as arrangement and construction are concerned, affords but little room for improvement. No plan for light and ventilation of a tenement house of five stories having more than twelve rooms on a floor will be approved by the Board of Health if more than 65 per cent. of the lot is covered, unless where the light courts are so arranged as to provide windows having drainage and the sanitary care of all such buildings. The opposition arrayed against the increased power assumed by the Board was, however, of such a character that there was but little in the way of structural improvement made, but whatever had been done in that direction was an improvement.

Public attention was again drawn to the subject of tenement-house construction in 1879, up to which time the class of building represented by the

12 square feet of light and air space for every room, in which case the available space for building is increased to 78 per cent., while the rigid enforcement of the plumbing law of 1881 brings the sanitary work up to the highest point of perfection perhaps possible of attainment, and at least far in advance of that of any city in this or any other country. But while as here shown, the process of evolution as regards tenement buildings has been in accord with the advancement which is so marked a feature of the times, it cannot be said that the same progress characterizes our tenement population. The advantages provided are not turned to the best account in a majority of instances, which is perhaps largely due to the influx of a foreign population not accustomed to their enjoyment. On this account, although there is but little to improve as regards the "tenant house" as it is to day, there is much to be done in the way of educating the "tenant" how to appreciate what has been done for him. There is, consequently, a vast field for operation in this direction, for it must be apparent that the best efforts of the Board of Health and the property-owners will yield no adequate result without the co-operation of the tenant in the work of sanitary progress.

The Apartment Hotel.

ITS CAUSES AND PROSPECTS.

For some time a new departure in the way of building has been taking place in this city which has only been made possible in consequence of the exceptional conditions of living in the metropolis. This departure is a new one and yet it is old. It is nothing more or less than the erection of hotels on the family plan of a simpler and less expensive character than the old ones, yet with superior advantages in comfort and living. The new style of buildings here referred to retain their character of a flat, while they will give board in a dining-room common to all the tenants.

There are no less than three such buildings under course of construction on the west side, while a well-known Broadway flat is being turned into a building similar in kind. The last is the "Saratoga" or "Sidney," on the northwest corner of Broadway and 52d street. The owners of this flat felt that they could rent their suites to better advantage if they turned the building into a hotel. The others are the two Brennan buildings on Central Park West, between 74th and 75th streets, and the Hotel Beresford on the corner of Manhattan square and Central Park West.

The writer called upon Michael Brennan to ascertain what prompted him to build a hotel instead of two flats, as he had originally intended. The object was to gather an idea as to the motives which builders had in putting up this class of structures, and to learn whether they would be likely to be successful. His answer shows that the regulations of the Board of Health were primarily responsible for his change of plan, while the success of similar hotels elsewhere was the secondary cause. He said: "According to the present law you can only build a flat 80 feet high, even though your building is absolutely fire-proof. This is an absurd and inconsistent law. I deem that a man or woman's life is as precious to them in an apartment house as it is in a hotel, and there ought to be no discrimination made between one and the other, so long as either building is fire-proof. I first filed plans for two seven-story apartment houses. They were to have been not over 80 feet high and absolutely fire-proof. When I came to make up my final calculations I found, however, I could not build a seven-story fire-proof building and compete with the rents of flats that were not fire-proof, owing to the larger cost. I resolved to overcome this difficulty by adding two more stories, making them nine stories high, thus obtaining a sufficiently larger rental to cover the greater cost. The Building Department would have allowed me to build nine stories, as my plans called for heavy walls, regular warehouse walls, and for fire-proofing. The Health Department, however, objected, stating that I must determine upon the character of the building first. I then changed my plans to make the buildings apartment hotels, with one dining-room for all the tenants. I got the idea from seeing how successful one or two other of these hotels had been. People seem to be drifting into wishing to live in them. They are so much troubled with servants, while it costs less and saves considerable annoyance. The Winthrop, on 7th avenue and 124th and 125th streets, is an example of the success of the apartment hotel. The Saratoga, on Broadway and 52d street, has been turned into a similar building, while I have heard it said that the Clark estate have discussed the advisability of doing the same thing with the Dakota."

The writer then called at the Hotel Beresford, and saw the owner, A. S. Walker. He said: "The Winthrop, which I built, is an example of the remarkable success of the apartment hotel. It is not only full all the time, but we have a thousand applicants every year for rooms. The Beresford is now half rented, though the building will not be finished till October 1. The success of the apartment hotel depends upon three things: 1. The location. 2. The interior plan. 3. It must be run properly. It must be on a corner and near an Elevated road station; it must be planned so as to make things convenient for the tenants, and it must be conducted, both in the service and table, so as to give satisfaction. The success of such hotels depends principally upon the management. Capitalists are not likely, for that very reason, to invest freely in them, because they will be afraid of the management not proving successful. The owners will in most cases have to run the buildings themselves or lease them."

The apartment hotel has come into existence owing to the desire on the part of many people to get rid of the cares and expenses of housekeeping, especially in the matter of servants. They simply rent their suite of rooms, including chamber service, and pay so much per capita for board. This is the main feature in which the apartment hotel differs from the ordinary hotel, where the charge includes both room and board.

A Brick Trust Proposed.

WHAT DEALERS AND MANUFACTURERS SAY.

Quite a little stir has been created among dealers in brick, owing to news having leaked out that the formation of a brick trust is contemplated by some New York capitalists.

The total production of brick at points in New York and vicinity from which this market obtains its supply was, in 1888, about 900,000,000. The lowest production during the last ten years was in 1879, when it was only 350,000,000. The output for each year since has been as follows:

1880	450,000,000	1885	850,000,000
1881	500,000,000	1886	960,000,000
1882	600,000,000	1887	960,000,000
1883	650,000,000	1888	900,000,000
1884	600,000,000	1889 (estimated)	1,000,000,000

One of the organizers of the so-called trust is A. W. Platt, a gentleman who has had considerable experience in forming companies of every description. Mr. Platt was loth to talk upon the matter. He said: "Nothing has really been done as yet. It is merely being talked over. When there is anything accomplished worthy of reporting I will be happy to give THE RECORD AND GUIDE any information which it may be in my power to disclose."

"Are you of opinion," ventured the writer, "that a trust is likely to reduce the cost to consumers?"

"There is no doubt about it. Of course the small men are likely to oppose a combination, but they are bound to succumb eventually."

W. K. Hammond, a manufacturer as well as a dealer in brick, was asked whether he thought a brick trust would succeed.

"Not at this time," he replied. "Later on the manufacturers will probably form a combination, but not for some years yet."

"Why do you think that a combination will not succeed at this time?"

"Well, I am not prepared to state for publication the various reasons. I will mention one. The Meyerhoffs, the Washburns, Sayer & Fisher, and other well-known manufacturers who have large plants are self-made men, and it would be difficult to make them believe that a combination could run the business better than they can themselves.

"But suppose they could be convinced that it would be to their gain?" ventured the writer.

"Well," said Mr. Hammond, "they are intelligent men, and I don't believe they would stand in the way of any plan that would bring them better profits than they are now making."

George Shultz, the well-known dealer in brick, was asked whether a trust would not crush out the dealers and middlemen.

"I guess not," he answered with a positive air. "They can't do without the dealers and they'll find it out if they try it on."

"What is to prevent a combination from manufacturing and dealing directly with the consumers?" asked the writer.

"I am not going to stand here and tell you a long story," said Mr. Schultz, with a smile. "But I give it to you as my opinion, from years of experience, that a trust could not do away with the middlemen in the brick trade, no matter what it may do in any other business."

One of the parties who has been interested in the proposed combination is Chas. W. Mackey, president of the Norfolk & Virginia Beach Railroad Company and a lawyer. He is just the sort of person to carry through a large plan with success. He was very frank about it. He declared positively that nothing had yet been accomplished except preliminary talk. The situation was being discussed, but it was not at all settled upon whether the parties interested would go into the project, and whether it would be likely to succeed.

"The production of brick," he said, "in this neighborhood is, I am told, about 1,100,000,000 per annum, and it would require somewhere from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 capital to form a brick trust. It would be useless for me to say anything more than this for publication in your paper, for nothing has yet been accomplished, nor is it by any means certain that anything will come of it."

"Do you think that a brick trust would result in lower prices for the consumers?"

"I am sure of it," said Mr. Mackey. "Not only that, but it would enable manufacturers to turn out a brick more uniform in grade and of a better character. It would enable them, also, to establish a standard price for each grade and introduce improved methods in the manufacture. Hitherto nearly every factory has gone on producing in the old-fashioned way, and the same ancient plant is used. A trust would spend money in experimenting to reduce the cost of production to a minimum, and it would select the best spot for cheap manufacture and cheap shipping facilities. All this would result in a better grade of brick being produced at a cheaper price to the builder."

"Would the middlemen be forced to the wall?" asked the writer.

"Not necessarily," was the reply. "We may find it advantageous to co-operate with them, and if so the dealers will form an important function in the new state of affairs. The tendency of modern business is to the formation of combinations, and my experience has shown me that so far from increasing the price of a product to the consumer they decrease it, and give him a better article besides."

A well-known manufacturer seen on 'Change was asked if a trust could be made to succeed.

"Certainly, it could be easily accomplished. Perhaps not at this moment, but there would be comparatively little difficulty in organizing it."

"Is not the formation of a brick trust more difficult of accomplishment from the fact that the raw material is at hand in the earth, and is boundless in supply?"

"Not at all. Oil is in the earth and in boundless supply (?). But it costs money to get the plant, etc., and this is also the case with brick. No, sir, there wouldn't be much difficulty in organizing a brick trust. Whether prices would be lower is a matter I don't care to make any prophecy about."

Peck, Martin & Co., the well-known brick manufacturers, were seen at their yards on West 30th street, but they declined, though much pressed, to make any statement for publication.

A member of a prominent firm of manufacturers said: "I doubt if the present movement to form a trust will succeed, as it originated with projectors and not with the manufacturers. I doubt if the latter will join them. If a dozen of the large manufacturers were to join forces and become as anxious to form a trust as these projectors are I think they might succeed. The projectors say to the small men: 'You can continue to manufacture at your present stands and you will not be hurt in the least; in fact you will gain.' But it is not clear that the interest of the small man will be as great in his yard if it belongs to a combine instead of to himself. The trust, as proposed by the projectors, will probably raise the price of brick to the consumer. A proper combination would result in a reduced cost of production—by the saving of waste, by the introduction in all the yards of the most improved appliances, and by the working of the yards that are most favorably located and best equipped to their fullest capacity, leaving yards at distant points and not so well equipped to be used for reserve product only."

Interesting to Some Broadway Owners.

Although the nine-story building which the Goelet estate is erecting on the southeast corner of Broadway and 33d street is rapidly approaching the top story, the owners have not yet decided upon what use they are going to put the different floors to. A reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE called at the office of the Goelet estate to ascertain whether the character of the building had yet been decided upon, whether it was to be used for a hotel or for business or otherwise; but not only had the estate not settled definitely upon this matter, but there seems no likelihood that they will do so for a month or two, as one of the members is abroad and one in Newport.

The question of settling the character of such a building is, indeed, quite a problem, and even to an estate which has handled property for many years it presents difficulties. To throw a little light on the subject, the reporter called on a few of the principal agents in the district between 23d and 34th streets, on the line of Broadway, to ascertain their views. The question was asked: "What would you build on a corner plot on Broadway, between those streets, if you owned such a plot? Would you build a hotel, a flat, an office building, or a combination of business and living floors? And if so, how many and which floors would you rent for the one purpose and how many for the other?" The replies were as follows:

First Agent: "I would have my first floor rented out for stores and every floor above for bachelors' apartments, with the exception of the top floor, which I would rent out for studios. 'Would I have more than one floor for studios?' No, I would not, for there is a large demand for bachelors' quarters, while there is but a limited demand for studios. I doubt if I would make my second floor a business story, as I don't think there is sufficient demand up this way. People who want offices up town can't afford to pay high prices. I would therefore have bachelors' apartments above, or small suites for young couples. It is not at all necessary to exclude ladies from a flat where there are bachelors' quarters. You might as well exclude them from hotels. I would build, however, in such a manner that if I felt it advisable to do so I could some day turn my building into a hotel or an apartment hotel. I think it would not be a bad idea to have a restaurant on the second floor, yet I am not sure about that, for restaurants don't pay under these circumstances and the disadvantages might outweigh the advantages. There is a good demand for three and four rooms and bathroom for young married people, and for one and two rooms for bachelors. Such a plan would fill up a building directly it was completed."

Second Agent: "I would have stores on the first floor. I would have them cut up into stores of a smaller dimension, except I could find some prominent and safe firm to take the whole building for a hotel. I would cut up the stores because there is always a larger demand for smaller than larger ones. I would have my second floor laid out for office purposes, and I would have my top floor for studios, with possibly a few studios on the floor next to the top, where good light could be had. The rest I would let out for bachelors, or for families, or both. In the latter case I would have three floors for families and two floors for bachelors."

Third Agent: "I would have my first floor in stores, my second floor for light and clean business purposes, and my third floor for offices. I would have the balance for bachelors' apartments of one and two rooms, and my top floor for studios for artists, architects and others."

A few examples are not wanting of what has and has not succeeded in this line. The Alpine, on the northeast corner of Broadway and 33d street, is an eight-story building. The first floor has stores, the second floor business rooms, and the top floor studios, etc., including some four or five architects. The floors between are entirely laid out as bachelors' apartments. Not one of the latter are now vacant, and the agents of the building say there are half-a-dozen inquiries daily for more. In the summer a few were vacant, but only a very small proportion. The stores, etc., are also well rented. The San Carlo, on the northeast corner of Broadway and 31st street, though only just finished, is already half rented. The first floor will have stores, and half of the second floor will be for business purposes, the other half being laid out in apartments. The balance of the building is being rented out to bachelors and families of two or three.

A Knotty Question.

IMPORTANT TO AUCTIONEERS.

On April 18, 1887, the Real Estate Exchange sold at public auction an auctioneer's stand on the Exchange to Joseph Arthur Levy, then of the real estate firm of Leon Tanenbaum & Co., and since deceased. The price paid was $860. Mr. Levy subsequently disposed of his interest in the stand to D. P. Ingraham & Co., and then sold his seat. Mr. Levy wrote to the Exchange asking them to transfer the stand to the new buyers. The Exchange declined, stating that they only recognized Mr. Levy in the matter. They tacitly allowed him to sublet the stand, however, and placed, at his request, the name of D. P. Ingraham & Co. on the stand. Mr. Levy has since died and the Exchange took the position that he was no more a member of the Exchange and an auctioneer, and that therefore had no title to the property under the terms of sale, which ran as follows:

The purchaser of such choice will be entitled to occupy the stand for the term of five years, from the first of May, 1887, provided that he pays such annual rent as may be charged therefor, and remains a member of the Exchange and an auctioneer.

The Exchange, therefore, announced a sale of the seat for Monday, but the occupiers of the stand took out an injunction restraining the institution from selling it. The Messrs. Ingraham have the use of the stand by direction of the court until the point is settled, which it is expected to be in a few days.

Notice to Architects.

The attention of architects, builders and others is drawn to the following notice which has just been posted up by the Board of Health:

To assure action on plans at the regular meeting of the board they should be filed in this office not later than Saturday of each week.

"The object of this notice," said Chief Inspector Collins, "is to assist architects and others in getting their plans passed within a few days after they are filed. It is frequently the custom for them to rush them in on Tuesday, sometimes a few moments before the board commences its sitting. Of course that is too late, and they lose a week in consequence. This notice ought to have the desired effect, and will very much facilitate business for us and them."

Personal.

F. de Ruyter Wissmann is again back to business, after an absence of about three months which he spent abroad. Mr. Wissmann says the prospects are bright for an active fall and winter business.

C. Grayson Martin has returned from Paris. He spent four months on the other side of the Atlantic. W. C. Martin has also returned to town after a long vacation.

Builder Bernard Muldoon was seen on 'Change yesterday. He is looking for a bargain in well-located lots.

Albert Bellamy has returned from Europe.

John J. Burchell is a frequent visitor at the Exchange.

Samuel McMillan has just returned to town after a long sojourn on his stock farm at Greenville, Mercer Co., Pa., and among the Orange Mountains.

Is the Site Popular?

EDITOR RECORD AND GUIDE:

The selected Fair site is not so popular as some of the daily newspapers would have us believe. Harlem real estate brokers, the very men who would reap the greatest benefit, financially, should the Exposition be held on the grounds at present designated, are, in great part, opposed to the committee's selection. The scheme, they say, is impracticable, not only from one cause, but from many. They do not like the prospect of having upper Central Park mutilated, and they maintain that a good deal of Central Park must be used if the Fair is to be a success. They are opposed to tying Harlem property up in an Exposition knot for three long years, and thus retarding the growth of what is now one of the most prosperous of New York's subdivisions. The objections they make are manifold, and if any Fair site committeeman labors under the impression that he has made a popular selection let him walk through 125th street and hear the talk about Inwood, Port Morris and Oak and Barretto Points.

Real estate men on the west side, from 59th to 125th street, are practically unanimous in favoring the ground selected. To use a current expression they are "red hot" for the chosen site, but this is to be expected as they must feel the increase in real estate values if any one does. East side men are neither hot nor cold. Some favor and some do not favor the site, but the prevalent feeling seems to be only lukewarm, which at this stage of the preparations is indeed a bad sign.

The Ways of Traders.

There is no trader or speculator in New York who tries harder to cover up his deal, than Wm. Buhler, Jr., except perhaps, Wm. R. Martin. They use several dummies to take and give title, and also try to have deeds involving the exchange of properties recorded on different days so that the transactions will not be understood. The latest instance of this occurs this week, when Mr. Martin exchanges a plot of lots on the southeast corner of Madison avenue and 98th street with Mr. Buhler for the flats Nos. 41 and 43 West 60th street. The official filings show that the latter property was conveyed by Mr. Buhler to Mary K. Eichhorn, who transferred to Martin. Mr. Buhler, instead of giving or taking title, first transfers one property to Eichhorn and takes the Madison avenue lots in the name of Alex. Hess. In our issue of August 17th we explained another deal in which some of these persons figured which lead to an unusual increase in the values of several parcels. The names of Smith and Shannon are among the persons Mr. Martin uses in his transactions.

In the City Departments.

In the Departmental estimate for 1890 the Park Commissioners place the cost of caring for and maintaining 72d, 110th and 122d streets and 5th and Morningside avenues at $20,000. For the improvement and maintenance of Riverside Park and avenue $30,000 is called for, and for Morningside Park $20,000 is wanted. The sum of $50,000 is asked for the care and maintenance of the new parks north of the Harlem River, including roads and bridges and one-half of City Island Bridge. An additional sum of $8,000 is wanted for locating and monumenting the boundary lines of the Bronx Park.

Bids will soon be advertised for flagging the block occupied by the Eighth Regiment Armory, 4th and Madison avenues, 94th and 95th streets, also for gas fixtures and furniture for the same armory. It is estimated the flagging will cost $8,000, the gas fixtures $7,000 and the furniture $8,000.

The report of the Commissioners of Estimate on the matter of acquiring lands for school purposes on the northwest corner of 93d street and 10th avenue has been confirmed by the Court. The awards amount to $79,000 and the expenses, etc., to $2,726, making a total of $81,726. The plot advertised to be taken was 170.1 on the street and 120.6 on the avenue.

Important to Property-Holders.

Notes and Items.

A line of surface cars on 9th avenue is just now badly needed. There are horse-cars on 8th and 10th avenues where there are few passengers, but on 9th avenue there has been no effort to establish a car line. The stations on the Elevated railroad on the west side are a considerable distance apart, and persons who do a local business would be very glad of any means of conveyance that would save them the journeys to and from the stations. Ninth avenue will, without doubt, be the great shopping centre of the west side and horse cars would be the most convenient form of traveling from place to place, especially when the distance is but a few blocks. Here is a field for unemployed capital.

Prices of realty in the old parts of Brooklyn do not seem to be on the increase. As the streets change from residence into business localities prices take a decided fall. An instance of this is the recent transfer of Secretary Tracy's house, No. 148 Montague street, to Rudolph H. Raphael for $20,000. Eighteen years ago General Tracy paid $27,000 for the same property.

The Manhattan Elevated road served, during the past week, notice upon the owners of a vast amount of property that it proposes to institute condemnation proceedings on their property. The properties covered by the notice include over 350 separate pieces and are in various parts of the city: Trinity place, Church, Vesey and Murray streets, Park place, Barclay street, West Broadway, South 5th avenue, Prince street, West 3d street, West 53d street, 6th, 8th and 9th avenues on the west side, and on Division and Allen streets, 1st avenue, East 23d street and 2d avenue on the east side.

The Park Commissioners have decided to repair the sidewalks and approaches to the Madison Avenue Bridge as suggested by THE RECORD AND GUIDE some few weeks ago. Bids have been received by the Commission for relaying 425 square yards of granite block pavement and 993 ineal feet of granite flagging. One of the conditions of the contract will be that the work must be done in forty days under a forfeit of four dollars per diem.

Ninth avenue stores seem to be in considerable demand. One builder of flats on the avenue says he has received three months' rent from these tenants who have rented stores in buildings which are not yet up to the first tier of beams. This, of course, is unusual and hard to explain in view of the fact that a considerable number of stores still remain vacant after the flats above are occupied.

The six houses being built by the Rhinelander estate on the north side of 87th street, between 1st and 2d avenues, are up to their first tier of beams. They are to be three-story, high stoop, private dwellings, and they will be 16.6 and 17x50 in size. The fronts will be of brick, stone and terra cotta. Hubert, Pirsson & Hoddick are the architects.

The Young Men's Christian Union are building a temporary structure, 50x125, on the corner of Alexander avenue and 138th street, in which they propose to hold the largest fair ever planned in the annexed district from December 3d to the 13th, for the purpose of increasing the fund for their permanent building, which is to be erected on 138th street, near Lincoln avenue.

Building Association Notes.

There is no let up in the number of new building associations incorporated. Two have been started—the Model and the Central—within the past month or so, and there are more being talked about. We judge that it is very desirable that there should be an increase in the number of associations proportionate to the increase in the would-be shareholders. It is necessary, of course, that each association should grow to such a size that it can have plenty of loanable capital at its command, and can operate largely enough to keep the machine in working order. But from the very fact that the associations are essentially co-operative there must be preserved a certain esprit de corps, which might possibly be lost if the association was so large that the individuality of each member would count for very little. There have been six or seven large loans, aggregating some $100,000, given out during the past week.

The spectacle of an industry willing to place restrictions on itself is somewhat peculiar; but such, as a matter of fact, is the position of the building associations in this State. It is probable that legislation will be urged on the next Legislature restricting the scope and the methods of the building associations of this State. A bill very much on the same lines as the law at present in force in Massachusetts will very likely be recommended. This Massachusetts law is regarded by many building association people as a singularly well-constructed piece of legislation. There are limitations put upon the number of shares any one man can hold, the rate of interest is legally constituted, the value of each share is fixed, arbitrarily to a certain extent, at $200, and the premiums are required to be paid on the installment plan. All these regulations simplify the system without in any way impeding the officers and shareholders in the exercise of their legitimate functions. In this State there are so many different ways of placing the value of shares, charging the interest and paying the premiums, that it needs an expert to understand the various methods, and place one association beside another for purposes of comparison. Hence it is that very likely a determined effort will be made to pass some such similar law in this State, framed on the same lines as the Massachusetts law, but without quite so much restriction.

Nearly all the building associations at present are organized under the law of 1851, which though it allows from its liberality the utmost freedom of movement, for that very reason permits the incorporation of companies not co-operative in character and spirit to usurp the functions and thrive on the success of the co-operative movement. Building association people perceive what railroad companies and other organizations cannot perceive, viz.: that wise restriction is a good thing. Builders may protest against building laws, but nevertheless those laws are a benefit not only for the public but for the builders themselves. The interests of honest men are always hurt by the tricks of rascals in the same line of business. The provision of the law of 1851 that bears upon the national associations is, however, the one that is occupying most attention. New York has become the centre of the fight against these "nationals," and if legislative restrictions can be imposed upon them in this State, our example may very well be followed elsewhere. The intention so far as it has been defined is to require that a building association, in order to do business in this State, should be organized under the laws of this State, and even so far as possible to limit the area of each association in the State to a definite locality.

There are other ways of getting at the national associations than by legislation. The Bank Superintendent, Willis Paine, has the power to investigate their proceedings, but he does not seem to be inclined to do so. A representative of the Evening Post—Mr. W. A. Linn—had an interview with him lately, and he declared, while sympathizing with the attacks made upon the nationals, that he was powerless to make any investigation unless requested to do so by either three or five shareholders in a given association. This would not be a difficult thing to do in view of the fact that not long since an advertisement appeared in the Herald from a man who, possessing certain shares in the National Mutual, was willing to sell them. There must be others who either are dissatisfied or else are alarmed by the recent attacks on the nationals. But, leaving aside this contingency, it is claimed that under the amendment to the Act of 1851, passed in 1875, Mr. Paine has all the power he needs.

Even, however, if no investigation is made and no legislation is passed—and it is doubtful if any legislation would be effective—the agitation at present under way, provided it is founded on truth, cannot fail ultimately to hurt the national associations severely. If the members of these associations find by experience that these management funds so eat up any profit which the building association machinery may give them it will not be long before they will lose their shareholders.

The Riverside Park Site.

The following letter on the Riverside Park site for the Columbian Exposition has been sent to Mayor Grant :

NEW YORK, Sept. 19, 1889.

Hon. HUGH J. GRANT, Mayor and Chairman of World's Committee :

DEAR SIR—I heartily indorse Mr. Stokes' admirable letter to you commending the Riverside site. Mr. Stokes states the merits of this site so forcibly that hardly anything more can be added, but some persons have raised the question that it is not large enough ; the idea of trying to make our proposed Fair cover more ground than any other is an absurd one. Our chief aim should be to make our Fair unrivalled in excellence.

Among other advantages of the Riverside site are these :

It is the nearest to the heart of the city and can be made the most accessible of any of the prominent sites mentioned. It has an average elevation of about 125 feet above tide water.

There are comparatively few property-owners to be dealt with, and at present there are only seven houses of any account within its boundaries. Gen. Grant's tomb would alone draw thousands to this particular vicinity. People coming from Brooklyn or Jersey City could have a delightful sail up the broad Hudson, which would be much more pleasant than sailing through the narrow and dangerous East River. Visitors coming from out of town on steamers, yachts, etc., would find it very comfortable to remain on board while anchored in 40 feet of water.

Yachting and boating could be made very attractive features.

The managers of the Fair would be justified in spending considerably more money on permanent buildings at Riverside and Morningside than they would in some suburban part of our city.

Another reason why the west side should derive the benefit from a World's Fair: the property-owners there paid millions to obtain Riverside and Morningside Parks, while the whole city at large paid the costs for obtaining the recently acquired parks in the new wards.

A very serious drawback against the lowlands at Inwood, Pelham or Port Morris would be the pests of mosquitoes and the malarial bugbear, while there can be no question but what Riverside and Morningside Parks are entirely free from that criticism, and also that it is much the healthiest site mentioned and would be the coolest in summer.

It may not be generally known that the Park Department are to make a grand circle entrance into Central Park at 110th street, corner of 8th avenue, and also that a bill passed the last Legislature to widen 110th street, between Central Park and Riverside avenue and make it a grand parkway.

The people of Paris have passed through the same experience that we are now having in site hunting, but for four successive times they have wisely located their Exposition on the nearest available site, the Champ de Mars and they find the same result that we should derive from the Riverside site, viz.: that people would visit the fair six times at Riverside where they would go only once to Inwood or beyond the Harlem.

From every essential point of view all thinking people should recognize that the superiority of the Riverside site is beyond all question the best. Very respectfully,

FRANK R. HOUGHTON.

[Mr. Houghton errs as to the number of houses on the site. He says there are only seven "of any account." As a matter of fact there are nineteen on Riverside Drive and on the streets between 97th and 127th streets, within a block of the Drive.—ED.]

THE WOMAN'S CYCLE, a semi-monthly paper, edited by Jennie C. Croly, is something of a departure in women's journals. It has nothing to do with dresses or society, cooking does not come within its sphere, and the fashion-plate will never be seen on its pages. It is devoted to the associated life of women. Clubs are starting all over the country for the purpose, not of affording a lounging place, or for the purposes of studying Browning or spreading one person's truth as everybody's, but with the object of bringing women together that they may pursue ideas and culture in common.

West side real estate men are very anxious about the proceedings in the 86th street cross-town railway, which is to run from river to river through 86th street and the Transverse road. Tracks are laid on the east side from Madison avenue to the East River and on the west side from 10th avenue to the river. The rails on the west side were laid by the Boulevard Company, who, up to about two years ago, used to run a certain number of cars each day from their main line to Riverside Drive. The Park Department, it is understood by the public, are waiting for a further appropriation to complete their work, but it is an open secret on the west side that the principal property-owners on West 86th street are withholding their consent to the running of the road through this street which they have laid out with trees and grass plots and other improvements at great expense and trouble. Those objecting to the running of the line in 86th street are willing, even anxious, to use their influence and extend their consent to the running of the line through either 85th or 87th street, or both. This will probably be the course adopted as the same men practically own a controlling interest in all three streets. The Park Department, however, could start the line and have the cars run as far as 8th avenue when it would probably not be so difficult to induce property-owners to give their consent. The trouble about this road is that it is and always has been something of a myth; nothing seems to be doing in the matter. If the cars were once started, property-owners west of 8th avenue would have an incentive to give their consent, but as the matter now stands they would not reap the advantage of an active road by agreeing because the thing looks too distant and prospective purchasers would be held in check by the possibility of having a noisy car line run in front of their doors. Won't the public officials dispense with red-tape and settle down to work.

To a person not disposed to be over-critical, who would like nothing better, if possible, to find something worthy of appreciation in a dramatic performance, the present order of plays is a sad disappointment. He can go to theatre after theatre only to leave (generally after the first and second act), marvelling at what induces the public to see them, the playwright to write them, and the managers to produce them. Miss Helen Barry's "Love and Liberty" is one of these disappointments. There is positively nothing either in the acting, writing or setting that makes it worth seeing, except a dramatic situation or so. Like Sam Johnson's dinner, it is "ill-cooked, ill-dressed and ill-served." All hope leaves the breast of the listener when he sees Miss Barry charge upon the stage in the beginning of the first act. The construction is cumbersome and crude, and the dialogue is platitudinous. As to the acting, Miss Barry is bad technically and emotionally, her leading man somewhat better, and her female juvenile a good deal worse.

Obituary.

Isaac Tanenbaum, father of the well-known broker Leon Tanenbaum, was buried last Sunday. Mr. Tanenbaum was well known and highly respected down town, where he carried on business as an insurance agent. He died, after a short illness, at the age of sixty-one years.

Real Estate Department.

Business has been more active this week than any time since the season opened, and our "Gossip" column, wherein is reported sales negotiated by the brokers, bears evidence of the increased activity. There is a good inquiry for property in the business districts and for parcels desirable as investments. As we have said before, the buyers are numerous, but the owners are very firm and decline to sell except at full figures. There are a number of dwellings included in the sales, and it is to be hoped that the movement will continue and grow, for it has long been deferred. In fact there has not been an active market for dwellings for some time. There are many on the market of all kinds and sizes, and buyers are thus assured of being able to get what will suit. In the way of lots there is also some activity which is not confined to one locality, as the reports show. At the present moment it looks as if the auction market would be light for the next few weeks, and from present reports there are no large sales announced.

A perusal of the list of foreclosure sales which appears on another page will interest those who are looking to buy a house. The offerings next week include a number of houses on both the east and west sides of the city.

There were no sales held at the Exchange on Monday.

On Tuesday the sales were fairly numerous, as in addition to the judicial sales several houses were offered for the account of owners. The bidding was not satisfactory, and consequently the parcels offered are not likely to change hands. The dwelling No. 150 East 60th street was withdrawn on a bid of $19,000.

Wednesday's sales were few and quite unimportant. A dwelling on Lexington avenue, near 57th street, No. 708, brought $27,800 under foreclosure, and the dwelling No. 144 East 60th street was withdrawn on a bid of $17,100.

Only three sales were announced for Thursday at the Exchange. The attendance was fair and the bidding quite active. A parcel on Baxter, running through to Worth street, was sold for $35,600, and two houses on Washington street, Nos. 712 and 714, brought $8,225 each.

Three sales were held yesterday, all pursuant to court orders in foreclosure proceedings. The attendance was good, and there was a great deal of talk looking to the closing of sales at private contract.

TENNY, N. J.—The residence recently commenced here for F. A. Hine is up to the first tier of beams. It is to be two stories and attic high, 70x40 in size, and will cost $12,000. The material will be of stone and frame. A stable will be attached.

YONKERS, N. Y.—The four houses being built by Archibald Scott on Morris street, near Riverdale avenue, will be ornate in appearance. They are to have shingle roofs, and will cost $18,000 altogether.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—The market for Common Bricks has undergone very little change of a positive character, but such as it is rather favors the seller, and at the moment the position is steadier than a week ago. The demand has been somewhat irregular but so have the arrivals, making between the two influences a fair balance, though within a day or two, finding the afloat accumulation keeping within manageable proportions, receivers have refused to make any special effort to realize, and upon strictly attractive parcels compelled the payment of outside figures. The present consumption is being pushed along as rapidly as circumstances will admit under the constant changes of weather, but receivers report that they hear considerable complaint from dealers about the poor prospect for work. Whether that is founded upon actual knowledge of what may be expected or is merely a business story to influence the cost of brick cannot be determined positively but does not seem to cause any serious apprehension. Pales have secured a renewal of attention and are again comparatively firm in tone but without alteration in the general line of values. From primary points there is not much news. Production has of course been interfered with somewhat by the unpropitious weather and the shipments more or less irregular, some manufacturers holding back because they did not like the price and others because their barges were delayed at this end by the difficulties in the way of unloading, and under conditions of trade it is probably just as well that no more stock came forward. It is thought that work will cease at some of the yards during the coming week. The movement toward the formation of a Brick Trust is not very active apparently and such particulars as can be gleaned upon the subject will be found in our news columns.

LATH.—The market has remained steady with demand enough to take the only fair arrivals coming to hand, and that is about all that can be said of the situation, except that the tendencies seem to be in the sellers' favor. Receivers have been making a fair distribution for some little time past and many of them without special effort to recoup stock, which, with winter in sight, suggests the probability of a continuous demand for cargoes, while of the latter, if reports be true, there is but a small number now afloat. We quote at $2.12½@2.15 per M again, the inside on Maine stock.

LIME.—Some arrivals from the Eastward have taken place during the week, but were wanted, and more could have been placed as dealers are far from well stocked. State brands, too, sold well and to a certain extent beyond the ability of agents to make prompt delivery. In all cases values were sustained, and the market may be considered firm.

LUMBER.—The market affords only very dry picking in the search for information, the volume of trade varying to no great extent with the values much the same as for a week or two past, though the general inclination is to harden, if anything. The natural swing of the season in fact now brings the initiative of negotiations from the buying rather than the selling side and that of itself is a slightly stiffening feature, while the moderate offering of some grades is another factor tending to help matters in a measure. Demand, too, extends to a considerable extent beyond immediate or even early future consumption, as dealers are commencing to shape up accumulations against the requirement of the winter. A conservative spirit prevails, however, throughout, and it is only in the very few cases where special assortments are wanted that sellers feel warranted in assuming an arbitrary tone.

Eastern Spruce undergoes moderate fluctuations in value, or rather reports differ occasionally as to what the various runs of ordinary and medium schedules may be worth, but there is rarely any claim for weakness on wide and long stuff, and for the most desirable cut particularly adapted to our immediate trade very extreme rates are predicted, right up into yellow pine figures in fact, on the claim that for certain work spruce would get the preference at the same cost. It is said that many dealers have been unable to make anything like the collection of stock they had hoped to and commence to feel as though they may have to go into the winter on a shortage, as the advices from the primary sources give little encouragement regarding deliveries.

Piling shows no more irregularity than usual, and in most cases when anything that looks like weakness develops it can be traced to a sort of outside offering, or stock coming to receivers who have not solicited it do not care to handle it, and as a natural sequence are not over-exacting when a shrewd buyer negotiates. Still on the general range values differ but little, and on the most desirable stocks are pretty firm. Some very large contracts have of late been made, including a railroad job in Communipaw Bay and for work on the Harlem River. Against the latter the contractor is understood to have gone down East and made contracts direct, but the influence upon this market will be much the same by curtailing a considerable portion of the supply that might have become available for general offering.

Hemlock has a great many friends in one way or another, and retains a generally steady market for both State and Pennsylvania stock. That view of the situation will meet with contradiction both ways, as some of the trade claim that business is disappointing without chance of revival except at a modified line of cost, while others claim a full run of orders and no objection among buyers to govern prices, and even a little higher is talked of where anxiety for early delivery is expressed.

White Pine retains quite a measure of irregularity, and it seems difficult to bring the market into really uniform condition. There is considerable sale for pretty much all kinds of stock except uppers, and even of these, odd lots can now and then be placed, but offerings equal the demand, and indeed exceed it if anything, frequently turning up from quite unexpected quarters, whence salesmen had previously suggested the supply as about exhausted. That does not, of course, help prices at all, and the tone is somewhat slack, though without really affecting the general range. There is no doubt a falling off in the consumption of white pine as compared with former years, but sometimes it looks as though the shrinkage was exaggerated by parties who thus endeavor to conceal their own fault in over-estimating the requirements of the market.

Yellow Pine does not appear to be very difficult stock to manage, and the majority of reports are cheerful. Indeed, suggestions of an opposite tenor can generally be traced to some disgruntled operators, who have been disappointed in finding buyers giving preference to the members of the combination, who have won confidence by careful execution of orders and a strict adherence to values, through which the market has been kept in uniform condition. Most leading mills are said to be well under engagement.

Carolina Pine preserves the regular run of local trade fairly, and while there is said to be more attention from out of town sources it is rather an increase of orders than an increase of customers. Still, as manufacturers claim to have about all the work they can attend to and prices are maintained without apparent difficulty the market may be considered as in good healthy condition and holding its natural relative position.

Hardwoods are irregular, but on the whole doing a trifle better in the matter of movement into consumption through all natural outlets. This, however, is seasonal and only what it should be if indeed it is really up to calculations, and simply serves to stiffen up the tone on some grades that were inclined to soften. Efforts to place bulk lots, however, do not appear to be brilliantly successful and about the usual reasons are assigned, dealers either having a fair accumulation on hand or expecting it from purchases made direct, and a very similar story coming from manufacturers. The export business does not prove full, but is still appreciative of fine selected stock, even in the way of black walnut.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

The action of the Yard Dealers' Association at its recent meeting in this city, in placing first and second and third clear pine in one grade of "uppers" and pricing it at $43 a thousand, is significant of the fact that clear lumber has lost the position in the Western markets that it once held. As the price list stood before the change indicated, firsts and seconds were priced at $47 for 2-inch, and $46 for 1, 1¼ and 1½-inch, and at $41 for third clear. This had been about the range that had prevailed for the past year and a half or two years, so far as the list was concerned, though selling prices had cut under the list to the extent of $2 to $4 a thousand.

This a plain case of surrendered position, the dealers acknowledging that the value of uppers had dropped from $3 to $4 a thousand, on paper, which really meant that it had fallen below that in selling value, for prices, in the majority of instances, are cut lower than those indicated in the trade list.

The highest value reached by uppers in the present decade was in 1882, when 2-inch was priced in the trade list at $51 a thousand, and the thinner at $47, and 3-inch at $55, while the third clear was deemed worth $42.

The question now arises, will high grade pine remain at its present value, or is it liable to go higher or lower? It can be argued that it is liable to go lower, owing to the increasing competition of yellow pine, cypress, poplar and the hardwoods in house finish. On the other hand, the advocates of white pine can insist, and with much force of argument, that nothing can be better than this wood for several kinds of manufacture, and that though other woods may come in competition, it will be found that all the white pine of the highest grade that can be produced will be wanted. As it gradually diminishes its value for special purposes will be increasingly appreciated, and therefore it is probable that within two or three years we may expect to see it again rise in value.

The Chicago market has been well supplied during the week with loads of stuff, such as has been coming all the season; that is, mostly dimensions, common inch, shingles and lath. Trade has evinced no improvement over recent weeks, except perhaps that there is a little better demand for long joists. A degree of reaction has taken place in this class of lumber. In the early part of the season it was a drug, and manufacturers urged it off their hands at a serious concession in price as compared to that of last year. Dealers avoided it because they had so much in their yards. Now it is probable that both manufacturers and yard dealers will want it in excess of quantity obtainable before many weeks shall have passed. All dimensions over 20 feet in length, when sold in separate lots from short stuff, is now worth $10.35 to $10.50, and 2x12, 3x12, 2x14 and 3x14 ranges in price from $11 to $12, according to size and length.

The better demand for slim jims is stiffening prices for cargoes that contain a small percentage of long lengths. A guarantee of 10 to 15 per cent. of slim jims is sufficient to enable the seller to get $9.25 for the cargo. For this reason loads sell for that price oftener than they did a short time ago.

The demand for coarse inch stock does not improve. No. 2 is nominally priced at $11.50 to $12, and medium at $13 to $14, but in actual sales prices are made to fit the quality of the lumber and the other exigencies of the case. More No. 1 could be sold if it should be put on the market, but that quality figures in special transaction that do not affect the open market.

The Mississippi Valley Lumberman as follows:

The season for the production of white pine lumber is within two months of its close. This period will measure also the full time during which the dealers can reasonably expect the continuance of the fall demand. It is possible, therefore, to pretty accurately gauge the conditions present and prospective. It is evident the winter is coming on with stocks everywhere large, and that despite the allegation of a short log crop, and complaint of slow production, that the probabilities are all in favor of the figures showing that, taking the country over, quite as much lumber has been made this season as was made last. Nor is it at all likely that it will appear that as much lumber has gone into consumption. With the end of the selling season so near at hand it is not surprising that dealers are restive under the conditions which prevail. The fall trade does not develop as it was hoped that it would. The reports show a steady increase of the output of lumber at all the principal markets, and in the cities there is a large consumptive demand for building purposes. But the hope was entertained that the favorable crop conditions would result in a large rural demand. This has not come as yet. It is beginning to be a good deal of a question whether it will come at all. The season is now so far advanced that whatever future betterment of conditions may prevail are likely to continue for only a limited period. Stocks in pile will not therefore be very materially reduced.

The Timberman as follows:

From the lumber producing points upon the Mississippi, in Wisconsin and Michigan, come varying reports; from one a steady and satisfactory trade is reported; from another tidings of a temporary dullness. In many of them preparations for the winter's logging operations are progressing actively, and although the old note of a curtailed cut is being frequently sounded it is safe to predict that the winter's harvest of logs will not fall very much below the average.

The great lumber marts of the Saginaw Valley shows a very gratifying activity, although perhaps it may not be equal to the anticipations indulged in by the more sanguine of the operators. The magnitude of these markets is such that even when dullness prevails the aggregate of transactions is by no means inconsiderable, and when business is brisk the footing of sales is something enormous. There is a firmer feeling prevailing and a hardening of values is predicted.

And referring to the Chicago yard trade as follows:

This falling off in the amount of trade is more noticeable with Pennsylvania and other Eastern points than elsewhere. A representative of the Baltimore & Ohio road was looking up business through the district the middle of the week, and met with poor success. As he puts it, things were not going his way, the main movement of the trade being toward the West and South. A study of the cars standing on the switches shows a majority are loading for southern Illinois, with a scattering few for Indiana, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska.

When asked regarding the effect of the new price list, one dealer said it was not very often heard of, but that there seemed to be less business since its adoption than before. Dealers have not yet adjusted themselves to the new order of things, and although they may claim to be holding everything up to list, concessions are made when necessary. A man who goes into a yard to buy lumber usually gets it if he is not too unreasonable. The new list is intended to represent, as near as possible, current values, but after the demoralization in prices of the past few months it is a difficult thing to accomplish. While the compilers of the present list can congratulate themselves on having been moderately successful, there are some grades rated lower than they are selling right along, while others are priced too high. Taken altogether though, the new list may be said to have had the effect of firming up prices a little, for estimates that would not have been successful three weeks ago are now securing contracts. This improvement is not very pronounced as yet, but any step in that direction is a good one.

Receipts are heavy and likely to continue so until the close of navigation. While a large amount of lumber on the other side of the lake is going to Eastern points, there is still plenty left for Chicago. Some yards have just commenced filling up for the winter's trade, while others have even their dock room piled full, and are obliged to accept very low prices in order to get rid of their surplus. And it is this same surplus that is causing all the trouble with the Chicago lumber men. There is plenty of trade but too big stocks and too many to do it.

ENGLAND.

The Timber Trades Journal as follows:

LONDON.

American Woods.—Black Walnut, Whitewood, Oak, &c.—In none of these is there much movement at present; supplies continue to come forward, but we fail to see that much has found its way into the West India Docks at present, which is, of course, the recognized market for all such goods. There is a large consumption still going on, so that it is fortunate that most yardkeepers were fully stocked, and consequently have not felt such inconvenience as they otherwise must assuredly have done.

In the other descriptions of cabinet-making woods we do not hear of anything having transpired to call special notice.

LIVERPOOL.

The impression that we shall see a considerable reduction in the import of spruce deals for the remainder of the season appears to be gaining strength in the trade. But until the quays are cleared from the accumulations of these, good buyers naturally are disinclined to go on increasing their responsibilities

METALS.—COPPER—Ingot, up to the present writing, has undergone no positive change. The market is filled with rumors of new combinations being formed in order to control product and prices, but they are apparently rumors only, and the various companies are still attending to business from an independent standpoint. In the meanwhile general trading seems to be moving fairly against consumers' natural wants, with a little doing for export and prices undergoing no great change though a little more in buyers' favor than at the date of our last report. Quotations are somewhat nominal at about 11 1/4¢ for Lake, and 10 1/2¢ for casting brands. Manufactured Copper has fair trade, a little fuller if anything, and manufacturers are reasonably well satisfied. There is no change advised in values, but the undertone rather weak. We quote as follows: Sheets, not above 30x72 in. 16 oz. and over, 20c.; do, 14 to 16 oz, 21c.; do, 12 to 14 oz, 22c.; do, 10 to 12 oz, 23c.; do, 8 to 10 oz, 24c.; do, under 8 oz, 25c. Sheets longer than 72 inches add 1c. for 12 to 14 oz, 2c. for 10 to 12 oz, and 3c. for 8 to 10 oz. Sheets, not above 36x96 in. 16 oz and over, 20c.; do, 16 to 32 oz, 20c.; do, 14 to 16 oz, 22c.; do, 12 to 14 oz, 24c.; do, 10 to 12 oz, 25c.; do, 8 to 10 oz, 26c. Sheets longer than 96 inches add 1c. for under 16 oz; 1c. for 8 to 10 oz. Sheets, not above 48x96, 32 to 64 oz, 20c.; do, 16 to 32 oz, 22c.; do, 14 to 16 oz, 23c.; do, 12 to 14 oz, 24c. Sheets 60x96 and over, 20c.; for 32 to 64 oz, and over, and 25c. for 16 to 32 oz. All bath tub sheets, per lb. 16 oz, 23c.; 14 oz, 25c.; 12 oz, 27c.; and 10 oz, 30c. Bolt copper, 3/4 inch diameter and over, 20c. Circles, 60 diameter and less, 3c. above price of sheets of same thickness; circles, 60 to 96 do, 5c. do; circles, 96 do and over, 6c. do. Segment and pattern sheets, 3c. above price of sheets required to cut them from. Cold or hard rolled copper, 1¢ per lb. above the foregoing prices. Copper bottom, 23¢ per lb. Iron—Scotch Pig has not sold with much freedom and was handled only on a special run of orders owing to the constant enhancement of value. Advances from abroad proved very stimulating, and with small stocks here holders naturally gained confidence. We quote at $30.00 per ton, according to brand, delivery, etc. American Pig is without any special buoyancy, but retains a firm position, and the tendency of the market is towards improvement, if anything. Agents are making heavy deliveries constantly. The new demand comes in fairly, without objection to cost from buyers, and there is no accumulation of stock at any point, especially of the desirable brands. We quote at $17.00 to $17.50 per ton for No. 1 X foundry; $16.00 to $16.50 for No. 2 X do.; and $15.00 to $15.50 for Gray Forge. Old metal has not moved with much freedom, but the general tone and character of the market is firmer. Advances from abroad show much strength, while holders here have become quite buoyant in their ideas and there is a general indisposition to offer anything except at a full limit of valuation. We quote at about $24.00 to $25.00 for old rails; $30.50 to $31.50 for No. 1 wrought scrap; $14.00 to $15.00 for cast scrap, and $17.50 to $18.00 for car wheels. Steel rails have been more active, commencing with an order from the Union Pacific road for 40,000 tons and followed by smaller amounts taken by other roads. This gives full work to pretty much all the mills and has infused a strong tone into the market, with higher prices asked in all positions. We quote at $29.00 to $29.50 per ton at the mills, and $30.00 to $31.00 at tide water. Manufactured Iron has secured fair average attention with the general volume of business somewhat larger, if anything, and reports in more cheerful form, though no change has taken place in values, and supplies are fair. We quote Common Merchant Bar, ordinary sizes, at 1.90 to 2.10c. from store, and refined at 2.00 to 2.30c. Rods, round and square, 2.10 to 2.20c.; Bands, 2.20 to 2.30c.; Norway Nail Rods, 4¢ to 5¢, and domestic sheet on the basis of 2.75 to 2.80c. for common Nos. 10 to 16. Other descriptions at corresponding prices, with 1-10c. less on large lots from cars. LEAD—Domestic Pig has a rather unsettled tone and advances and declines follow each other in more or less rapid succession. The range of fluctuation, however, is comparatively small and buyers of small lots for actual consumption are not to any extent influenced. We quote at 3.50 to 4.05c., as to quality. The manufactures of lead are quoted: Bar, 4 1/2¢; pipe, 6c.; sheet, 6 1/2¢, less the usual discount to the trade; and tin lined, pipe, 15c.; block tin pipe 45c., on same terms. Tin—Pig has undergone considerable fluctuation since our last in settling up and seems to be falling back into a regular line of trading. We quote at about 21 1/4 to 21 3/4¢. Tin plates generally are in demand for jobbing parcels. Tin plates generally are in demand with firmness and sparingly offered, but the business light and confined in the main to ordinary store lots. We quote prices as follows: I. C. Charcoal, 1/2 cross assortment, Melvyn grades, $5.50 to $5.75; each additional X add $1.50; I. C. Charcoal, 1/4 cross assortment, Allaway grade, $4.70 to $4.72 1/2; each additional X add $1; Charcoal terms, M. F. grade, 14x20, $6.60 to $6.65; M. F. grade, 20x28, $13.20 to $13.25; Worcester, 14x20, $4.75 to $4.80; Worcester, 20x28, $9.50 to $9.55; Deane grade, 14x20, $4.25 to $4.30; Deane grade, 20x28, $8.50 to $8.70; Allaway grade, 14x20, $4.10 to $4.15; Allaway grade, 20x28, $8.25 to $8.30; I. C. Coke, Penian grade, $4.32 1/2 to $4.35; J. B. grade, 14x20, $4.40 to $4.42 1/2; I. C. Bessmer steel, squares, $4.65 to $4.70 basis; I. C. Siemens steel, squares, $4.75 to $4.80. Speiter has gained somewhat in value of late, and while showing no animation beyond ordinary bounds, is firmly supported. We quote at $5.15 to $5.30 for ordinary brands of Western.

NAILS—Buyers generally seem somewhat indifferent in their movements. They call for all the stock wanted on natural orders and early consumption, but will not indulge in speculation to the extent of anticipating any very distant future and contest all efforts intended to make them pay an advance in cost. We quote at $1.85 to $1.90 per keg for car lots, and $1.95 to $2.00 per keg for parcels from store.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—There does not appear to be much if anything really new regarding the general conditions of the market. Leads, of course, remain under control of the combine and firm, but for most other goods there is a well sustained range of values, through the support of an increasing business, both local and out of town. Advances from the interior lead to the impression that orders will run large this fall. Linseed Oil somewhat irregular and sells fairly at 57¢ to 58¢ for Western and 60¢ to 61¢ for City. Spirits Turpentine sold higher following our last report, but the advance attracted increased offerings and at the close the tone is weakening, with buyers, quite indifferent operators. We quote at 47¢ to 48 1/2¢ per gallon, according to quantity, delivery, etc.

TAR AND PITCH. The run of trade varies somewhat as most orders are based mainly on actual consumptive wants, and buyers rarely anticipate the future. Supplies remain under control and are steadily held. We quote Pitch at $1.40 to $1.50 per bbl.; Tar at $2.62 1/2 to $2.87 1/2, according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date. Whenever the rate is not given, read as 6 per cent.

The Harlem River Improvement.

Every subscriber of THE RECORD AND GUIDE will receive, with to-day's issue, a supplement showing the lines of this important improvement; also all that part of Manhattan Island as far south as 173d street. The map also shows the boundaries at Inwood of the site which was proposed for the World's Fair. On another page will be found an interesting story of the section illustrated.

We desire once more to call attention to the remarkable fulfillment of Samuel Benner's predictions made in the beginning of this year in THE RECORD AND GUIDE. "I predict," he said, "that the price of iron will advance, and that the average price for the year 1889 will be higher than the average for the year 1888; and I also predict that there will be a wonderful advance in the prices of iron, stocks and all products and commodities in the year 1890; all business will be prosperous, it will be a year of good crops, and the boom year in this period of activity." We have already noticed the success of Mr. Benner's predictions in reference to the crops; they have been equally true in reference to iron. The boom both in pig iron and in steel rivals that of 1884. According to a dispatch to the Tribune from Pittsburg:

The boom in steel and iron rivals the memorable advance of 1884. Even when compared with that time, other things considered, the advance in products of steel and iron is more remarkable. Steel rails cannot to-day be bought for less than $33 a ton, and manufacturers are quite independent on those figures, for it is confidently believed that the price will yet reach $35. In the last few days Bessemer pig has stiffened from $18.75 to $19.50, and a heavy consumer said to-day that he doubted if he could buy 100 or 1,000 tons for less than $20. This is an advance in five weeks of between $5 and $6. At the office of Carnegie Brothers & Co. it was learned that the advance is caused by the increased cost in raw materials. "If," said the authority, "Bessemer pig advances to $20, rails and other products must cost just so much more. A $5 advance on pig means a $5 advance on the finished product, for the shrinkage is estimated at 25 per cent. and in addition to that is the sliding scale under which our men work. In England Bessemer pig has risen from 40 to 50 shillings, which cost, with the duty added, makes the price of this foreign product free in this country above our price of $20. Moreover, our advices tell us that prices will go still higher in England, and, of course, that has an important bearing upon prices in this country.

In view of the success of these forecasts it is worth repeating what he further says: "In the beginning of 1891," he proceeds, "speculation will be at its height—a great business inflation—pig-iron $50 a ton in the markets of our country." A panic, he thinks, will follow in 1891, and it will be the beginning of a long period of depression. The further fulfillment of Mr. Benner's forecasts is something worth keeping a keen lookout for. We can but argue from experience. He has been right hitherto, presumably he will continue to be right.

If there was anything that would help to sustain our opinion, that at bottom the market is a bull one, it is the activity and the advance in iron—the thermometer of the business of the country. It would be useless to disregard the conditions that for the time being are depressing the market; but it is safe to say that they are only temporary, and that they have their hopeful aspect. The crops are not moving as fast as they might, but this is because the farmers are holding back, being unwilling to sell at a sacrifice. A letter to one of our prominent wholesale houses says that "in Iowa the crop is selling so low that the farmer is kicking, as usual, and holding his produce. Oats are selling at 12 cents a bushel and corn at 10 cents on the field; consequently the small towns are doing a very light business." As the writer says, corn and oats are very low—lower, indeed, than they have been at the same time for the past three years. In Chicago the former is bringing 31 $\frac{3}{4}$ ¢, against 42 $\frac{5}{8}$ ¢. for 1888, 41 $\frac{5}{8}$ ¢. for 1887, and 38¢. for 1886, while the price of the latter is 19 $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢., against 23 $\frac{3}{4}$ ¢. for 1888, and 25¢. for 1887 and 1886. Wheat, however, is selling at 80 $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢., a low price compared with last year, but high compared to the 71¢. of 1886, or the 72¢. of 1887.

That the farmers can thus keep their grain for better prices is a sign of strength rather than weakness, and at all events is a depressing factor that is likely to soon be removed. So it is with tight money. It makes speculation in Wall street uncertain, but it is a sign that money is actively employed. It would not be right to expect an immediately bullish market; indeed prices may range weak for some time, but in view of the larger conditions at work, it is inevitable that prices should ultimately advance. REMEMBER BENNER.

The Committee on Site did wisely in practically excluding Central Park from their plans for the Exhibition. Its retention would undoubtedly have continued an acrimonious controversy and the opposition, carried perhaps to the Legislature and the courts, might have resulted in defeating, so far as New York is concerned, the plan for the Exposition itself. All cause for contention being removed, the financial and building arrangements should now be hurried along, and the necessary State legislation should be effected in a special session, which should be called this month, so that all details may be completed by the time Congress meets in December. The Finance Committee should make their plans public without delay, and a definite decision should be reached as to the size of the Exhibition buildings, their exact location, cost and other matters. Some step ought to be taken at once to secure some of the exhibits in the Paris Exhibition before they are scattered.

So far as the site is concerned, there are still difficulties to be overcome. The owners of real estate in the two plots chosen—that is, between 110th and 113th streets, 5th and Manhattan avenues, and 108th and 116th streets, Manhattan avenue and the Hudson River—have yet to be dealt with. No doubt many of them will follow the example already set by a few property-holders, and give the use of their unimproved land free of cost. The plot between 110th and 113th streets, 5th and Manhattan avenue, is in the hands of more than one hundred owners. On it there are forty-three buildings, and twenty-nine of them are on the block between 112th and 113th streets, 8th and Manhattan avenues. Two blocks in the plot, between 110th and 112th streets, 5th and 6th avenues, belong to the Pinkney estate. As to the blocks bounded by 108th and 116th streets, Manhattan avenue and the river, the owners are quite numerous. In the blocks between 114th and 116th streets there are now thirty-one houses, but the blocks south of this are mainly unimproved, there being only about fourteen houses there.

The committee says:

If the land cannot be leased, the site question will still be open. The value of the land on the proposed site is so high that neither the Exposition Committee nor the city could buy it all without an enormous increase in the expenses of the Exposition. The city could not go into any real estate plan for buying the land and reselling it, and it is doubtful whether the committee would care to go into any such plan, which would involve a great deal of speculation on a large investment. The easiest solution is for the owners of the land to promptly communicate to the Sub-Committee on Site and Buildings the terms on which they will grant the use of their land. With this, and a good financial plan such as the Committee on Finance will report, there should be no trouble.

It does not seem probable that the committee will be able to get all the land they say they need on the site named without adopting some "real estate plan." No small portion of the land is held under such conditions that the holders could not allow it to be used unless it were purchased from them. Col. S. V. R. Cruger says he is trustee of an estate owning property on the proposed site, and it could only be disposed of for a cash value. The difficulties, however, may vanish as soon as they are faced, but the matter should not be left in abeyance. Such a course will not only injure the Exposition, but the uncertainty as to the exact spots to be taken will do great harm to the real estate interest of the entire section.

The movement for the Exposition of 1892 has thus far gone on under the Mayor's organization of a Committee of One Hundred, sub-divided into four committees—on permanent organization, finance, site and buildings, and legislation. These committees have acted in harmony, and the points of difference that began to become controversies have subsided under the great pressure of popular favor for the object. Until a corporate organization can be made, which may take until midwinter, under the acts of Congress and of the State Legislature, these provisional committees must continue, for they have done and can still do great work and bring out a strong and united public opinion. The subjects allotted to the four committees are not divided by sharp lines; each depends on the other, and the need has been felt of a stronger administrative consolidation. The next probable movement will be the selection from each of the four committees of four or five to constitute an executive committee on the whole subject, under the presidency of the Mayor or some other citizen who will devote his energies to it, to continue until a legal and corporate organization is perfected.

This will give greater unity and efficiency to the work of the Exposition and strongly incite and concentrate public support.

The importance of the Pan-American Congress which convened in Washington this week is as much underestimated by the enemies as it is exaggerated by the friends of the administration. The daily papers have spoken of the convention and its possibilities in the vigorous manner that belongs to the "earnest and practical politics" which the Sun admires and advocates. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that two opinions on the subject exist among the public and that both are somewhat wide of the truth. From what is said by the friends of the administration it might almost be imagined that the South American delegates carry in their pockets warrants on the entire trade of the Southern Continent, and have been instructed by the governments they represent to deliver them, upon "satisfactory terms," to Secretary Blaine or any other authorized agent of this country. On the other hand, we are asked to believe that nothing that the Congress can do will materially benefit our commerce, and that the convention is in its chief features a sort of international junketing party intended to introduce to the country with a show of respectability some disreputable subsidy scheme.

The tone of Mr. Blaine's address of welcome on Wednesday was more in accord with the truth. It must be acknowledged that the Congress is one of the most important that has ever been convened on this Continent. It represents interests which, at this day, are of magnitude enough to be impressive, but which prospectively are beyond human calculation. It may be that the motives which created the Congress are not entirely of the highest character; but that may be said of nearly every deliberative body that has ever met, and to show that in this case the statesmanship that conceived the convention was not quite free from the taint of "politics," and perhaps the hopes of personal ambition, does not destroy the fact that immense good may result from it, more especially if it should become a precedent for other conventions of still deeper import to the people of Greater America.

It is beyond the power of any convention of delegates to make trade. At best it can but facilitate or direct it. Consequently, the benefit which this country can obtain from this Pan-American Congress is strictly limited by certain "conditions" which rule in our home market and in the South American markets. Trade is not a matter of sentiment. Unless we have goods to sell that our Southern neighbors need, and goods, too, that are cheaper, of better quality, or more suitable than those which the foreigner competing with us has to offer, neither reciprocity, political arrangements, subsidies, nor the resolutions of any Congress can for any length of time materially benefit us. An examination of where we stand in this respect will indicate the maximum benefit of a commercial character to be derived at present from the Congress.

Of the total imports of the Southern and Central American States about 89 per cent. come from Europe and the remainder, 11 per cent., from the United States. Mexico is our largest customer, Brazil stands next, and after in the order named come the Argentine Republic, United States of Colombia, Venezuela, Chili, Uruguay, Peru. The merchandise which these countries have to sell is principally agricultural, which fact in itself limits the amount of trade we can do with them, for the only goods which we are able to successfully export are mainly agricultural. We play a very insignificant part as a manufacturing nation in the markets of the world. We send abroad annually between seven and eight hundred million dollars worth of goods and of this only a trifle over one hundred millions represents manufactures. The argument, of course, is that if we had ships running regularly between our ports and the ports of South America we could supply our neighbors (distant rather) with a great part of the manufactured articles they need and which they now buy of the Englishman, German and Frenchman. Regular communication with South America might, and probably would, increase our trade a little, but as we do not, and the presumption is cannot, sell our manufactured goods in the face of foreign competition in any neutral market with which we now have regular communication it is difficult to see why we should fare better in South America. Germany, for instance, has a large trade with Brazil. We cannot compete with the German, say, in the French or English markets, where he manages to sell annually millions of dollars worth of manufactured articles. What reason is there that we should do better in competition with him in South America than in Europe, especially as he is in a position to buy largely of the agricultural produce of the South American States, which we are not?

It is a fact worth noting that at present our trade is not largest with the South American States with which we have the largest shipping. For instance, in 1887 the figures of our trade with Brazil stood: Imports from, $52,953,176; exports to $8,071,653; total $68,024,829. During the same year we sent to the United States of Colombia $5,973,965 worth of goods, and purchased $3,950,953 worth, or $9,924,918—only one-seventh of our trade with Brazil. Yet the tonnage of the shipping that entered and cleared in American ports from and for Brazil in 1887 was 571,984 tons, whereas for the United States of Colombia it was 576,312 tons. Here is a case where shipping and trade seem to have little relation to one another, for we do much the smaller trade with the country with which we have the most shipping.

It is not probable, therefore, that any great extension of our commerce with South America will immediately result from anything the Congress is likely to bring about. It is useless to expect that any of the South American States will agree to modify their fiscal policy in favor of the United States to the detriment of European traders. Where it is not to their interest to foster their home manufactures it is their interest to purchase in the cheapest market. As to the subsidy scheme, if it is carried out it will be principally at the cost of this country, for none of the South American States are troubled as we are with a surplus, and even if they were willing to spend money to establish steamship lines owned in this country and flying our flag, they are not in a condition to do so to an effective extent. It is only when the Congress is regarded as a beginning instead of an end that its importance can be fully recognized.

Nine Months of Real Estate.

A glance at the figures of conveyances, mortgages and projected buildings for the first nine months of 1889 shows that there has been a considerable increase of business over the corresponding period last year. From January 1 till September 30 inclusive, the number of properties transferred was 11,401 as compared with 9,210 during the first nine months of 1888, while their cost was $206,293,343 as compared with $160,746,909, an increase of $45,546,434. Of the total number of parcels conveyed 2,552 were transferred for considerations which were nominal and which, of course, did not represent their actual value; while last year the number of parcels conveyed for nominal considerations was 2,100, the proportion toward the whole number being about the same this year as last, that is, about 22 per cent. The 23d and 24th Wards show a considerable increase, being 2,103 in number as against 1,587 last year, and $9,090,138 in amount as against $5,795,190, an increase of $3,294,948. The number of parcels conveyed for nominal considerations in those wards was 516 against 357 in 1888.

The recorded mortgages show a considerable increase. During the nine months they numbered 10,626 as against 9,790 in the same period last year, while the amount involved reached $133,892,429 as against $105,137,557, an increase of $28,754,872. The number recorded at 5 per cent. interest was 4,986 as against 4,530, while their amount was $61,470,014 as compared with $48,498,915. The number recorded at less than 5 per cent. was 1,327 against 798 last year, while their total amount was $28,084,202 as compared with $16,081,066. This shows that $12,003,136 more has been loaned this year than last on real estate at low rates of interest. The major portion of this sum represents loans at 4½ per cent. per annum, and part of it at 4 per cent. The number of parcels on which loans were made by banks, trust and insurance companies during the nine months was 1,490 as against 1,742 during the corresponding period last year, a decrease of 252, while their total amount was $35,686,518 as against $33,566,835, an increase of $2,119,683. That the fiduciary institutions have loaned very little more money on real estate this year is probably due to conservatism rather than to a lack of funds. Last year they loaned about 32 per cent. of the total amount of the mortgages, and this year only about 27 per cent. It is to be observed that the tendency is for these companies to make larger loans. The average of each loan made by them last year was a little over $19,230, while this year it is about $24,000.

The buildings projected show a very appreciable increase over last year. They number 2,988 as compared with 2,445, and their total cost was estimated by their projectors at $56,644,212 as compared with a total of $37,022,443 in 1888. This shows an increase of 543 in number and $19,621,769 in amount. Every section of the city shows an increase in the estimated cost of the new buildings projected within its boundaries. The largest increase is between 59th and 125th streets, 8th avenue and the North River, where the number projected this year was 726 as against 400 last year, and their estimated cost $17,553,550 as against $7,699,800. The section showing the next largest increase is that part of the city south of 14th street, where the number was 389 against 283, and their estimated cost $12,812,895 as compared with $7,716,507. Next comes the section north of 125th street, with 360 new buildings as against 258 last year, and $5,525,895 in cost as against $3,505,180. The other sections, including the 23d and 24th Wards, show but slight variations from last year's figures.

The tables of conveyances, mortgages and projected buildings for Kings County during the first nine months of the current year show a considerable increase over the same period in 1888. The number of parcels of property transferred was 13,444 as compared with 10,481, and their total amount $64,226,546 as against $42,471,826, an increase of $21,754,720. The mortgages recorded numbered 10,648 as against 8,401, while they aggregated 44,278,137 in amount against $30,533,966 last year. The number at 5 per cent. and less this year was 6,357 as compared with 4,654, and their aggregate amount $28,275,678 as against $18,756,619, showing that considerably more money has been loaned at lower rates of interest this year than last. The projected buildings numbered 3,977 as against 3,241, and their estimated cost $21,429,351 as against $17,873,517. The number of brick buildings projected was 1,968 against 1,568, and the number of frame buildings 2,009 against 1,678, showing about a similar increase for both classes of structures. The figures of conveyances and mortgages for September show a general increase, while the projected buildings, on the other hand, show a decrease. The following are the tables:

Of the seventy flats and tenements projected, one will cost $200,000; three $50,000 each, and one $40,000, making a total of $390,000 for five of the total of seventy buildings. Nothing very costly in the way of private houses were planned, but it may interest our readers to know that $360,000, or more than one-third of the total cost of new houses planned, will be expended on the erection of eighteen houses on West 96th street. The ten buildings under the heading "Hotels, Stores, Churches, Office Buildings, etc.," are to cost nearly two million dollars. They are nearly all mentioned in the list of the most costly buildings planned which follows :

From the foregoing it will be seen that of the 214 buildings planned during September, to cost $4,905,540, the seven embraced in the list of the most costly buildings will cost $2,020,000, or nearly one-half of the total figures.

The Board of Examiners and the Superintendent of the Building Bureau in the Fire Department are soon to commence holding a series of public meetings in the rooms of the Fire Underwriters, in the Boreel building, for the purpose of giving any and all persons interested in matters relating to the laws governing the erection of buildings an opportunity to present their views as to what amendments, if any, are desirable to be made to the said laws. The experience of the members of the Board of Examiners has taught them that certain alterations in the laws can and ought to be made in the interests of builders and property-owners, and which will not in any way hazard the public welfare in the safe construction of buildings; such, for instance, as giving an owner the right to use a party wall built in accordance with a prior law but found to be less than the required thickness demanded under the existing law, provided always that such wall is in good condition. Also to incorporate in the law the right to re-enforce brick walls with iron columns, thus reducing the thickness of brick walls for high buildings, this method of construction being now quite common, but the privilege to do which at present must first be obtained from the board. These and a number of other amendments will enlarge the public rights without having to ask for favors at the hands of officials. When the amendments are prepared they are to be presented to the Legislature at its coming session in January next. If any of our readers desire to submit in writing proposed changes to the law, they are invited to send them to this office and we will see that they reach the right hands.

The tendency to municipalize those industries which a certain sect of political economists term "natural monopolies" has been more marked in the West than in the East, and in Chicago, perhaps, more than in any of the larger Western cities. There is, therefore, something of a cold shock in the news that the Common Council of that city propose to give to a private corporation the right to establish a high-water pressure system in the business district between Chicago avenue, 16th street, Halstead street and Lake Michigan. For a long time the city has managed its own water supply, and of late years the electric light also, and recently it was proposed that the manufacture of gas should be added to the list of industries in which the municipality is engaged. It has been found, at least it has always been stated, that the city has done far cheaper and better in these matters than private corporations. It does not seem that there is any reason for thinking that the proposed step backward is due to any hankering for the fleshpots of the old bondage to private corporations—rather it is due to the susceptibility of the Aldermanic mind to influences that come more within the scope of ethics than political economy. However, it is a fact that in most large cities a high pressure water supply is badly needed, and the municipal authorities have been so slow in recognizing this need that more alert and enterprising private corporations are trying to obtain a foothold on the unoccupied ground. The water supply of New York is very inefficient. The lower part of the city is very inadequately supplied, and it is only late at night that water can be obtained in even the third or fourth story of buildings. House-owners have to pump the water needed into tanks on the roofs of their buildings at an expense which, for the entire city, must amount to a very large sum annually. What should we say if any gas company were to supply its customers in this inadequate way?

In a short time Mayor Grant will have to appoint seven new School Commissioners to take the place of the seven whose term of office expires on the first day of January. We have repeatedly suggested that at least one of these officials should be a practical builder. One of the most important of the matters which the commissioners have to look after is the erection of new school buildings, and the immense benefit which the city could derive from the knowledge and experience of an expert builder is too obvious to need discussion. There is no reason why one of the commissioners should not be a builder, and there are many reasons why he should. It is to be hoped that Mayor Grant will establish a precedent in this matter, and not follow his predecessors merely because they led.

The fall political campaign promises to be devoid of interest. There are no important elections to be contested, and whatever languid interest it excites will be derived from the fact that, being the first election after the inauguration of President Harrison, it may in some small measure be regarded as a test of the popularity of his administration. In this State it will be even without that significance, unless indeed the Republicans win. Mysteriously enough it is only in the Presidential years that the Republicans seem to have any show in carrying this State, so that if they can succeed in doing so this fall it will be regarded as a triumph for Harrison. There is not, however, much prospect of such a consummation. The Democrats will probably elect their ticket, and the result will be without any particular significance. Voters who wish for good government will have little chance of casting a ballot in its favor except through the election of good Assemblymen and Senators, which are as much needed in Albany as women in a Western town.

The Harlem River Improvement.

ITS VALUE TO SHIPPING, COMMERCE AND REAL ESTATE—A GLANCE AT THE RECENTLY PROPOSED EXPOSITION SITE AT INWOOD.

The map which accompanies this issue is the first ever published showing the exact lines of the more northerly portion of the Harlem River Improvement, and it is in part a fac-simile of the government's map now in the Chief Engineer's department at Washington. It is therefore accurate and can be relied upon. The map denotes, also, the boundaries of the recently proposed site at Inwood for the great Exposition of 1892. It possesses, therefore, a two-fold interest.

The Harlem River improvement contemplates the widening and deepening of the Harlem at various points and its connection with the North River by means of a canal through what is known as "Dyckman's Cut." The improvement, as shown in THE RECORD AND GUIDE'S map, commences on the northerly side at the Hudson River, at a point where the Spuyten Duyvil Creek now joins that river. It then cuts through that creek and the bordering lands in the shape of a reverse curve, avoiding the rolling mills and iron works at that point. It has often been wondered at that the Harlem River Commission did not condemn these mills and factories, so as to be able to cut through in a straight line from river to river. The reason given is that the engineer officer in charge laid down the lines of the improvement to avoid excessive costs, which would have been quite severe if the lines had been laid through the rolling mills. This will save money, but it will cause considerable inconvenience to vessels passing through in future years. It is not yet, indeed, too late to make a change in the plans by condemning this property and running through in a straight line to the Hudson River.

But to continue. When the canal reaches a point a little to the east of River street it strikes a region of rocky ground. This has now been to a large extent excavated under the superintendence of the government engineers, the contract having been awarded to Thos. Satterlee, a local contractor. No less than 250,000 cubic yards of solid rock have had to be excavated, as well as 60,000 cubic feet of earth and loose rock. The cost of these excavations is $315,000, which is lower than the government anticipated from the estimates supplied by expert engineers. The cut runs through very nearly as far as Kingsbridge road, or Broadway as it is now called. There it strikes ground of a character similar to that to the west of the cut, on a line with 220th street. It cuts through that street and then curves downwards, in a southeasterly direction, along the present lines of the Harlem River, passing Sherman's Creek, Washington Bridge, High Bridge, Macomb's Dam Bridge, and the Third and Second Avenue Bridges at the Harlem River. It will no doubt be necessary, in order to complete the improvement, to continue it in a southeasterly direction as far down as Ward's Island.

The depth of water along the line of improvement just described is to be 15 feet, except at Dyckman's Cut, where the rock is being excavated. Here it will be 18 feet, so as to avoid danger to the vessels drawing over 15 feet. The width of the improvement is to be 400 feet, excepting at Dyckman's Cut, where it will be 350 feet. At present it is unsafe for vessels of deeper draught than from 12 to 15 feet to go much beyond Morris Dock. Boats of light draught can go as far north as Fordham Landing, which is about a mile beyond Morris Dock. Vessels drawing more than 8 feet of water cannot venture beyond Kingsbridge. It will thus be seen of what great advantage the contemplated improvement will be to shipping, and what an increased value it is bound to give to the water front beyond Morris Dock. It will practically create a safe waterway 350 and 400 feet wide for vessels drawing 15 feet, all the distance from the East River to the North River.

WHAT THE IMPROVEMENT MEANS.

The improvement, when completed, will add about ten miles of wharves to the water frontage of New York City. When it is considered how crowded and costly the water fronts on the North and East Rivers are at present, it will at once be understood with what relief manufacturers and others will turn to these newly-created advantages for shipping and landing purposes. It will also increase local traffic between points on the East, Harlem and North Rivers. There will be considerable time and cost saved in the transportation of goods to and from points on these rivers; for instead of rounding the Battery on each journey, they will be able to make a short passage through Dyckman's Cut.

To the building interests the improvement will be of very considerable value, especially to the brick trade. The distance to High Bridge from the North River, at a point where the Spuyten Duyvil Creek joins it, by the present route around the Battery, is 23 miles. When the Harlem River Improvement is completed it will only be 3½ miles, thus saving 19½ miles. The distance from the North River, at Spuyten Duyvil Creek, to 70th street and East River via the Battery is 17½ miles. When the improvement is finished it will be only 9 miles, a saving of 8½ miles. It is estimated that over 2,000,000 tons of merchandise would pass through the new cut annually to points on the East and Harlem Rivers instead of going around the Battery, and that the saving in cost of transportation would be from 20 to 75 per cent., according to the distance saved and the character of the goods to be transported. The shipment of ice from the Upper Hudson to points on the East River is said to be about 500,000 tons annually, and there is no doubt but what most of this would come through by way of the new improvement.

PIER AND BULKHEAD LINES.

The bulkhead and outer pier lines along the improvement will follow those adopted by the Dock Department south of the Third Avenue Bridge. North of that bridge to the Hudson River, the exterior pier and bulkhead lines are to be 400 feet in width, except, of course, at Dyckman's Cut, where the width is only 350 feet.

WHAT IT WILL COST.

The engineers estimate the total cost of the improvement at $2,651,000. Of this only $421,000 has been appropriated by Congress thus far, leaving a sum of $2,230,000 still to be granted. Congressman Ashbel P. Fitch has made active efforts to obtain a further appropriation, and he was assisted in this direction by the late Congressman S. S. Cox. The contract for the excavations at Dyckman's Cut called for the completion of the work by June 1, 1889, but when the writer was there the other day he found the blasting still in progress, and a horde of workmen carting away the rock and clearing the debris. The excavations were commenced in January, 1888, and they had to be suspended for some weeks owing to the blizzard. This, with other difficulties encountered, caused considerable delay, but hardly sufficient to account for the time between June 1st and May 31, 1890, when it is expected that the excavations will be completed, the government having granted the contractor an extension of time till then.

THE LATELY PROPOSED INWOOD SITE.

The boundaries of the contemplated Exposition site at Inwood are shown on the accompanying map. It starts at about 211th street on the north and runs to a point at about 185th street on the south, while it is bounded by the Harlem River on the east and Broadway on the west. The writer drove over the ground recently, and found that from 220th street down to about 200th street, a distance of about a mile, the ground is one stretch of plateau, with an exceptional mound here and there, which could be easily leveled. From about 200th street, southwards, Fort George, a steep and rocky ascent, starts in, and here the ground is about 50 to 70 feet higher than the plateau north of 200th street. This high ground extends as far south as the southerly boundary shown in THE RECORD AND GUIDE's map of this date, and takes in the northerly section of Highbridge Park, from 185th street to its northern boundary. The contemplated boundaries took in about sixty blocks, of larger or smaller dimensions, exclusive of the considerable section of Highbridge Park, described above.

The proposed site is lined on each side by ridges, and capped by a number of fine residences. Commencing at Dyckman's Cut, the estates of the principal property-owners in the neighborhood were driven past in quick succession. First came the house and grounds of Isaac N. Dyckman, who sold the property required for the cut to the government, and whose early ancestor used to be a guide to the British soldiery. The lands which the guide of the last century purchased are now worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Then comes the marble palace of Lawrence Drake, built in 1858, near a quarry from which the marble in the City Hall is said to have been taken. It was formerly known as the John F. Seaman Place. Next comes the extensive estate of Wm. B. Isham, and then the residence of James McCreery. Beyond that is the Hays estate and the James Gordon Bennett property. Nearby, towering above every surrounding object, is the old Richards Place, now owned by Wm. Libby, formerly a partner of A. T. Stewart, who once owned the place. The Ottendorfer Asylum also stands out clearly against the sky.

FORDHAM HEIGHTS.

To the east of the Inwood site, and skirting the Harlem, a number of equally well-known New Yorkers have their summer homes. They live on the elevated ground known as Fordham Heights, which is about a mile from Fordham, on the Harlem Road. Fordham Heights, which is on the line of the New York & Northern Road, is about ten minutes' ride from the 155th street terminus of the elevated roads. Commencing at a point about opposite the northerly boundary of the Inwood site there is the residence of Nathaniel P. Bailey, who, when he was seen the other day driving along Kingsbridge road in a rain shower, looked the very picture of health and strength, despite his four-score years or more. Mr. Bailey is one of the oldest residents hereabouts, and he owns over 100 acres, including about half a mile of water front along the Harlem River. Nearby is the home of Mrs. Horace B. Clafin, with whom her son, John Clafin, now head of the far-famed dry-goods house, has been rusticated during the summer. It is customary, so the neighbors say, for Mr. Clafin to drive down to 125th street and 8th avenue daily, and then take the elevated road down town. Next in order comes the Oswald Cammann estate, part of which was recently sold to Wm. H. Webb, the well-known shipbuilder. Mr. Webb has removed the old Cammann house further north and has turned it into a retreat for aged shipwrights and their wives. He also intends building an academy for the instruction of young men in ship-building, an art much cultivated in England and other European countries, but sadly neglected here. Then comes the property of Mrs. Emma Dashwood, who sold the well-known Berkeley Oval Grounds to that young and enterprising athletic club. Henry W. T. Mall's place comes next, and beyond that Hugh N. Camp's house. Both gentlemen are well known in real estate circles. Lewis G. Morris owns a bewildering quantity of broad acres to the south, including Morris Dock, where the writer noticed James Gordon Bennett's yacht moored, looking for all the world as though she were sighing to be polished up and made use of. Mr. Morris was met here and greeted the writer cordially. Although eighty-two years old he walks like a man twenty years younger, and he is evidently as much interested in work as he was in the days of his youth. The residences of three ladies well known in the neighborhood come next—those of Mrs. R. W. Montgomery, Mrs. Jas. Lees and Mrs. Wm. B. Ogden, the latter of whom is represented by the well-known Andrew H. Green. This brings us down to the ground opposite the southerly boundary of the Inwood site. Below the Heights the Harlem River winds its course, and now and then a single shell makes its appearance, rowed by a member of one of the boat clubs along the river.

RECENT AND PROSPECTIVE.

The most recent phase of the Harlem River Improvement is the letting out for excavation, by contract, within the past few weeks, of 90,000 cubic yards, more or less, just east of the present excavations. The most immediately prospective phase is the contemplated change of the plan to widen the cut at the point south of the present lines of the reverse curve, directly opposite the rolling mills, by running the line as far south as the natural shore of the Spuyten Duyvil Creek. This would enable vessels passing through to turn more freely and give them much more room at that point. The ground required for this purpose comprises about three and a-half acres. It belongs to C. J. Canda and the D. B. Cox estate, and is partly uplands and partly under water.

A RETROSPECTIVE.

It will be of interest, in connection with the above article, to give a brief history of the attempt made some years ago to change the lines of the streets and avenues on part of the section shown in our map.

In 1869 the Central Park Commissioners established the streets and avenues between Inwood and Dyckman streets on the south, the Harlem River and Spuyten Duyvil Creek on the north, the Harlem River on the east and the Hudson River on the west. They were impelled to so establish the streets mainly from the fact that the Dyckman estate, who owned several hundreds of acres within this area, were anxious to sell their lands, and therefore to have the line of the streets, roads and avenues legally fixed upon. They therefore had the territory surveyed, and on November 3, 1869, adopted a resolution laying out the streets, etc., as shown in the map of THE RECORD AND GUIDE published to-day, as being most conducive to the public good. They had a map drawn known as "Adopted map B, No. 14." This map was printed and appeared in the thirteenth annual report of the Central Park Commissioners. Many of the streets and avenues were soon after monumented.

In 1870 and 1871 the Dyckman estate, believing, of course, that these lines were correct, laid out their lands in city lots, which fronted on these streets and avenues. By an oversight, however, the Park Commissioners neglected to file the adopted map referred to in all of the three offices designated as depositories of all such maps. In consequence of this simple but fatal omission the map failed to become finally established by law.

On June 1st, October 14th and November 16th, 1870, the Dyckman estate offered in all 260 acres within the boundaries named, the catalogues showing the streets as laid out by the Central Park Commission. From 1871 until 1884 the map on file in the Department of Taxes and Assessments showed the streets similarly as in the catalogue, and since the Dyckman sale till 1884 all the properties have been sold fronting on the streets and avenues as laid out by those commissioners in 1869.

In 1884 the then Park Commissioners, without any petition from, without notice to, and without knowledge of the property-owners, and for reasons which none of the commissioners have ever yet stated, caused a new map to be made of the district north of Inwood and Dyckman streets, and took steps to finally establish new lines by law. The map ignored most of the streets and avenues shown on the map of 1869, and showed new ones altogether dissimilar in direction.

This aroused the property-owners tremendously, for it would have been disastrous to their lots if the new map became legally established, as it would have left over 300 lots, with a frontage on no street or avenue at all; over 200 lots, with from a few inches to a few feet of depth, and over 100 lots completely bisected. The writer saw a map of the accepted and proposed lines, and at one point, between 206th and 207th streets, no less than twenty-two lots would have been ruined by the change. The property-owners petitioned to have the lines of 1869 restored and have them "finally established by law." In this petition they recapitulated the facts above stated, and showed that the tax and assessment maps had all recognized the map of 1869; that improvements had been made according to its lines; that some of the blocks were injudiciously laid out, being 500x600 in size, and, finally, that not a single person ever asked for the change, and that no one could be found who opposed the restoration of the lines of 1869.

The petition was so clearly just that, after an inquiry into the merits of the case, the Board of Street Opening and Improvement, at their meeting on January 18, 1889, finally adopted the original lines of 1869 by a unanimous vote, and these lines are the same as shown in THE RECORD AND GUIDE's map to-day.

The established grades, it may be added, are from 6 to 10 feet above high water mark on Naegle avenue, about 13 to 16 feet above on Sherman avenue, and from 10 to 21 feet above on Post avenue. The present surface of the ground is about even with high water mark at 3d street up to about Post avenue, and runs as high as 18 feet above tide water on Naegle avenue, 55 feet above on Post avenue and 16 feet above on Sherman avenue, so that a good deal of leveling and raising of ground will have to be done to grade the locality.

THE PARADE GROUND.

In 1873 the Department of Public Parks, under the authority created by chapter 628 of the Laws of 1871, and the Major-General commanding the First Division of the National Guard, selected a parcel of land east of Broadway and bounded in part by the Harlem River for a parade ground, and in 1873 filed a map for that purpose. The streets and avenues were to be closed and the property was to be laid out as a public square, which was to be the parade ground. After filing of the map proceedings were taken to acquire title to the lands to be taken, but they were never completed. They were, in fact, subsequently discontinued voluntarily. That discontinuance was objected to by the property-owners, but it was held to be useless by the courts. The property-owners were subsequently awarded over $200,000 as damages to their property during the time it was being impounded by the city. These damages, with costs, were all paid, and the parade ground thus became non est.

The exact boundaries of the parade ground, from a map filed April 5, 1873, were as follows: On the north by Sherman avenue, commencing at a point 300 feet east of Dyckman street and extending southerly to nearly 211th street for a distance of 2,405½ feet; then running southerly 527 feet to 9th avenue; thence southwesterly 572 to the mean high water line on the Harlem River; thence in a southwesterly direction for 834 feet; thence northwesterly about 1,974 feet, and thence northerly 1,400 feet to the point of beginning. The ground embraced part of every street between 202d and 210th streets; parts of Academy, Emerson and Isham streets, and Naegle, Post and Sherman avenues. It was almost in oblong shape parallel with Sherman avenue, and had a frontage of 2,405 feet on the north, 1,400 on the west, 2,808 on the south and southeast, and about 1,100 on the east, the lines being straight, with the exception of the easterly side, where they ran in angles.

SALES ALONG THE LINE.

The following list of the sales which have taken place during the current year in the region covered by the boundaries of the map published to-day will prove of considerable interest, not only to those who now own property up that way, but to those who may contemplate purchasing thereabouts. As a general guide to values it will no doubt prove of great service. The list is as follows:

The Building Strike Over.

The strike ordered by the walking delegates and ratified by the Central Labor Union, though ended, leaves imprints behind it which are not to be made light of by either the union or the masters. The former have declared, through one of their delegates at least, that it is only an "armed truce" and that some day they will remember the action of the masters who stood out against them. The latter declare that they have shown the weakness of the union when acting in a bad cause, and feel that when the men are with them the delegates have lost their power.

The strike just ended has been different to previous strikes in one thing—it has been a complete route of the union. The latter wanted to hit Peck, Martin & Co. through mason builders and other contractors who are really friendly toward the unions. They had no grievance against these builders and contractors; they conceded that they were employing none but union men and that they were paying these union men the full union prices. Notwithstanding that—and against the wishes of the workmen themselves—they ordered the men out on strike.

Horgan & Slattery, the masons of the Leonard street building, were seen. They said: "We employ all union men. We don't care to have non-union men in our employ."

"Why?" asked the reporter.

"Because," was the reply, "most of the skilled men are in the union."

The building is being erected for John Simmons, from plans by De Lemos & Cordes. It is to be a six-story and basement warehouse, and is up to about the fourth tier of beams. Messrs. Horgan & Slattery are under contract to complete the mason work by December 1st.

When the walking delegate ordered the men out they protested. "We have no grievance," they urged, "against the bosses. You won't pay us while we are out of work. We have our families to support, and we are going back any way."

The delegate told Horgan & Slattery that if they would stop taking brick from Peck, Martin & Co., they would declare the strike off. This they objected to, saying they had contracts with that firm and would "stick" to them.

A prominent master mason was asked whether the Mason Builders' Association could successfully institute a lock-out.

"Yes," was the reply; "by a combination of all the masters a lock-out would result in a defeat for the men, because the masters could hold out and the men couldn't. But we would not take such an extreme measure without our Arbitration Committee resolving upon it as a last resort."

Peck, Martin & Co. were called upon at their North River brick-yards. The trouble arose through their employing non-union as well as union men, and the union wanted to force them into dispensing with their non-union men by boycotting the masons to whom they supplied brick. Mr. Martin said: "We have persistently refused to accede to the demand to employ union men only. In 1887, when we had our great fight with the unions, a number of non-union men came in and worked for us. We have stuck to these men faithfully, as we are morally bound to do, and we feel that it would be a hardship upon them, as well as ungrateful on our part, if we discharged them at the demand of the union. Indeed, we have many men with us who are so satisfied with our treatment of them that they refuse to join the union. 'What is the use of paying money to go in the union, when we are getting the highest prices and being treated well,' they say. We are not fighting the unions, nor have we any desire to do so. We are standing up for a principle. As long as the men do their day's work well, we don't care what they belong to. We have no objection to their joining the union if they wish to do so."

One of the framers on the Leonard and Baxter streets building was asked by a reporter of THE RECORD AND GUIDE if he favored the strike. "No, sir; we didn't want to go out, and I am going to ask the union to pay me for the two or three days I was out of a job. Our delegate ordered the strike without the consent of the union."

"Can he do this on his own authority?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, yes; but it must be afterward ratified by the committee."

One of the workmen on the Union Trust Company's building said: "We didn't want to strike. The boss was treating us all right. They wanted to get at the men who sold the brick."

Work was resumed on all the buildings on Thursday morning, and for the present we have heard the last of the attempt to boycott Peck, Martin & Co. But the antagonism only slumbers.

THE BUILDING MATERIAL EXCHANGE MEETS.

On Tuesday a requisition, signed by fifty members of the above Exchange, resulted in a meeting on the floor at 3.30 P. M., James Rogers in the chair.

Peck, Martin & Co. were requested to make a statement for the enlightenment of the members, so that they could judge as to the merits of the strike.

Mr. Martin, who was present, rose, and in a clear and dignified manner gave a history of the matter, starting from the six weeks' strike in 1887. After hearing his statement the Exchange proposed the following resolution, which was adopted. The resolution is of some interest. We give it below:

Whereas, It appears from the facts presented that no cause exists for, nor is there, any dissatisfaction on the part of any who are in the employ of, or who are in any way connected in employment with or by Peck, Martin & Co.; but from the experience of the firm more than two years ago, as elicited, the trouble is beyond the possibility of Peck, Martin & Co. to correct, if they expect any future possibility of their being allowed to personally manage and conduct their business affairs; that they are now suffering from boycott which may with no more reason be laid against any one or more of our members; that while we recognize the vast importance of trades unions, and believe they are calculated to benefit very materially the different trades that are represented in them—we deprecate the attempting of one or more trades unions who are not in the least affected by any matter under complaint to attempt the solution of a trouble caused by some action over which their trade union had no control.

Resolved, That we denounce as un-American the boycott, and therefore not to be sustained or in any manner encouraged. And the attitude of this Exchange is, that these are matters affecting all our interests, both producers and merchants, and that the influence of the Exchange, as a body, should be exerted in favor of conducting business on the broad principles as laid down by the best authorities on economic subjects, and as guaranteed us the right to do by our constitution, and that the moral support of its individual members should be actively exerted in all questions arising out of the present boycott.

George N. Manchester rose to point out the advantages which would result if a combination of material men took place, and referred to Peck, Martin & Co.'s refusal to join such a combination proposed some months ago.

Mr. Martin explained his position. Lieut.-Col. Smith, John Bell and others also spoke.

A PRAISEWORTHY AGREEMENT.

It is not generally known that the Bricklayers' Union and the Mason Builders of this city have a contract not to order a strike unless first submitting their differences to arbitration. We are enabled to publish a copy of this agreement, which also covers other points. It reads as follows:

NEW YORK, February 21, 1889.

It is hereby agreed to by the Mason Builders' Association, of New York, and the Bricklayers' Unions, Nos. 7, 11, 33, 35 and 37:

(1). That the wages of bricklayers from May 1, 1889, to May 1, 1890, be 45 cents per hour, nine hours on five days of the week, Saturday eight hours with eight hours' pay.

(2). The unions, as a whole, or a single union, shall not order any strike against the members of the Mason Builders' Association, collectively or individually, nor shall any number of union men leave the works of a member of the Mason Builders' Association before the matter in dispute is brought before the Joint Arbitration Committee for settlement.

(3). That no member of the unions shall be discharged for inquiring after the cards of the men working upon any job of a member of the Mason Builders' Association.

(4). That the Arbitration Committee meet on the third Thursday in every month, or at the call of the chair on either side.

(5). Except in case of necessity, no work shall be done between 5 and 6 o'clock P. M. on five days in the week or between 4 and 5 o'clock P. M. on Saturday, and all overtime shall be paid a double rate.

Signed.—A. J. Robinson, chairman; Daniel Herbert, Warren A. Conover, Timothy Mahoney, Edward Franke, members of the Joint Committee of the Mason Builders' Association. Geo. W. Smith, chairman; John Doyle, Benjamin F. King, Louis Aichmann, George Engelhart, members of the Joint Arbitration Committee of the Bricklayers' Unions, Nos. 7, 11, 33, 35, 37.

The Bricklayers' Union should not be confounded with the Central Labor Union. They are two separate organizations.

Statement from Peck, Martin & Co.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

As requested we send you the following memorandum:

The building trades' section of the Central Labor Union having failed in their effort to induce our cartmen and other employes to become union men, applied to us for assistance, intimating that it would save trouble if we should employ only union men.

Upon our declining to interfere they applied to gentlemen to whom we were furnishing materials for their assistance, asking them to induce us to require our men to join the union in order "to save trouble at the jobs."

Failing in this they ordered a boycott, and on Friday, September 27th, stonecutters, housesmiths, hodhoisters, carpenters and others struck work on the building being erected by Mr. David H. King, Jr., for the Union Trust Company. (The bricklayers who do not affiliate with the Central Labor Union did not strike, but could not go on without the other workers.)

The purpose of this strike was to compel Mr. King to purchase material elsewhere under penalty of a complete stoppage of his works, or to coerce us into compliance with their purposes under fear of losing the business. Relying on their ability to inflict pecuniary loss, they seemed not to have considered that the builder they attacked would face any loss rather than violate a contract.

This strike having failed, on Monday the 30th and on Tuesday, October 1st, similar strikes were ordered on two other important buildings with the same purpose and with the same results.

Threats were then made to apply the same procedure to other jobs, but it became evident that the difficulties of the walking delegates increased with each strike, as so many more were added to the number of men thrown out of work and taking no interest in the schemes of the walking delegates, the intelligent workingman having a livelier interest in the amount to be received on pay night than in the schemes of his representatives to increase their power and importance.

On October 3d the strikes collapsed; the men returned to their work.

We conclude that business men dealing with honorable men need have no fears of the boycott. This projectile of these conspirators is not a dynamite bomb but a soap-bubble; the honest workingman's hand is raised against it from behind. Let but the business man's hand be held up before it with courage, and at the touch of either hand it vanishes.

The interest taken in this contest, as expressed in various ways by the Building Material Exchange and other business men should be an encouragement to all who may in the future be similarly attacked.

Respectfully,

PECK, MARTIN & CO.

Our Letter Bag—City Hall Park.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

Your "Impartial Observer" appears to me to have gone somewhat astray for once. What he says about the motives of the newspapers in opposing so bitterly the erection in the City Hall Park of a new municipal building is doubtless true. The papers which have been most strenuous in their opposition to the scheme—the Tribune, Sun and World—are those whose property will be most injured—that is, most obscured by the placing of a large and architecturally fine structure east of the City Hall—while the Times, whose building is too large and too well situated to be obscured, and too handsome to suffer by comparison, has been rather meekly in favor of the present plans of the Sinking Fund Commissioners. The virtuous indignation of the Sun at the erection of the World building on a spot which the city will need ultimately for the terminal facilities of the Brooklyn Bridge has been inspired, doubtless, by the same public-spirited motives, for the petty little Sun building will become supremely contemptible when surrounded by the Tribune and World buildings.

We are agreed, then, that the newspapers have not been altogether disinterested in their campaign against the erection of a new municipal building in the City Hall Park. Such, I believe, was Mr. Christopher Walton's main contention. But it does not follow that because they were disinterested, therefore they were not right. A priori we may be suspicious of any proposition about a public matter which proceeds from interested motives. There is a presumption against the proposition being a wise one; but it amounts only to a presumption. The fact that there are selfish motives behind it, however, primarily affects our judgment only of the people concerned. The proposition must be judged on its own merits. Submitting this test to the proposition made by several of our morning journals, it appears to me that it contains this much truth, viz.: that the new municipal building should not be erected where the commissioners propose and have been empowered to erect it.

My reasons are as follows: New York lacks sorely any buildings of first-class order. She suffers from the fact that, unlike any of the other great cities of the world, she is the seat neither of the State nor of the National governments. Consequently there is no district in the city occupied solely or largely by public buildings, with the exception of that limited area known as City Hall Park, which is surrounded by private structures varying from good to bad and bad to detestable. The massive office building, which private enterprise has put up in the lower part of the city by no means supply this deficiency, for in every one of these buildings the efforts of the designer to make an architecturally complete building have been hampered by the commercial purposes for which the structure was raised. Considering, then, the paltriness of our present city architecture, no opportunity should be thrown away to improve it.

I should regard the erection of the new municipal building on the site at present occupied by the Register's and District Attorney's offices as distinctly an opportunity thrown away. Leaving out of the question the point on which the newspapers have put so much stress—the point, viz.: that it would be folly to deprive our citizens of what little breathing space there is left down town—I would rest my case on the ground that it is due to the dignity and future greatness of New York City that every means should be taken to render her public buildings noble, stately pieces of architecture, to arrange them as symmetrically as may be, to give them conspicuous and imposing positions, and to surround them with as much vacant space as would be possible at so late a period. The new municipal building may and probably will be a handsome piece of architecture; but if placed where the commissioners are empowered to put it, it will be unobscuredly situated, badly set off, and all three of our city buildings will be cooped together in a manner bearable only in a small town where money is of more importance than municipal pride.

What should be done is this: The present City Hall should be torn down, and another one should be erected on very much the same spot, except that it should cover an area enough larger to provide ample accommodations for all the city departments which need room. The only hesitation that I have in making this recommendation is that there would be danger that a plan involving so much patronage and the expenditure of so much money might easily prove to be a mere sink to drain the people's dollars into the politicians' pockets. The other municipal building is a small and poor structure, considering that it cost more than $8,000,000, and our Capitol at Albany is a proof that public buildings can be expensive undertakings, even if Ell Tweed has nothing to do with their construction. This objection, serious but not insuperable, I consider to be the only valid one against my proposition. There is nothing about the present City Hall worth keeping, except the memory of certain features in its construction, which we would do well to avoid in the future. The old building has seen its day. Erected when the city was simply a sea-port town, stretched thinly below Chambers street, it has stood sentinel while New York has become the metropolis of the richest country in the world, and the greatest manufacturing centre in America. But it has served its purpose. Another building should take its place, better fitted to the needs of the present time, more representative of the greatness of the city. I am not so sure but that it would be an economy to tear it down. It covers wastefully a good deal of space, and another building could be put up in its stead two or three stories higher, and with an area proportioned to its height, which every New Yorker could look upon with pride. Further, the park surrounding should be beautified. Special efforts should be made to set the fountain running, and flower beds should be the rule, not the exception. Another obvious improvement would be the removal of the tramps and small boys that at present make the park look like a human pig-sty. This done, and our City Hall Park would be a pleasure to the eye and a delight to the civic pride of every New Yorker.

SUBSCRIBER.

Education and Religion.

Editor RECORD AND GUIDE:

This country claims, as one of its chief factors, its great common school system, by which the masses of the people are given the elements of an education; and certainly, from an intellectual point of view, it has a right to be proud of its results. Our fellow men to-day—the most insignificant ones among them—through reading are able to converse understandingly on the questions of the day, while art and science have found a home in the hearts of our people. But, let us look beneath the surface, we find this system to be an ever-widening field for irreligion. Let us start at the lowest point, the primary class, and we see that at the very introduction to our schools commences tuition in philosophy of fact. The child is taught to disbelieve unless his senses have been fully convinced. He must see and touch, first one ball and then another ball, in order to know that one and one make two. This objective course is considered absolutely necessary in order to help along the child's comprehension of the abstract, but when you add to this training, carried along rigidly throughout the system, ignorant parents, as the majority of the children of New York have, and no religion in our schools, we must see that the result will be a grave disbelief of the very principles of all religions. Our religions cannot give facts as a basis; they must and do rest upon mystery. Then we must ask: "Are our inquiring youths to submit to mystery after years of drilling in disbelief?"

If the system could only carry its students far enough into science this result would be overcome, but the great danger is in that "little learning." They take us just as far as they can prove by fact, and then by force of circumstances we are left to founder in the sea of ignorance. The human body is picked apart by science, science indorsed by fact, until the very matter of life, protoplasm, is reached. This can not be explained, yet we do not find great minds denying this mystery. Why then do they deny the mysteries of religion? Matter is examined to the very limit—atoms. No man can go farther. No one even doubts, much less denies, the existence of atoms, yet men deny the Maker of atoms. Let our people awake from this sluggish sleep to the realization of this state of affairs. If they must be educated let them "drink deeply or taste not." When we see the majority of our children being educated in this way we must say it is time for religion to arise openly and oppose this unconscious teaching of our schools.

On the Real Estate Exchange.

The board met on Thursday afternoon to elect a director and vice-president in place of the late Leonard J. Carpenter. Isaac Fromme proposed Clifford Coddington, and J. Romaine Brown nominated Chas. A. Schermerhorn. On a vote five ballots were cast for the former and six for the latter. Mr. Schermerhorn was therefore declared elected a director. On the motion of H. H. Cammann, Mr. Schermerhorn was nominated for the vice-presidency. This was unanimously agreed to.

The question of having the auction sales on 'Change take place at different hours will, it is said, be brought up for consideration shortly. The object would be to obviate the babel that is created by half a dozen auctioneers offering properties at the same time, which is a great annoyance to buyers, as well as auctioneers, when bidding takes place.

Secretary Cornelius W. Luyster is examining into the most feasible and economical way of increasing the height of the Exchange by one story, and is shortly to forward his report on the investigation to the directors. It is not generally known that there is a "hanging" ceiling to the roof of the building with a height of 6 feet of space not utilized. It is proposed to raise this four or five feet and make an additional story of it for renting purposes. It is estimated that the alterations will cost some $10,000 only, and that the Exchange would get an extra income from this story of about $4,500 per annum. Secretary Luyster has in his possession the original plans of the building and this will enable him to make a report as to the best means of creating the extra renting floor. While he is about it, would it not be advisable for him to ascertain whether the walls will stand two extra stories? A seven-story building in these days is not by any means a high one.

The Exposition Site Committee has accepted, with thanks, the offer of the Exchange to afford assistance in obtaining the names of the owners of the property in the boundaries of the selected site. The Exchange has offered the information without cost to the committee.

New Members.

Herman Rapp, of 198 Broadway, has been proposed as a member of the Real Estate Exchange, by John R. Foley, and Robert E. Holder, of 718 East 177th street, by Frank Yoran.

He was greeted cordially by many of his fellow-members, some of them Democrats. A large number of his political opponents have already written to him promising him their support.

The Board of Street Opening. Meets.
THE COLLEGE PLACE IMPROVEMENT.

The College place extension and widening was yesterday given a long push onward toward accomplishment. The Board of Street Opening and Improvement, rescinded the resolution laying out the lines marked "C" on Engineer Webster's map, and definitely settled, on motion of the Comptroller, upon the lines marked "A" on the map, which the engineer has recommended as being less costly and more conducive to the public good. The Board also adopted a resolution requesting the Commissioner of Public Works to prepare maps and technical descriptions for filing and these are expected to be presented at next Friday's meeting. Proceedings will thereupon be taken to acquire title to the property wanted for the purpose. The lots and buildings that will have to be bought and which will have to be demolished, in part or whole, to make way for the improvement, cover more or less the following sites: Nos. 136 and 138 Chambers street, Nos. 65 and 66 Warren street, Nos. 2 to 66 College place, Nos. 63 and 64 Murray street, Nos. 59 to 64 Park place, Nos. 56, 58, 59, 60 and 62 Barclay street, Nos. 66 to 70 Vesey street, Nos. 180 to 192 and 201 to 229 Greenwich street, No. 234 Fulton street and Nos. 58 and 60 Dey street.

The Elm street widening and extension was not taken up by the board. It was decided to postpone the consideration of the matter till next Friday at 2 P. M. in the Mayor's office, the meeting to be a special one.

James Gordon Bennett, through his lawyer, John Townsend, forwarded a letter protesting against the taking of such a large area for the High-bridge Park. As an owner of forty-five acres in the neighborhood he felt that the assessment for the park was uncalled-for and would prove a burden to many of the property owners. The letter was ordered to be placed on file, and attached to the petition recently sent in by the other property-owners in the vicinity.

The Park Department sent in a petition for the opening of Railroad avenue West, from Morris avenue to East 165th street, a distance of 2,730 feet, and for the opening of Undercliff avenue, from the 23d Ward line to Sedgwick avenue, a distance of 4,560 feet. The board resolved to ask the Corporation Counsel to commence proceedings to acquire title to the ground required.

In the City Departments.

Some half-dozen plans have been received by the committee for the new Municipal buildings. The competition closed last Tuesday.

Taxpayers can commence to make payments on their property by Monday, October 7th. If they wish to obtain a rebate at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum they can do so by paying their taxes on or before November 1st. After that date they will have to pay a penalty of 1 per cent a month.

Exposition Notes.

Francis M. Jencks has issued in circular form a letter addressed to the Mayor, under date of October 1, in which he suggests the expenditure of $5,000,000 by the city on the two museum buildings, thus adding considerable to the exhibit space, as they are five stories high. He says that the city is likely to spend $500,000 per annum on these buildings and that the expenditure of $5,000,000 will only be anticipating outlays during the next ten years on these buildings, and it would practically be a city subscription of $5,000,000 to the Fair. He suggests that the two museums could be connected by a railroad through the transverse road at 79th street, and visitors could be transferred from one to the other in a few minutes.

The Sub-Committee on Buildings have adopted a resolution recommending a definite site from within the boundaries laid down by the General Committee on the 20th ultimo. The grounds are divided, and comprise the Morningside and Riverside Parks, with adjacent lands, including, approximately, the districts bounded (1) by 110th and 113th streets, 5th avenue and Morningside Park; (2) the districts bounded by 108th and 116th streets, Morningside and Riverside Parks; and (3) the districts on each side of the Bloomingdale Asylum grounds, from 116th to 122d streets, the final boundary line to be "subject to such modification as may appear expedient when the compilation of details of ownership and terms of acquisition are complete." The committee recommend that no portion of Central Park be taken, except to "afford amplitude to the grounds and the means of obtaining refreshments and repose." The committee also calls upon all the owners of property within the areas named to inform them on what conditions they will allow the use of their property for the Fair. The committee further state that they have been ready for several weeks to announce the terms of a competition among architects for the principal buildings required, and they ask for authority to advertise for these plans without delay. They yesterday decided to confer with Mayor Grant as to the possibility of condemning lands, if necessary.

A paper addressed to Mayor Grant, favoring the selected site for the World's Fair, is being circulated on the west side for the signatures of residents of the section north of 59th street and west of the park. After setting forth at some length the accessibility and other advantages of the chosen district, it closes with the statement: "We are confident that the selection of this site assures success."

Real Estate Department.

There is nothing new to say about the realty market. The past week has been one in which a great deal of preliminary work has been done, rather than one in which many sales have been consummated. Our reports, however, show that some large transactions have been closed, and the brokers promise numerous reports in the near future. Owners are very firm on prices, and many sales have been upset owing to advances demanded on parcels which the brokers have had for sale.

The auction market has been fairly active, but not satisfactory to sellers, during the week, as will be seen from the summary of the business done from day to day, which follows.

The sales on Monday were few in number and the parcels offered were put up to satisfy foreclosure decrees. A flat on West 16th street, No. 236, was sold at $32,000, the purchasers being the Shaker Society at Mount Lebanon, N. Y., plaintiffs in the action. A stable on East 101st street, at Nos. 205 and 207, went for $28,500, or less than was due to the plaintiff.

On Tuesday three sales were held and the attendance was pretty good. No. 102 East 60th street went for $22,300; No. 40 East 49th street was knocked down at $18,000, and No. 213 East 118th street was secured by Chas. Lockman at $13,000.

Wednesday's sales were fairly numerous and quite important. There was a large attendance, but the bidding was slow and confined to a very few, and the result of the day's business was not satisfactory. The four-story buildings Nos. 104 and 106 West 22d street, on a plot 40x98.9x irregular were started on a bid of $60,000, and notwithstanding the auctioneer declared he had appraised the property at $80,000 for the Sniffen estate the best bid obtained was $67,000. S. Ellis Briggs, the purchaser, represents the estate. An up-town broker told the writer that he could have got $70,000 at private sale, but $85,000 was the figure wanted. A stable on East 41st street, No. 55, belonging to the same estate, was withdrawn on a bid of $36,000, and the dwelling No. 465 Lexington avenue was withdrawn, as no bids were offered therefor. The extra-sized dwelling No. 5 East 57th street was again offered under foreclosure. We say again because in April last it was sold under the same decree. At that time Cornelius O'Reilly became the buyer for Orlando B. Potter at $120,000. Mr. Potter afterwards said his figure for the house had been exceeded and declined to take the property, claiming "it had not been sold subject to a certain restriction which stands against it. The first bid offered on Wednesday was $100,000 and the last $111,000, at which figure the Equitable Life Assurance Society, plaintiffs, became the buyers. The mortgage foreclosed reached over $150,000 and covers other property. New houses on West 61st and East 76th street were also foreclosed and in every instance brought less than the encumbrances.

Thursday was an extremely busy day at the Exchange and the attendance was large. The parcels offered were principally dwellings and flats, and while in a few instances there seemed to be considerable spirit in the bidding in others there was very little bidding and few bidders. At the stand where several West 62d street tenements were offered there were just five persons, and most of them were interested. After one of the houses was bid in the others were withdrawn.

There were no sales held at the Exchange yesterday.

On Tuesday, October 8, H. C. Mapes & Co. will offer fifty-four lots and two cottages in the village of Westchester, near the depot. The property belongs to the Adee estate, and will be auctioned on the grounds at 11 A. M. Should the weather be inclement the sale will take place at the Town Hall of the village. This sale is advertised through red and white posters, quite an innovation by the way.

On Tuesday, October 8, Richard V. Harnett & Co. will sell a lot, about 25x131.7x25x135.1 in size, on 54th street, near 11th avenue.

On Wednesday, October 9, Richard V. Harnett & Co. will sell the new five-story double tenement, with stores, at No. 71 Thompson street, between Spring and Broome streets.

On Saturday next, the 12th inst., at 12 o'clock noon, James L. Wells will sell 108 choice lots belonging to the Briggs estate at Bedford Park, Fordham, in the 24th Ward. The lots are finely situated near the depot, and are only eighteen minutes from 42d street, by the Harlem Road. The property will be sold on the premises.

On Monday, October 21, H. C. Mapes & Co. will sell sixty-five desirable lots on Oak, Elm, Maple and Ash streets and Eastchester road, in the village of Westchester, near the new Morris race course. The sale will take place on the ground at 1 P. M., and if stormy in the Town Hall. The titles are guaranteed.

Chas. Buek & Co. are offering for sale a number of fine apartment and store properties with rents guaranteed for a term of years, as will be seen from their advertisement in another column.

A desirable investment property is advertised by V. K. Stevenson & Co. on another page. It comprises a well-located block front of ten stores on one of the leading avenues on the west side, and is offered on very easy terms. A net income of $19,200 per annum is guaranteed the purchaser, and if desired $200,000 will be allowed to remain on mortgage at 4½ per cent.

Gossip of the Week.
SOUTH OF 59TH STREET.

We learn that applications have been made this week for a large loan on the Bennett building on Nassau street, Ann street and Fulton street, by parties whose names we have not been able to learn, but who are supposed to contemplate the purchase of the property. The building was sold in pursuance of partition orders in June, 1882, to James Gordon Bennett, and a purchase money mortgage, payable June, 1887, for $322,688, was recorded in the same month to James Gordon Bennett, as trustee. On January 10, 1889, another mortgage also to James Gordon Bennett, as trustee, payable in June last, for $131,559, was recorded.

The Catholic Club has purchased from A. S. Rosenbaum six lots, three each on 58th and 59th streets, 225 feet west of 6th avenue, together in size 75x200, for $165,000. Brokers, Lespinasse & Co.

Abraham Wolff, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., has purchased from James J. Coogan the premises on the southwest corner of 8th avenue and 31st street, size 50x100, at $115,000.

The Griswold house on 5th avenue, south of 17th street, No. 91, size 26.3x116.10, has been sold to H. B. Hollins, the banker. We learn the figure was $110,000.

It is stated that E. H. Ludlow & Co. have sold for Hoffman Bros., No. 75 John street, for $75,000.

Short & Wall have sold for J. L. Emanuel the five-story double tenements Nos. 424, 426 and 428 West 53d street, 75x85x100, to P. Pohalski for $75,000.

Mayor Kahn has purchased the four-story brick building No. 9 Coenties slip on private terms.

Mrs. Stillman has sold the four-story stone front-dwelling No. 10 East 43d street. The particulars have not transpired.

Sidenberg Bros. have purchased from Lipman Topnitz the store No. 113 Bleeker street, size 25x100, for $40,000. They recently bought No. 111, adjoining, at $43,000. We hear they will erect a fine store building on the two lots.

Ames & Co. have sold for Abel Gruber, executor, the frame dwelling at No. 451 West 36th street, with lot 25x98.9, to J. H. Havens for $10,000.

We learn that all the offices in the new Fulton and Market National Bank building, on the northwest corner of Fulton and Gold streets and extending to Ann street, are now rented. This speaks well for a district where office buildings are an innovation.

Nathan Fernbacher has sold for Mrs. Mary R. Balken the three-story and basement house No. 131 Norfolk street, for $10,000, to Max Greenwald; the five-story brick flat No. 98 2d avenue, for Peter Schaeffler, for $31,500 to Dr. H. L. M. Metz; and the three-story brick house No. 255 3d avenue, for H. Maack, to John Jay Matthews for $15,500.

F. E. Barnes has sold for Conrad Schlosser to Jacob Bechhold the five-story brick tenement and stores No. 303 East 26th street, 30 feet wide, depth irregular, for $20,750.

Thomas Monaghan has sold two lots on the north side of 43d street, between 2d and 3d avenues, for $22,250, to Josiah T. Gibbs for improvement.

As we go to press we hear that two buildings on the north side of Reade street, east of West Broadway, have been sold for $95,000.

NORTH OF 59TH STREET.

Homer J. Beaudet has sold nine lots on the southwest corner of 8th avenue and 114th street, four on the avenue and five on the street, for $102,500 to Franklin P. Nesbit (formerly of John Nesbit's Sons) for improvement. Mr. Beaudet recently acquired the lots at $95,000. In June, 1887, the same plot changed hands at $63,000. The Beadleston estate were the sellers.

Arnold Lustig has purchased the balance of the Cossitt estate lots at Yonkers. Mr. Lustig's purchase embraces 20-97 acres fronting on Shonard place. The terms have not transpired. At an auction sale of the Cossitt property held on June 4th, thirty-seven plots, embracing about 20 acres, were sold for a total of $82,800.

J. Edgar Leaycraft has sold the three-story brick and stone private dwelling No. 45 West 94th street for Geo. W. Quintard to Edward H. Hawke, Jr., 20x55x100, and for Michael S. Madigan to Mrs. D. A. Honeywell the four-story, high stoop, brown stone private dwelling No. 65 West 184th street, 20x55x100, both on private terms.

The entire block bounded by the Boulevard and West End avenues, 104th and 105th streets, and comprising about twenty lots, which was this week transferred by Beck & Runk to Geo. Kingsland at $185,000 has, we hear, been resold in four parcels to builders for immediate improvement. Donald Mitchell bought the six lots on the northeast corner of West End avenue and 104th street, four on the avenue and two on the street, for $58,000, and Samuel K. McGuire the five on the same avenue, corner of 105th street, at $51,000.

The four-story dwelling No. 1 East 62d street, has been sold by the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company to Col. Wm. Carey. The terms have not transpired. Brokers, V. K. Stevenson & Co.

NEWARK, N. J.—The temporary suspension of activity in Newark building circles during August and the early part of September has ceased. The number of plans filed during the last week of September is surprisingly large. All the prospects point to a continuance of the good business enjoyed last winter and spring. The architects speak hopefully and say that their hands are full of work, not, however, of the best class. In this, as in other respects, the market is similar to that which prevailed last season. The houses range small, are built of wood, and not infrequently are the work of the building and loan associations. There is little or no alteration going on in the built-up portions of the city. All the improvements are making in the outer wards. The single feature of the structures at present being put up is a four-story apartment house by Mrs. Theodore Prieth—one of the first of its kind in Newark. It is to be erected on the corner of Springfield avenue and High street, from plans by Swinnerton & Poole, and at a cost of about $28,000. It is a question to the real estate dealers in Newark whether the departure will prove profitable. There are five rooms in each suite, and they are evidently intended for people in moderate circumstances. A well-informed property-owner was heard to express himself very doubtfully on the success of the experiment. Apartment houses and high tenements were not, in his opinion, needed in Newark. Land was comparatively cheap, and families did not need to huddle themselves in a small number of large buildings. Consequently it was very uncertain whether there would be sufficient demand within the area to fill the houses.

The following is a list of the plans filed at the office of the Building Superintendent since September 25th: Richard Hathendale, Nos. 215 and 217 Ferry st, two 3-sty fr tenem'ts and flats, 34x56, with extension; F. Special Notices.

The Dyckerhoff brand of cement has achieved a wide reputation for uniformity, strength and firmness. These are the qualities which place it in the front rank of cements imported into the United States, and its use in some of the principal buildings in New York and elsewhere is a strong testimony of its superiority. Among these buildings are those of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, the United States Trust, the Farmers Loan and Trust and the Union Trust Companies; the Bank of America, the Metropolitan Opera House, the Edison Electric Light, the New York Times, the New York World, Puck, and the Metropolitan Telephone and Telegraph Company. The Dyckerhoff cement was also used, after a severe test, on the Statue of Liberty. The sole agent for this brand of cement in the United States is E. Thiele, of No 78 William street, and it is also sold by all the leading dealers in building materials in New York and Brooklyn and every important city in the Union. Mr. Thiele has issued a pamphlet showing tests of strength made of this cement, which are forwarded on application, including testimonials from eminent engineers, architects and others.

We are in receipt of a handsomely prepared pamphlet containing many illustrations published by the Raritan Hollow and Porous Brick Company. It is claimed in this pamphlet that hollow burnt clay bricks and porous terra cotta have alone stood the tests required of fire-proof building material. This material, when properly manufactured, not only resists intense heat, but withstands the sudden contraction caused by throwing water upon it when in a hot condition, whereas granite when subjected to the same treatment, breaks to pieces, and unprotected iron soon loses its tensile strength. The pamphlet shows in detail the various adaptations to which the porous brick can be put.

It is not generally known that the flag-pole on the top of the Equitable Life Assurance Society's building is 106 feet high and two-and-a-half tons in weight. This information was gleaned from a talk with John F. Walsh, Jr., the contractor who supplied the pole to the building and placed it in position for D. H. King, Jr. Mr. Walsh has supplied many of these flag staffs to buildings, as well as the lesser-sized clothes-poles used in so many houses. He has also made a specialty of brewers' work and caulking. His office is at No. 350 West street, corner of Clarkson street.

The John Trageser Steam Copper Works is doing a large business this year. They supply copper work for plumbers, brewers, distillers, sugar houses, hotels, chemical works, etc., and manufacture the celebrated American galvanized iron boilers, copper bathing tubs, sinks, etc. They make the lining of tanks in buildings a specialty. Their works is at Nos 447 to 455 West 26th street, and they have been established since 1850. They have a down town office at No. 35 Ferry street, and can be communicated with at both places.

How to Draw a Contract.

An invaluable work for all dealers in realty is found in "The Guide to Buyers and Sellers of Real Estate," by Counsellor Geo. W. Van Siclen.

BUILDING MATERIAL MARKET.

BRICKS.—For Common Hards the market continues on a comparatively even keel, and there is again an absence of anything very stirring to report. Demand has shown no unusual force or anxiety and may have even been reduced somewhat by the attempt of the walking delegate demagogues to boycott leading dealers in material, but the supply ran light enough to fairly counterbalance any slowness on the part of buyers, and it is a question if the tone is not even a trifle firmer at the close, especially on really fine and attractive goods. Manufacturers have been slow shippers and it is thought quite unlikely they will put forth any special effort to change their methods, for the present at least. In the Up-river district there has been considerable dissatisfaction over prices for some time, and instead of loading brick vessels were sent off in search of other freight, a move, to be sure, not very successful, yet it of course curtailed the volume of offerings here. A great many manufacturers, too, at nearly all points have not felt entirely contented with the amount of stock under the sheds and seemed to look upon an addition to that accumulation as probably quite as safe as an attempt to seek a market here. Locally, we understand that, with few exceptions, there is nothing being carried beyond immediate wants, and as consumption appears likely to go right along, the promises are healthy. For Pales there is a steady market and a good exhaustive demand at former rates.

CEMENT.—The comparatively disorganized condition into which the market for foreign cement was forced during the early portion of the summer by the unexpected heavy importation seems to have happily disappeared and matters now look much more promising. Demand was at no time lacking and occasionally it had considerable force, but for a long while stock came pouring in with such volume as to overbalance the outlet, and notwithstanding the fact that a great deal of the stuff lacked the merit of fully established reputation it carried an adverse influence even upon popular goods. After a while, however, Continental shippers commenced to forward with less freedom, and then came the London strikes to entirely shut off exports from that locality, affording just the relief needed here, the result of which is that importers have been enabled to clear out all the surplus in first hands, and indeed for that matter could have worked off a larger quantity, especially on orders from interior customers, some of whom have endeavored to insure themselves by engaging a number of invoices to arrive, and are already manifesting quite a little impatience to ascertain when deliveries are likely to be made. Values have not advanced except where special brands were insisted upon but cost is well maintained, and there is a hope that no reaction will take place again during balance of the year unless over-importation should take place. There has been no modification of ocean freight charges, which is an advantage to sellers. Domestic Cements are also doing better. We notice a little irregularity at times in the run of quotations, but it is only the usual difference over quality and brand, while quite generally the reports indicate an increasing movement with a little hurry in the call from custom at the more distant dependent points. Except in the matter of favorite makes, manufacturers quite generally appear able to promptly meet the calls made upon them.

HARDWARE.—Business generally is improving for all kinds of staple goods, and builders' hardware has a full proportionate share in the movement both on local and out of town orders. Buyers are a little adverse to anticipating the future freely, yet many seem to feel justified in departing slightly from the close hand-to-mouth policy so long noticeable. The fuller trade and the increased cost of material has had a strengthening and stimulating effect upon values and more recent changes were in sellers' favor. Machine bolts are up some $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 per cent. Strap and T hinges are firmer generally; iron pipe fittings cost about 5 per cent. more, and an advance of $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ c. per pound is announced for nuts and washers, with a small upward turn on cordage. There is a new list for wrought iron pipe at an advance of $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 per cent., and the discounts are as follows: $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch and smaller black pipe, 50 per cent.; $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch and larger black pipe, 62½ per cent.; $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch and smaller galvanized pipe, 42½ per cent.; $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch and larger galvanized pipe, 50 per cent.; $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch and smaller tarred pipe, 50 per cent.; $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch and larger tarred pipe, 62½ per cent.; well casings, all sizes, 55 per cent.; lap-welded charcoal iron boiler-tubes, $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch and smaller diameter, 50 per cent.; lap-welded charcoal iron boiler-tubes, 2 inches and larger diameter, 55 per cent.; lap-welded steel boiler-tubes, 30 per cent.

LATH.—Receivers of stock coastwise are evidently disappointed, and, indeed, admit it. Arrivals from what they call regular sources, that is Maine and the provinces, have not been very liberal, and with nothing else available the market could no doubt have been stiffened somewhat, but another considerable bunch of stock from the Northward has come down the river and kept the advantage mainly in buyers' favor, with a widening out in the range of prices. Thus, while we have reports of Eastern stock at $2.10 to $2.15 per M, the Canadian goods sold down as low as $2.05, $2.08 and $2.10 per M, and filled a great many gaps where buyers were not compelled to handle the standard grade. Dealers' accumulations are said to be moderate.

LUMBER.—Distribution of stock is increasing in volume and spreading somewhat in the assortment handled with natural results to be found in the more cheerful tone noticeable among the trade. The demand from dealers and manufacturers may be considered as also on the increase, with general promises for the balance of season good. A great many are getting considerable stock direct, bought at primary points, especially inland, but certain buyers depend upon the offerings here, and a portion of the supply is sold only through local agencies to which all must resort; the progress of the season is leading up to the natural and necessary investment. Of the ordinary run of standard goods there appears to be quite enough to satisfy the present call, here and there a little too much, but the chances for getting specials is in some cases very slim, and extreme values thereon are asked.

Eastern Spruce is one of the varieties upon which particular strength and confidence are claimed for the best goods. The supply of desirable logs in the Provinces has for some time been very low with some of the mills refusing to take further orders and even fancy bids would be no assurance of getting a supply, while upon the more ordinary run of stock there is a reflected measure of strength, and receivers quite generally talk in cheerful strain. Nor do buyers interpose any positive contradiction, as they cannot well conceal the fact that supplies are wanted, and when found the bids generally come out full and sharp. The outside trade too is something of a competitor and compels local dealers to remain on the alert for cargoes as they may desire for stock.

Piling still appears to be handled so judiciously as to prevent any disturbance of the generally healthy tone of the market, and the fluctuations are of a minor and unimportant character. Work in hand and work projected indicate a satisfactory outlet as against supplies accumulated, and the belief in comparatively moderate amounts to come is retained by those who ought to be well posted.

Hemlock moved along in about the usual channel and reports of unsatisfactory trade and tameness in values are generally balanced by those who claim and frequently verify a good run of orders with some sales ahead of production and ability to deliver until well toward the close of the regular season. There is, however, no actual scarcity of hemlock and the extreme line of values named is as a rule based principally upon something extra in the way of quality.

White Pine is coming to hand with some freedom at times, and going into stock, which in conjunction with occasional fresh sales making is sufficient evidence that the wood has a pretty good foothold yet. Indeed, now and then an operator may be found inclined to become quite indignant at any suggestion to the contrary, but they are the exception and reflect merely a personal desire or interest, as there is no doubt that other woods are holding their own very well as competition for certain consumptive demands to which white pine was formerly the principal contributor. On values a fairly steady tone seems to be preserved without much difficulty, but no special advance is talked of, owing to the multiplicity of sources from which supplies seem to be offering.

Yellow Pine retains a generally good market, and while probably no great amount of random stuff would be desirable at the moment, most agents appear to be booking a satisfactory number of orders, including those who are bringing stuff forward by rail. There is also quite a little trade to be picked up on f. o. b. orders Southern port shipment at quite as full rates as for some time past, though a scarcity of tonnage is in a few instances causing a delay. The local distribution from yard is very satisfactory, and dealers continue to act together in the matter of prices.

This pamphlet, of only fifty-six pages, offers a complete solution of all the complicated questions that arise in drawing contracts. It discusses questions of titles, liens, curtesy and dower rights, deeds, searches, etc., and contains forms of contracts and judicial decisions which, with other general information, will go far towards making every man his own lawyer. It tells all about fixtures, assumption of mortgages, apportionment of rents, description of property, terms of payment, damages for failure to carry out contracts, information on setting aside contracts for mistake or fraud, and forms of deeds. it is adapted, continues to do well enough and would appear to have a market thoroughly satisfactory to manufacturers, according to the tenor of current reports. There is, however, no animation beyond the relative position it has for some time occupied, and any lapse in the quality of production brings immediate and pronounced complaint.

Hardwoods meet with a very fair call from consumers who may be considered as regulars, and also secure a measure of new trade, yet not enough to stir up animation or alter the general complexion of the market. Indeed, a great many of even the small manufacturers seem to have learned the trick of going into the interior to select supplies, and direct receipts are continually interfering with those who seek to place bulk lots by local offerings, the same feature prevailing upon a more extensive scale in the negotiations with dealers. As a rule the range of prices remains about as before, the minor fluctuations advised not being sufficient to change quotations.

Shingles are without new feature of decided character. Demand from home and export sources continues fair, and while at times a little erratic in development is easy to manage. Offerings satisfy the call but cannot be reached until full bids are made.

GENERAL LUMBER NOTES.

THE WEST.

The Northwestern Lumberman as follows:

In the West there have lately been some signs of improvement in certain lines of demand. The car factories are taking in more lumber than earlier in the year. There is renewed life in the railroad timber and tie trade. Handlers of such material in this city are now doing a business that reminds them of former periods of activity. This is a good sign, as indicating that the dullness in railroad improvement is passing away—a significant fact in favor of the trade in forest products. It is to be noticed that some of the leading companies are making heavy purchases of steel rails—the Union Pacific to the extent of 40,000 tons—and that prices of that product have recently advanced. This shows that there is a better feeling in railroad circles. Freight cars all over the country are in short supply, on account of the heavy freights that are being moved. While this discommodates the shippers of lumber, they can take some comfort out of it in the knowledge that it means greater railroad earnings, an increase of improvement, and consequently a better demand for timber and finer lumber.

The prospect is that many of the mills on the lakes will be shut down earlier this year than usual. The manufacturers at Saginaw and Muskegon particularly are dissatisfied with the year's results. The market for bulk stock has been too slow, and profitable prices hard to obtain. It is likely that this mood will check any tendency to oversupply next year, and thus induce a favorable reaction in the market.

On the cargo market at Chicago, though the demand for piece stuff is relatively greater than that for common and cull inch, prices hang at about the same figure as has hitherto prevailed, namely, $9 for short lengths, $9.35 when a sprinkling of long is in the cargo, and $10 for lots of all over 20 feet in length. One commission man this week reports a sale of 1,000,000 feet of Menominee piece stuff, to arrive, at $9.25 for short, and $10 for all over 30 feet. When this sale was reported it made the other dealers roll their eyes in a queer sort of a way. Evidently they thought there was a quirk in the report that made it a subject of investigation before it could be fully relied on. Judging by the frequent inquiries for piece stuff, it is probable that the market is slightly stronger than it was.

Since coarse inch is not in special demand, it would be out of the question to suppose that prices should show any more strength than in recent weeks. One dealer, who sold 600,000 feet of Chequamegon Bay stock, refused to say anything about the price. The same cut has sold hitherto at $11 a thousand.

There is a general complaint of a lack of good lumber in offerings. Such stock has been mostly bought at the mills to go East.

The Timberman as follows on the Chicago yard trade:

Trade with Eastern points continues light, though numerous inquiries from that direction are reported. Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri are consuming the greater part of the lumber that is going out of the Chicago market.

The new list is not doing much in the way of stiffening up prices, although here and there are found evidences of its good effects. But most dealers are selling lumber for what it will bring, and if they can get more than list prices for it, so much the better. Such good fortune is seldom met with, however, the average probably being from seventy-five cents to a dollar less than list price. This is not as it should be, for the list represents what the dealer really ought to get.

Long joist may also turn up wanting in the spring. Firms that have heretofore held big stocks in this line, and were willing to shade prices considerable in order to sell, are now asking their neighbors for them.

Twelve-inch common boards, 10 and 12, 18 and 20 feet, are not any too plentiful, but they only bring $15 to $16.

Piece stuff shows a little firmer feeling, and most that is sold brings $11.50, with once in a while a lot going for $11.

A careful review of the present condition of the hardwood market shows a fairly good trade in most lines, although values on all stock worth $25 and upwards are probably from $1 to $2 lower than in the spring. The demand for interior finishing is keeping up well, and some say is increasing. This forms the most profitable portion of the hardwood dealers' trade at present, although furniture men are buying quite freely. But the latter are satisfied with the cheaper grades, and it is on these that prices are weakest.

As to the condition of stocks, there is but little trouble in getting all the demand requires. Of course, the usual scarcity of firsts and seconds cherry remains, but that is chronic and no one expects it to be otherwise. Thick ash, especially 16-foot plank, is not as plentiful as it might be, and the same can be said of hickory for wagon tongues, axles, etc.

Of the higher priced woods mahogany is undoubtedly the leader, and its friends claim the demand is increasing. The stock in this city is quite low at present, but there is enough for all immediate wants, and new supplies are rapidly coming in. Prices range from 15 to 18 cents a foot, with the exception of counter tops, on which no definite price can be quoted.

Rosewood comes next in point of demand and quite a little is being sold at 65 cents. Other fancy woods are in but little demand.

There is but little use in repeating the fact that quartered white oak is the favorite finishing stock, for every one knows this so well already. Plain red oak holds its own both as to demand and price.

One hardwood dealer sold 175,000 feet of firsts, seconds, and common walnut to Eastern dealers for export.

Dealers in maple flooring have caught the export fever, and there seems to be little difficulty in persuading foreign dealers and consumers to buy this stock. Rumor has it that one manufacturer has an order for 2,500,000 feet, which is to be dressed, matched, and bored. Another dealer has a possible order for 1,500,000 feet for the same class of stock.

A dispatch from Bay City, Mich., says:

The shipments of forest products from the ports of Saginaw River for the month of September were the smallest in a number of years, showing a heavy decline compared with the same period last year. This is accounted for by a dull Eastern market, and the encroachment of Southern timber on the Northern markets, as well as a brisk trade in the upper lake country. The shipments from Bay City were 33,460,000 feet lumber, 12,932,000 shingles, 1,270,000 lath, 200,000 hoops. From Saginaw, 19,645,000 feet lumber, 3,550,000 shingles and 750,000 lath.

The Mississippi Valley Timberman as follows:

The last of September is ominously near and dealers all over the West are beginning to realize that the period which usually measures the fall trade, is nearly at a close. They cannot reasonably expect more than a month or six weeks additional of active demand, and will undoubtedly congratulate themselves if the volume of trade is up to the present standard and does not fall away before the ides of October. It is difficult to disguise the fact that trade has not shown the vigor which it was expected would be the case, and despite the fact that there has been a large reduction in production, as compared with prior seasons—particularly in the Mississippi valley—stocks are everywhere large. This circumstance is not calculated to make manufacturers and dealers particularly happy, nor has it been possible to find in any excuse for an advance either large or small in prices. Values have apparently struck a dead level, and any change must necessarily be an improvement for the better.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Timber Trades Journal as follows:

LONDON.

Black Walnut, Whitewood, Oak, etc.—We have not heard of anything important in the way of sales having taken place lately in either of the above descriptions, but we shall now expect to see a good amount of trade doing.

LIVERPOOL.

American Walnut.—Very little still comes forward, and none of it is of prime quality.

American Whitewood moves away very slowly, only prime large logs being wanted. There is still some demand for planks, the stocks of which are getting reduced.

GLASGOW.

United States Walnut and Whitewood logs have arrived in considerable quantities lately, and comprise prime parcels. There has been about the same amount of walnut imported this year as last (2,500 logs or thereby), but less whitewood, the imports this year being 950 logs, against 1,400 logs for corresponding period last year.

NAILS.—Not much change shown. Buyers continue to calculate closely to every requirement, and the movement is a little erratic in consequence, but the general volume of trade tends to swelling proportions, and the season is progressive. Supplies are under control and firmly held. We quote at $1.85@1.90 per keg for car lots, and $1.95@2.00 per keg for parcels from store.

PAINTS, OILS, ETC.—The general market is commented upon favorably and cheerfully, and the selling side is satisfied with present and prospective conditions. Interior custom furnishes the largest outlet but there is a good call from city and suburban sources a little beyond calculation if anything. Prices on all leading and staple grades are well sustained. Linseed Oil in good average demand, closing at 58@58½c. for Western, and 60@61c. for City. Spirits Turpentine has shown moderate animation and fractional irregularity, with tendency mainly in sellers' favor. We quote at 48@49c. per gallon, according to quantity, delivery, etc.

TAR AND PITCH.—Demand has been somewhat better from regular sources, and the tone of the market stiffened a trifle, though without changing the general line of cost. We quote Pitch at $1.40@1.50 per bbl.; Tar at $2.62½@2.87½, according to quantity, quality and delivery.

MORTGAGES.

NOTE.—The arrangement of this list is as follows: The first name is that of the mortgagor, the next that of the mortgagee. The description of the property then follows, then the date of the mortgage, the time for which it was given, and the amount. The general dates used as headings are the dates when the mortgage was handed into the Register's office to be recorded.

Whenever the letters "P. M." occur, preceded by the name of a street, in these lists of mortgages, they mean that it is a Purchase Money Mortgage, and for fuller particulars see the list of transfers under the corresponding date. Whenever the rate is not given, read as 6 per cent.

The stock market for the past week has been wholly under the influence of temporary shifting conditions. There has been no change in the general business prospects. Iron is still strong; railroad returns are still increasing; we shall apparently get good prices for our large wheat crop, and the enormous cotton and corn crops are well harvested. Yet such is the public shyness, that prices for stocks are wholly in the hands of traders, and a trader's market is as uncertain and two-faced as the wayward sea itself. The selling of Atchison—that bête noir of Wall street—and the Trust stocks generally has depressed the whole list. Neither is there any immediate prospect that these “fancies” will be put upon such a basis and that they will cease to threaten the more fortunate line of securities. The sudden increase in Atchison's earnings puts the company on a better footing; but until some scheme of reorganization is devised that will at once reduce the fixed charges and gain the approval of the bondholders, the stock will doubtless keep on making small gains and large losses until the bottom is reached, wherever that will be. The same is true of sugar and cotton oil. Just so long as the affairs of these combinations are surrounded in obscurity, so that an investor or speculator cannot be sure whether he is buying a valuable or valueless security, just so long will these wild and meaningless fluctuations take place. These combinations ought to be compelled to list their securities on the penalty of a withdrawal of the present facilities for dealing in them. As too many people are aware there are enough dangers to be overcome in Wall street speculation, every effort ought to be made to lessen them, so that judgment might count for something. As it is what is not known about the Sugar Trust would make a large and interesting volume, while what is known is limited to the two figures representing the market value of the certificates. It is a pity that this first movement towards dealing in industrial securities should tend to discredit them. Evidently, they are in the market to stay; but their place cannot be said to have been made secure until the confidence of investors is secured by the removal of the present thimble-rigging of the certificates.

We have already received several communications suggesting amendments to the law governing the erection of buildings in this city, as invited in our columns of last week's issue. The revision now in progress will probably be the last one for many years to come, and as the gentlemen who have this matter in hand desire that New York shall have the model building law of the world, as liberal and as fair in its provisions as the public safety will admit, all persons whose experience or observation enables them to suggest beneficial changes should send to THE RECORD AND GUIDE their contribution of ideas for the general good. The subject is well worth the immediate attention of architects, builders and all others interested in real estate improvements.

The interviews with Mr. Edison concerning the Paris Exposition emphasize what has been said many times in these columns as to the folly of the P. T. Barnum “greatest-show-on-earth” idea of a World's Fair which prevails just now as to our own Exposition; and, incidentally, what the inventor said makes the proposition to scatter the buildings in different parts of the city, instead of concentrating them on one spot, worthier of careful consideration. In substance Mr. Edison said that the Paris Exposition is too large to be as instructive to visitors as it might be, and the buildings being grouped, too great a crush results for comfort. Both are serious objections to any arrangement, and both, especially the latter, could be obviated by placing the several chief buildings in different parts of the city. The idea may clash with preconceived ideas of what a Fair should be, but, nevertheless, a little consideration will show that such an arrangement would possess many material advantages.

The discontent shown by the public because the Finance Committee of the Exposition did not at their meeting this week report a complete plan for raising the necessary funds is not well founded. No possible good can come from formulating a plan merely for the sake of having some plan. What is needed is the plan; an intelligent plan that will receive the approval of citizens and meet and adequately meet the necessities of the Exposition. Before this can be done it is absolutely essential, as we have more than once pointed out, that the question of site should be completely settled, and the exact character of the Exposition, the size of the buildings and the nature of their surroundings determined. In other words, a clear idea of what has to be provided for must be reached before the Finance Committee can act in a business-like way. It must be plain to everyone, that unless the Finance Committee do act in a business-like way the money required, wherever else it may come from, will not come from the public.

It is not necessary to point out to anyone who is well informed on the situation that the question as to site is not completely settled and the exact character of the Exposition and the size of the buildings has not been determined. The Site Committee, so far, have merely named a site; it is not even prospectively in their possession. Without the Bloomingdale land the site they have “named” is admittedly valueless, and the trustees of Bloomingdale say they cannot relinquish the land they occupy in time for the Fair. Moreover, there are the property-owners on the site to be dealt with. Because a few of the wealthier have already come forward and lent their property for the purposes of the Fair, it is not to be inferred that all will do so. There are many property-holders who could not, even if they would, donate their land. What proportion do these bear to the whole? This question cannot be answered too quickly.

All this is not to say that the site cannot be obtained. But it is merely describing the situation adequately to say that the site has not yet been obtained though it has been “named.” Obviously, until it is with some degree of certainty, prospectively at least, in the possession of the Site Committee, the Finance Committee cannot intelligently approach the problem before them. The same remark applies to the character of the Exposition and the size of the buildings. It would be simply absurd for the Finance Committee to make public any statement tantamount to this: “We have become possessed of a vague idea that some sum between fifteen and twenty millions may perhaps be needed. Exactly for what we do not know, nor whether for buildings only or for a land speculation, and on this basis we ask the enthusiastic public to send in as large subscriptions as possible.” The demand of the public should be: “Settle the site question, determine what the character and the extent of the Exposition are to be. If this be done wisely the money will be forthcoming.” Let the first thing be decided first.

Thomas A. Edison, in an interview published in the Sun, passed two criticisms upon the Paris Exposition, which merit consideration from the management of the Fair of 1892. He thought that the machinery was scattered about too much, and one who wished to see it all had to do a good deal of needless walking; secondly, he regretted the lack of such a thing as a “live industrial process.” Provided the facts are true, these criticisms are certainly well taken. It does not admit of any doubt that so far as possible all the machinery in the Exposition ought to be seen actually at work. Its utility is increased a thousandfold thereby. The objections to thus forcibly presenting to the observer the actual life of an industrial process would arise, first, from the large expense which it would entail, and, secondly, from the deafening noise it might create, provided all the machinery is to be located in one hall. The first criticism opens a far wider question—the question, viz.: Whether it would be the more effective to locate, as has been the custom, all the machinery in one enormous room, or to make the exhibits by trades, and have the machinery appertaining to each trade contiguous to the trade exhibit, so that one could throw light upon the other.
